New Civilian Slaughter Reported to Pentagon

CIVILIANS SAFE FROM ARMY TRIAL

WASHINGTON (WP) — Legal experts in Washington have concluded on the basis of two Supreme Court decisions that a civilian cannot be tried by a military court.

It would follow, therefore, that those accused in participating in the alleged massacre at My Lai village on March 16, 1968, who are no longer in the armed forces would not be liable for military prosecution.

These experts also agree that a civilian trial would have to take place in Vietnam. Since no extradition agreement exists between the United States and South Vietnam, it appears that they would not be liable in civilian jurisdictions either.

Oil Drilling Ruled Out For Straits

By JOHN MIKA

Fisheries Minister Jack Davis today said he expects oil companies to drop plans of exploring Juan de Fuca Strait and the Gulf of Georgia because of his warning that oil drilling would be vetoed.

He made the statement to the Times in a telephone interview from Ottawa, emphasizing that the Gulf Islands would be preserved as a recreational area because of overwhelming economic considerations.

'Banned As Long As I'm Here'

He said his department would ban drilling in the sheltered waters between Vancouver Island and the mainland for the "forseeable future" — then added that meant so long as he was minister.

He said that some future minister "might fall back" from that position but he would not because he could not visualize any circumstances that would alter the clear indication that drilling would conflict with public interest.

He revealed that seismic exploration was completed last month in Juan de Fuca as well as continuing in Georgia Strait.

The Juan de Fuca operation was carried out by Teneco Oil and Minerals Ltd., a Canadian subsidiary of a major oil exploration company which also is conducting tests off Newfoundland and Labrador.

Seismic Tests Not Harmful

Davis said the Texaco Oil Company is carrying out Georgia Strait seismic work and Canadian Pacific Oil and Gas Company, an affiliate of the Canadian Pacific Railway, has completed its program. Union Oil Company also has carried out seismic tests in sheltered areas off the Queen Charlottes.

Davis said the seismic tests, which do not involve underwater explosions in modern techniques, were permitted because they are not harmful but drilling was another matter entirely.

"All the seismic permit work was to be completed in 1969 and whether they've got any (oil) indications or not, they've been given fair warning now.

"I would estimate the companies have spent about $500,000 so far but I doubt that there would be much more money spent in view of the warning."

He said the situation was made clear during a question period Tuesday in the House of Commons when Mines, Energy and Resources Minister J. J. Greene re-iterated that no drilling permits would be issued without the normal routine of obtaining the fisheries department's recommendation.

During the House of Commons question period, Davis said that he and Greene had agreed "no drilling permits will be granted as long as there is any danger, not only to the sports and commerical fisheries, but also to the entire ecology of that (Gulf Islands) area."

Danger to Sport Fishing

Davis told the Times that his department had studied the matter carefully and determined there was a decided danger posed by oil drilling to the commercial and sports fishery valued at about $300 million a year.

This has resulted in a decision to recommend rejection if any oil company applies for drilling permit and Davis said he had been "assured by Mr. Greene" the fisheries' department advice would be followed.

"This amounts to a veto power although we have no jurisdictional veto," he said.

"We're not rejecting offshore drilling out of hand," he said. "For instance, if oil was found on the Grand Banks of Newfoundland, that would be great boost to the economy of the Atlantic region.

"So, it's a matter of assessing the relative values.

"The Gulf Islands are essentially a recreational or park area. (Allowing inshore drilling) is like having an oil well in Banff National Park. It makes no sense."

Davis said the possibility of discovering a relatively minor oil basin under the straits would not bring lower oil prices to consumers and would offer "the possible gain of only a small number of jobs."

But, on the other side, it could disturb the lucrative recreational value of the area and even destroy a good part of it if an oil well leak developed.

"What's the recreational value of the gulf with a scum of oil on it?" he asked.

The minister said upwards of $100 million annually is involved in the area's commercial fishery but most people did not realize this was the smaller item.

"The sports fishery is worth at least double that," he said. "And then there's the problem of navigation (posed by oil rigs and possible leakages in a major seaway.)"

Davis said the possible economic benefits of developing an inshore oil industry weighted against its cost to the public is totally unbalanced and demands rejection.

"There's just no question that the public interest would say this risk (of oil pollution) is not worth taking, even if it was only a one-in-a-hundred

'Villagers Killed For Practice'

Times News Services

WASHINGTON—The Pentagon today is investigating an alleged second mass murder of unarmed South Vietnamese civilians by American soldiers, according to a member of the House of Representatives.

"In brief, it is a shocking report of a company commander of the Ninth Infantry who ordered his men to use village huts for target practice," Rep. Lionel Van Deerlin (D—Cal.) said today.

"When the occupants came streaming out of the huts they were shot down, many of them in the same manner as we've been told occurred at Song My." (Song My is also known as My Lai.)

New Incident In Mekong Delta

He said the alleged slaughter of civilians by Americans, similar in many aspects to an incident in March of 1968 which has resulted in charges of murder being laid against First Lieut. William J. Calley Jr., took place last summer in the Mekong Delta area. The village, he said, is known as Dong Tam.

Van Deerlin said an army medical captain reported the incident after he had heard about it from an orderly who claimed to have witnessed the murders.

Defence department investigators, he said, have talked with the officer.

Van Deerlin said there was no report of the number of casualties and he would not reveal the names of the company or the company commander involved.

He said the medical captain first reported the alleged incident to his parents, who informed Van Deerlin. Subsequent to the My Lai incident, he said, he passed the information to the Pentagon.

The White House today issued an official statement on the alleged massacres calling them "abhorrent to the conscience of all the American people."

Press Secretary Ronald L. Ziegler, making it clear he spoke for President Nixon and the administration, said steps "will be taken to assure that the illegal and immoral conduct, as alleged, will be dealt with in accordance with the strict rules of military justice."

Army Secretary Stanley Resor, who is testifying today before Senate and House of Representatives committees on the alleged My Lai massacre of March, 1968, is almost sure to be quizzed on the Dong Tam incident as well. Army general counsel Robert Jordan will appear with Resor before the Senate armed services committee and afterward before the House investigating subcommittee.

LAIRD WAS SHOCKED

Defence Secretary Melvin Laird said in congressional testimony released Tuesday night that he was shocked and sickened when the allegations of the 20-month-old Pinkville massacre came to his attention seven months ago.

Pinkville was the code name given to the area where the reported massacre occurred because it was predominantly Viet Cong territory.

Laird said he ordered an immediate investigation which, a Pentagon spokesman said, led to charges of premeditated murder being brought against Lieut. William L. Calley. Calley, accused of killing at least 109 South Vietnamese, will face a general court martial at Fort Benning, Ga., in January.

DRUG SENTENCES CUT TO 2 YEARS

CALGARY (CP) — The Appeal Court of Alberta today reduced stiff sentences previously given to five young marijuana and hashish traffickers and set new guidelines for future sentencing.

In an unanimous written decision, the three-man court decided that sentences not exceeding two years are "sufficient deterrent" to prevent persons from trafficking.

Air Tax Plan Called 'Stupid'

OTTAWA (CP) — The Commons moved the country closer Tuesday to an air-fare user tax over a chorus of criticism, including flat rejection of the idea by the New Democratic Party.

Members of the Conservative Opposition tended to snipe at the tax as discriminatory. Meanwhile Max Saltsman (Waterloo), the NDP financial critic, said his group could not vote for it because it was a cover-up for a stupid air policy.

In his view, that policy had permitted the growth of privately-owned Canadian Pacific Air Lines to a major competitor to publicly-owned Air Canada. Had Air Canada been left in a monopoly position, it would have made enough money to make the user tax unnecessary.

The tax, designed to help build and operate airports, was given voice-vote second reading. It will be examined later by the House, clause by clause, before third and final reading.

It would impose a five-percent charge on all tickets sold for domestic flights and trips to the U.S. and the French islands of St. Pierre-Miquelon off the Canadian East Coast. A head-tax ranging from two to five dollars is in store for other overseas flights, under the amendment to the excise tax act.

Germ-Junking Safety Problem

By Times News Services

How do you destroy—safely—the "bucketsful" of U.S. military germ stocks?

This is the question facing defence department officials following Wednesday's order by President Nixon to destroy all germ warheads.

Defence officials say the junking will require elaborate safety precautions that may stretch the disposal operation over several months.

The same officials express hope that elimination of germ warfare components can be completed "well within the year." The health department will assist in the operation.

The highly poisonous nature, rather than the volume, of biological stocks is the main problem, say officials.

NOT TEARGAS

In other developments concerning biological weapons:

- Diplomats in the United Nations handling disarmament negotiations enthusiastically welcomed Nixon's statement.

Mixed with the enthusiasm, however, was regret that Nixon's renunciation of "first use of incapacitating chemicals" apparently did not extend to the military employment of tear gas in warfare, or the use of herbicides.

- Britain's minister of state for disarmament, Lord Chalfont, praised the statement as "making it easier to achieve" multilateral agreement on the control of chemical and biological weapons.

The U.S. defence department has not yet stripped the secret label from documents showing how much bacteria there is to destroy, but sources speak in terms of "bucketsful" and pounds, rather than tons.

However, as little as a thimbleful of such lethal bacteria as anthrax or plague is capable of killing thousands of persons over a wide area.

The president's announcement of the planned disposal Tuesday climaxed a six-month review of the American chemical and biological warfare — CBW — program.

Nixon's reference to eliminating "existing stocks of bacteriological weapons" made information officers at the defence department squirm since the department has repeatedly told reporters that the United States does not stock germ weapons.

Swiss Asked To Mediate

'Tear a Man's Guts' With False Charges

Lands Minister Ray Williston today defended Deputy Minister David Borthwick in an emotion-charged encounter with reporters in the Legislative Buildings corridor.

"You tear a man's guts out," he said.

"You destroy a man by inference and you never pull him back," he said angrily.

"It's a lousy, stinking, stupid business."

Williston said "it just about tore me" the way he had been approached with questions Tuesday about Borthwick's ownership of shares in BrenMac Mines Ltd. which he acquired in a syndicate with Charles Eadie, a promoter of the Cypress Bowl development.

NOTHING IMPROPER

He denied that there is anything improper about Borthwick's being a business associate of Eadie providing that they are not associated in ventures relating to Borthwick's official duties as deputy minister.

He said there is no question that Borthwick had behaved properly.

Was his job as deputy in danger?

"Absolutely not," said Williston.

His voice charged with anger, Williston said that The Vancouver Sun, which initiated the current controversy over the recreational development in West Vancouver, would "destroy anybody to get at the government."

The technique is to publish parallel pieces of information and letting the public say "ah ha" to a connection that is imagined between the two.

"It doesn't matter what he does now," Williston said of Borthwick. "He can't retrieve his position."

OWN INTERESTS

He said that if reporters really believed in what they were doing they would declare their own interests in stocks and other matters before writing stories about them.

He shouted at one reporter who asked if it wasn't unfortunate that a deputy minister of lands should be a business associate of people doing business with his department.

Williston Orders Halt to Bowl Logging

By BRUCE YEMEN

Logging in West Vancouver's "Cypress Bowl" has been halted on orders issued this morning by Lands Minister Ray Williston.

The confused and controversial bowl development was blown into new prominence with a series of developments in the last 48 hours.

Williston ordered the logging halt after receiving a letter from West Vancouver Mayor Alex Forst, a long-time supporter of the proposed recreation scheme.

Williston said Tuesday he had mistakenly misled reporters Monday when he said that no leases had been signed with Alpine Outdoor Recreation Resources Ltd. in the recreational development in West Vancouver.

Williston also released a letter which appeared to conflict with his earlier statements that he wasn't aware of proposed development details for Cypress Bowl or of the foreign company that Alpine had brought into the development.

Deputy Lands Minister David Borthwick denied there is any connection between a mining company in which he holds shares and the Cypress Bowl development.

Allan Williams, Liberal MLA for West Vancouver-Howe Sound, switched his earlier position in favor of the development and demanded that it be stopped.

NDP House Leader Dave Barrett called for a judicial inquiry into the entire matter.

Williston said he had been speaking of specific final approval of Alpine's right to develop more than 600 acres of crown land when he said Monday that no leases had been signed.

The lease had in fact been signed by Borthwick and Charles Eadie, managing director of Alpine, in October.

Eadie was a director of Lakeland Base Metals Ltd. in which Borthwick, questioned Tuesday, said he had held 10,000 to 12,000 shares which had been exchanged for the same number of shares of BrenMac Mining Ltd. when Lakeland folded up. He also holds a number of shares in escrow.

Eadie, who is also a director of BrenMac, is the only possible link between the two companies and the Cypress Bowl development, Borthwick said, denying that Lakeland or BrenMac has anything to do with Cypress Bowl.

Williston, after expressing apparent surprise when informed of Borthwick's shareholdings, said he saw nothing wrong with it, adding that "it would be a different matter if Borthwick were an employee of the mines department.

Borthwick said he saw nothing wrong with his mining holdings, and added:

"If there is, half of the civil service would have to. . . ."

He didn't finish the sentence.

Williston, who visited the legislative press gallery with Borthwick shortly after being asked about the matter, said

Second Soldier Tells Story As Court Bans Interviews

Times News Services

FORT BENNING, Ga. — Military judge Col. Reid W. Kennedy has ordered all potential witnesses in the court-martial of an army lieutenant charged with murdering Vietnamese civilians to remain silent about the case.

The judge deferred decision Tuesday on requests from lawyers acting for the accused officer, First Lieut. William J. Calley Jr., that he order the press to curb publicity on the case before it comes to trial.

In the wake of the military court order for silence on the case, yet another former soldier Tuesday evening in an NBC interview said he killed at least 10 civilians including a two-year-old boy, on a direct order from an officer.

NBC correspondent Bill Matney identified the veteran as Vernardo Simpson of Jackson, Miss., where the interview took place.

Following is the interview as broadcast on the Huntley-Brinkley Report and recorded in New York:

Simpsoh: Well, that afternoon we got briefed on this going into the village by our company commander, Captain Medina. That we was to —that when we leave . . . the village, that there shouldn't be anything standing, that's villagers, women, children, babies, pigs, chickens, anything. And we set out that morning about 9 or 9:30 and our platoon was the second platoon in, and we was on the left flank of the village. And as we proceeded through there, we had orders to search and destroy everything. And we came upon the huts, well, we searched the huts, searched all around the area and everything. If there was anything in there, well, we was to destroy it and everything. And as I came up on it, there was a woman, a man and a child, running away from it, towards the huts. So, I told them to stop in their language and, everything, and then they didn't, and I had orders to shoot them down and I did this. This is what I did, I shot them, the lady and the little boy.

Matney: About how old was the little boy?

A. . . . About two years old.

Q. How many rounds do you estimate you fired during that engagement, as you swept through the city?

Q. Yes.

A. Oh, about 15 magazines,

A. The whole engagement? 20-round clips.

Q. And you say that you—you estimate, you accounted personally for about 10?

A. Yes.

Q. Were any of the men in the company reluctant to follow this order to destroy everything in sight?

A. Yes, there were. Well, I was reluctant, but I was following a direct order. And if I didn't do this, with that order, when I got back, I could stand court martial for not following a direct order.

Q. What was said immediately afterwards, when you were withdrawing from the village?

A. What was said?

Q. Yeah.

A. There wasn't much said about it—everyone was talking about, you know, who they killed and how many they killed and everything, but after we got back to that base camp the next day, or the couple of days after that, we was told not to mention this about what went on and everything. That was all.

Q. Who was—who told you not to mention it?

A. Well, it come from our platoon sergeant, but I guess he had orders from somewhere else.

Q. After it was all over, and the excitement was over, and the fellows started thinking about it, was there a conversation that perhaps it shouldn't have been done, in talking it over with your friends, your buddies?

A. Yes, there was. And we had—we was talking about it, but everytime we would bring it up, you know, we would — well, we would just—the army, you know, we are in the army to fight and everything. We don't have too much say so, because they have a higher rank over us. And if we did try to do anything, well, maybe something would come about that, so everyone just probably was scared to say anything about it."

chance. And it could be higher than that," said the minister.

"Any reasonable look at this thing, on a purely financial basis, would rule it out."

OIL LEAK

Davis said the possibility of an oil leak loomed large as an objection but it was not the only reason for rejecting any drilling application.

"There are other considerations. For instance, there's a certain amount of waste and pollution in drilling any hole.

"In drilling they use certain clays as a mud slurry to flush away the cuttings from the drill and if you fly over any offshore drilling rig there's always a large area of pollution with this mud slurry streaming away in whatever direction the tidal current is going.

"Essentially, it's an industrial operation on a large scale and it makes no sense in an area for recreational development."

MOON SAMPLES VIEWED TONIGHT

SPACE CENTRE, HOUSTON (UPI)—Earth scientists get a look at 26 to 30 pounds of the moon tonight when they open a suitcase-sized box sealed by Apollo 12's explorers on a dusty desert called the Ocean of Storms.

The aluminum case, believed to contain a large amount of dirt, moon beads and a few rocks, rests in the same vacuum chamber in which man's first lunar samples were inspected from the Apollo 11 expedition four months ago.

The box is one of two flown to the space centre from Apollo 12's South Pacific recovery area. One arrived Tuesday and one reached the moon laboratory early today.

The Weather and You

By CARL RIBLET, JR.

In the accounts of mountain climbers who have successfully reached the summits of some of the world's most difficult peaks, we have read of the effect that the lack of oxygen had on them. If you are at a height of 30,000 feet or more, you may appear to have the symptoms of a drunk, or a sick man walking in a dream.

Many mountain climbers have told of suffering at high altitudes from lack of oxygen and they have expressed concern whether the effect could cause permanent damage to their bodies or brains.

The records show that generally the weather, altitude or cold, heat or humidity, has no permanent effect on the human body that leaves it. The brain and body functions of people affected by various weather phenomena, such as high altitude and intense cold, function just as well as ever when conditions are back to normal.

. . . CYPRESS BOWL LOGGING HALTED BY B.C.

that he had received a "general" letter from the Grand Bahama Port Authority in October expressing interest in the Cypress Bowl scheme.

The port authority is one of the Consolidated Benguet group of companies with operations around the world including gambling interests in the Bahamas.

The letter, signed by company chairman Wallace Groves, informed Williston of the Grand Bahama Port Authority's willingness to undertake Alpine's commitments to the Crown in Cypress Bowl.

"As you know, we, on our own behalf and on behalf of our associated companies, are negotiating for the takeover of Alpine Outdoor Recreation Resources Ltd., on or about the first of November, 1969," the letter began.

It ended by thanking "you and your office for the assistance which you have given our representatives in developing the background information and in understanding the government's philosophy in developing the Valley Royal complex." Cypress Bowl has also been called Valley Royal.

●

Williston had said Nov. 15 and 16 that he was unaware of any details of development of Cypress Bowl by new partners. He also said that he knew Alpine was seeking new financing but didn't know where they had found it.

The letter from the Grand Bahama Port Authority was filed as "information" and not answered, Williston said.

He said he could not specifically recall if he had ever had occasion to talk with representatives of the Benguet firm prior to the letter. He doubted that he had. Continuing negotiations in such matters were mostly handled by Borthwick and other lands department staff, he said.

Williston said later that he would be willing to order a halt to logging being carried out in Cypress Bowl in the clearing of land for the proposed development.

Mayor Alex Forst of West Vancouver said he would write a letter asking the halt and also requesting a public inquiry into the question which has swirled around the municipality's council for years.

Forst's decision came after a stormy public council meeting Monday night in which West Vancouver alderman Don Lanskail denied that his directorship in Lakeland Base Metals Ltd. along with Eadie had constituted a conflict of interest.

Eadie, who attended the meeting, announced that officials of the Benguet company would hold a press conference in Vancouver Dec. 1.

An earlier press conference was called off last week by public relations man Bill Clancey, on behalf of the Benguet firm.

Clancey, who is also a shareholder in BrenMac, is well known as Premier Bennett's election campaign public relations alde.

●

Williams, the Liberal MLA who has supported private development of the bowl in the Legislature, switched his stand at the Monday night meeting and asked council to seek its closing and have the area developed by the regional parks board.

West Vancouver would be the first B.C. community to "stand off the provincial government and its friends" if it did that, he said.

Drama Workshop For Teachers Set Friday

A drama workshop for secondary teachers will be conducted by two well-known child drama experts Friday.

The workshop will take place at 8 p.m. at St. Andrew's school (formerly St. Louis College) on Pandora, and will be under direction of Ray Michal and Tricia Joseph.

Michal, who studied at the universities of Manitoba and B.C., has worked with groups such as the Holiday Theatre and the Arts Club Theatre.

Miss Joseph came to the University of Victoria from Australia where she worked with the National Theatre School.

Man Acquitted In Libel Case

A County Court jury Tuesday found Donald R. Sykes, former manager of Three Cs Veterans' Security Service in Victoria, not guilty of criminal libel.

Sykes, now a school caretaker in Edmonton, faced two charges of publishing mimeographed documents containing defamatory references to radio commentator Victor Williams and Jack Rennie of Victoria, president of Metropolitan Security Services Ltd., formerly known as Three Cs, an organization of commissionaires.

During the four-day trial that started last week Sykes conducted his own defence. Judge M. L. Tyrwitt-Drake heard the case.

Barrett called for a judicial inquiry Tuesday in a continuation of his four-year battle to halt the development of Cypress Bowl by a private company.

His attacks on the government over the issue had become an annual event in the legislature. He charged that the Cypress Bowl area, acquired originally as a park, had been handed to friends of the government for a commercial project without benefit of open bidding and without need for a performance bond.

●

He had charged that Alpine was in a position to log the area and then get out, having made a handsome profit.

Alpine has repeatedly denied making more than a nominal profit from the logs which have been cut for a ski run and other facilities.

The scope of the recreational project has increased considerably since Benguet came into the picture.

The letter to Williston from the Grand Bahama Port Authority says plans include fully serviced recreation homesites for sale to the public, related commercial facilities, hotels, retail shops and condominiums.

Williston has stated that Alpine or its associates cannot go ahead with ground structures until a full development plan is approved by the government.

"We have control of the situation," he said. At one point he said residential development would be acceptable if the "planners" recommend it. But later he said he didn't "envision" such development.

●

The current controversy erupted Nov. 15 when the Vancouver Sun published a story describing the Benguet company as active in gambling operations in the Bahamas, in payoffs to government officials in the Bahamas and in the collapse of the Atlantic Acceptance Corporation.

Williston at the time said he knew that Alpine had been seeking new financing but that he didn't know anything about Benguet.

Attorney-General Leslie Peterson launched an investigation into the company shortly after. The results are being awaited.

Following the initial disclosure that Benguet, in the form of the Grand Bahama Port Authority, had been taken into Alpine as a partner, it was leanred that four Bahamas business executives and two Vancouver men had replaced six directors of Alpine. Only Eadie continued to hold his position as a director.

Subsequently it was found that a company called Valley Royal Development Company Ltd., of which Alpine is a subsidiary, had been formed to carry out development of Cypress Bowl and had given itself far broader powers than those held by Alpine.

The powers, including the running of taverns and selling of real estate, were outlined in a memorandum of association filed at the companies office in Victoria.

A controversy has raged in the West Vancouver area over whether Alpine has cut more threes than necessary for the ski development originally planned.

Williston has said repeatedly that most of the logs taken out were from diseased trees — balsam affected with woolly aphid — and that the area would easily be re-planted if necessary.

●

The developers must build an access road to the development from the Upper Levels Highway. Cypress Bowl is lacated between Black and Strachan mountains.

Zoning is under the control of West Vancouver municipality. The 2,500 acre bowl is surrounded by 6,000 acres of Crown wilderness.

Alpine's leases with the Crown, covering 532 acres, are for specific developments to be completed by specific dates.

These are: the road system by September 30, 1971; the four ski lifts, a public parking area for 5,000 cars and the public ski runs by October 31, 1972.

Cost of the development is not known but Alpine officials have used the figure of $10,000,000 for the basic skiing and access facilities.

Borthwick said Tuesday that he holds shares in a number of mining companies in the province.

●

He said he knew nothing about charges that a vehicle owned by Lakeland Base Metals had been observed working in the Cypress Bowl area last year, pointing out that as a shareholder he knew nothing about the day-to-day operations of the company.

Lanskail, who was a director of Lakeland, also denied any knowledge of the use of the vehicle because as a director he wasn't involved in the details of the company's operations.

Borthwick said he holds about 100,000 shares of Brenmac in escrow, to be released only with permission of the Vancouver Stock Exchange.

Brenmac shares traded at about 65 cents Tuesday.

●

A statement of material filed with the B.C. Securities Commission shows that Brenmac shares were transferred to Borthwick and four others in payment for mining claims held in the Brenda Lake area by the five as a syndicate.

The others were Eadie, Clancey, Morgan Stewart, a land surveyor who did some early work for Alpine, and Leonard Udell, president of Brenmac.

Each received 150,000 shares in escrow.

Borthwick said the others in the group were business associates and that their association had nothing to do with Cypress Bowl.

No conflict of interest had occurred, he said.

If he had had any connections with the Cypress development, said Borthwick, "I should be fired right now."

Borthwick said he has been deputy minister of lands for little more than a year and that "this whole thing was negotiated long before my time."

●

Borthwick was superintendent of lands from 1962 until his appointment as deputy minister last year.

Borthwick said he put up $7,500 to investigate mining claims and to acquire them as his involvement in the mining syndicate.

He said, of his shares held in escrow, a number were signed away to help promote a public underwriting of the stock.

Borthwick said he had known Eadie for a long time, "even before Cypress Bowl."

The leases signed with Alpine in October were to replace an earlier lease for 22.5 acres with the company.

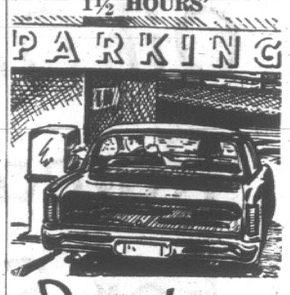

They include provision for the developers to purchase land on which facilities are built if the terms of agreement with the government are carried out.

●

Premier Bennett said in an interview he has no doubts about the honesty of the minister and his departmental officials or about their efficiency and "ability to protect the public interest at all times."

He confirmed that the Cypress Bowl project will be "held in abeyance" until a report by the attorney-general's department is completed.

How Much Defence Is Enough?

Widening of Canadian research and contributions to the economic and social health of Canadian communities are some of the fringe benefits that come with the defence tax dollar, says Commodore R. V. Henning.

Speaking at a Kiwanis Club of Victoria luncheon in the Empress Hotel Tuesday, Henning, who is commander of CFB Esquimalt and HMC Dockyard, said:

"Check the scout and cub groups in this area, or any of the sports clubs, and you'll be amazed at the number of servicemen who contribute.

"When you consider the amount of money spent on defence you should also remember the numbers of skilled men, such as divers, pilots, and electronics specialists, who enter the civilian field after they leave the service."

HOW MUCH ENOUGH

He said that a technological upsurge after the Second World War made defence planners aware of the need for a change in service structure.

"The contribution toward research coming out of the development should be considered in the cost of defence."

He added that defence planner are faced with the basic issue of deciding how much defence is enough.

"It's rather like insurance. In my view you should carry enough to cover the losses you can't afford to take."

Pool Siting Sparks Debate In City Meet

A swimming pool, a challenge to debate and an unsolved murder were brought up during the Victoria mayoralty campaign Tuesday.

The constant question of what to do with young people who congregate in Centennial Square also rose at the all-candidates' meeting at the Silver Threads Centre.

Mayoralty candidates Courtney Haddock and Ald. Robert Baird were critical of council approval of a $1.6 million swimming pool for Central Park.

Haddock said the approval without a referendum was "undemocratic."

"Council doesn't trust you," he told about 100 elderly people. "Your homes will pay for the operating losses of the pool yet they were afraid to ask you whether you wanted a swimming pool."

NEW LOCATION

Baird said the first thing he will do as mayor is to find another location for the pool.

"Our parks commissioner (Herbert Warren) said time after time that this is not the right place," said Baird.

Ald. Ian Stewart challenged other candidates to a debate on the future of Victoria.

"I've offered to debate with any of the candidates but they've been afraid," he said.

"Nonsense," Haddock snapped back.

Stewart asked for the debate after Haddock had called for a "parochial attitude" toward spending Victoria taxpayers' money.

"It's time to de parochial," said Haddock. "Every member of Oak Bay council lives in Oak Bay. It's time for Victoria homeowners to have a voice in city hall."

'NONSENSICAL'

Haddock said people from Sooke to Sidney were benefitting from projects for which Victoria taxpayers alone were paying.

Stewart called Haddock's argument "nonsensical."

"It is important that Victoria has a healthy core," he said. We don't need a parochial attitude in city hall. I've always believed that Victoria means the entire region and we have to work to ensure that it remains a good region."

Baird predicted amalgamation would answer the problems of parochialism.

"Amalgamation is coming and it will get in by the back door through the Regional District Board," he said.

MURDER 'AN EXAMPLE'

Then Baird used the example of an unsolved murder in Victoria to argue for amalgamation of area police forces.

"The murder took place in Victoria, yet Saanich police worked on it for three weeks before Victoria police were called in. That day the body was found."

Though he mentioned no names Baird was obviously referring to the slaying of city businessman William Osland whose disappearance Feb. 3 this year was investigated by Saanich police.

Osland's body was found three weeks later in the Inner Harbor by city police.

Candidate Bill Scott lashed out at Baird for his attitude toward young people. He said Baird exhibited "hysterical hatred" toward those who gather in Centennial Square.

Baird said he would put a youth leadership program into effect in the square.

"These people — they are people but you see they are against the world," he said. "That small percentage who will not help themselves will have to be eased out."

Baird said he has been called the "candidate of the little old ladies."

"I'm proud of this," he said. "The world would be in the dickens of a mess without the little old ladies. And every grown man owes his inspiration for living to some little old lady."

Scott was critical of "those little Caesars in editorial offices" who attempt to slant the news. He said already newspapers and radio stations had lined up predictably behind their candidates.

The King and I . . . A Kingly Performance

By AUDREY JOHNSON

It is often said that children and animals are show-stealers and woe betide the adult actor who finds himself on the same stage.

The group of small Chinese boys and girls who play the princes and princesses in Victoria Operatic Society's production of The King and I are as entrancing as one could find anywhere.

They do their unconscious best to live up to the adage but they are put to it to steal scenes in this show which has a number of strong elements going for it.

The Rodgers and Hammerstein musical opened Tuesday night at McPherson Playhouse before a large and delighted audience and will continue its run throughout the week with a matinee on Saturday.

After a slightly shaky beginning the show found its feet and first-nighters saw a smooth production, beautifully set and dominated—despite the children—by two splendidly competent performers in Janet Senior and Anthony Jenkins.

SKILL REVEALED

These two, the rich voice and pleasing presence of Elinor Bertram, and exceptionally fine ballet and the setting and lovely costumes were the obvious strengths of the production.

But behind them were the talents that made all this come together in a happy harmonious whole and on attracting these talents the Operatic Society can certainly congratulate itself.

There is Allan Purdy whose overall direction reveals so much skill and makes such theatrical sense and Tudor Jones, a perceptive musical director who is conducting the orchestra blended it into the show while maintaining its supporting strength.

And all the host of back stage people who have worked long and hard to produce what is definitely the best looking show in VOS history.

DANCERS EXCELLENT

A special word at this point for the ballet which, like the setting shows evidence of keen and accurate research. While the choreography is not credited in the program, the dancers are from the Wynne Shaw Studio and they are excellent.

The concept of "The small house of Uncle Thomas" has all the simple, naive charm and delicate formalization that the libretto demands.

Janet Senior has never been more at home or more convincing in any of her many previous roles. She is Anna — authoritative but never raspy or domineering — an intelligent Victorian woman of dignity and warmth.

VARIETY

She is at ease in all aspects, her voice particularly pleasing in Hello, Young Lovers, her poise and movement delightful.

Anthony Jenkins continually amazes in his capacity for taking on a variety of roles and doing justice to all of them.

Anyone who has seen him in comic cockney roles will find his royal arrogance here; his oriental feeling and adolescent impulses, astounding in their conviction.

He handles the vocal assignments competently and is only hampered by a particularly ugly makeup that does some damage to the romantic image he must project.

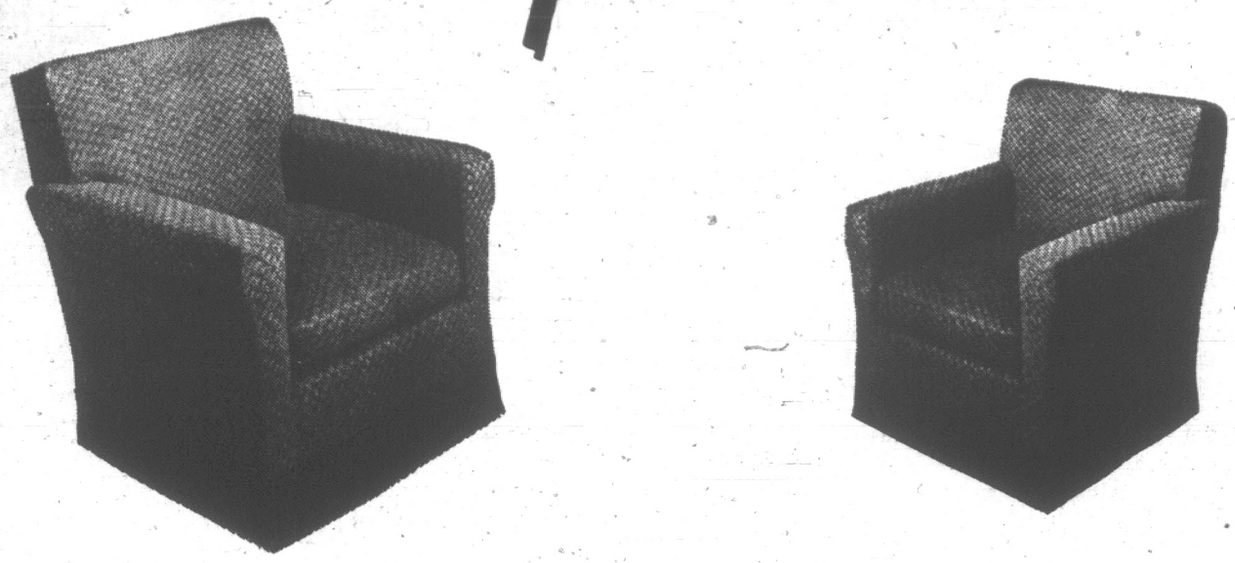

Among others in the cast who are thoroughly effective and contribute much to a successful and memorable show, are Mary Bissenden as the young, unhappy Tuptim, Anthony Elsdon as Anna's son and Ronnie Way, a commanding small figure as heir to the throne of Siam.

Breath of Fresh Air

TO DEAL WITH THE NEGATIVE aspects first, it is likely that President Nixon's motives will be questioned following his call for United States ratification of the Geneva convention of 1925 to prohibit initial use of poison gases and bacteriological warfare. He will probably be accused of seeking to divert attention from the Vietnam war, to match a concurrent Russian request to the United Nations to ban production of chemical and bacteriological weapons, to seek political advantage, and especially to draw the world's attention from accusations that American troops massacred civilians in Vietnam.

But regardless of whether all or any of these ideas have any validity, the laudable fact remains that Mr. Nixon has called on his country to renounce the use of chemical and bacteriological weapons, to destroy existing stocks, to limit future work in these areas to research for antidotes, and to join with Canada and Britain in promoting a treaty that would abolish this sordid madness from the arsenals of all countries. Mr. Nixon hopes that his dramatic step will eventually ensure that no country will ever use such weapons. Mankind will join him in that.

The fact that the Soviet Union and seven of its Communist allies yesterday proposed essentially the same goal to the United Nations gives promise that no cold-war considerations will hamper the preparation and early implementation of a global ban on germ and chemical warfare. No government anywhere should hesitate to support this move. Coming as it does at a time when the two military giants of the world are discussing — at least in a preliminary way — retrenchments in nuclear armaments, mankind has reason to feel that a real break-through has been made in the task of moving the world towards greater sanity.

And that immediately raises the question of Canada's position in the matter. This country was among the first to subscribe to the Geneva convention of 1925 seeking to outlaw use of the weapons, but as part of our military association with Britain and the United States, Canada has maintained testing facilities in Alberta for germ and chemical arms.

Defence Minister Cadieux said yesterday that the government has no present intention of getting out of this sordid business. He appeared to mean that even though the United States and Britain would have no further use for such weapons, Canada would continue to test them. This makes no sense at all, and one of the first benefits to be derived from Mr. Nixon's admirable move should be Canada's complete retirement from the sorry activities of the Alberta poison station.

Apathy or Satisfaction?

IT IS DISTURBING IN A PROVince approaching its confederation centennial that of 110 mayoral vacancies in British Columbia's cities, towns, villages and municipal districts, 47 were filled by acclamation this year. Two communities—Pemberton and Valemount — have vacancies but no mayoral candidates. Almost one-third of the 650 local elective jobs in the province were filled by acclamation when nominations closed.

While it is true that second-term mayors are often unopposed, this year's acclamations are unusually numerous. In many cases public satisfaction with good local leadership is the answer. Examples are seen in Saanich, with Mayor Curtis returned, and North Saanich, where Mayor Cumming has earned another term in office. But when one-third of local offices throughout the province are unchallenged, there must be at least a suspicion of public apathy.

Today municipalities could be called the fulcrum of the governmental process. Cities and towns hold an ever higher proportion of the population. Health, recreation and welfare, the whole quality of life, are urgent municipal problems.

Many outstanding men and women offer themselves in municipal elections. If they are unopposed in some communities it may be because of their recognized ability. But the flight from city or town halls should not continue. Leadership and imaginative planning are vital at the community level where one of the most important democratic jobs must be done. A more healthy community results when the public choice is made in an atmosphere of rivalry and competition.

Conflict by the Nile

WHILE ALMOST DAILY REports of guerrilla forays and reprisal attacks in the Middle East accentuate the threat of President Nasser's November 6 promise to step up the "war of attrition", a report from Egypt notes another battle being waged with all the hazards of Russian roulette.

The November 6 speech, some analysts say, reflects the pressure placed upon Nasser by Egypt's war party. This group, according to report, wants intensified guerrilla activity while holding to the belief that a new war with Israel can be delayed until big-power pressure imposes some kind of Arab-Israeli peace. They can, in other words, hit and run without causing the ultimate detonation.

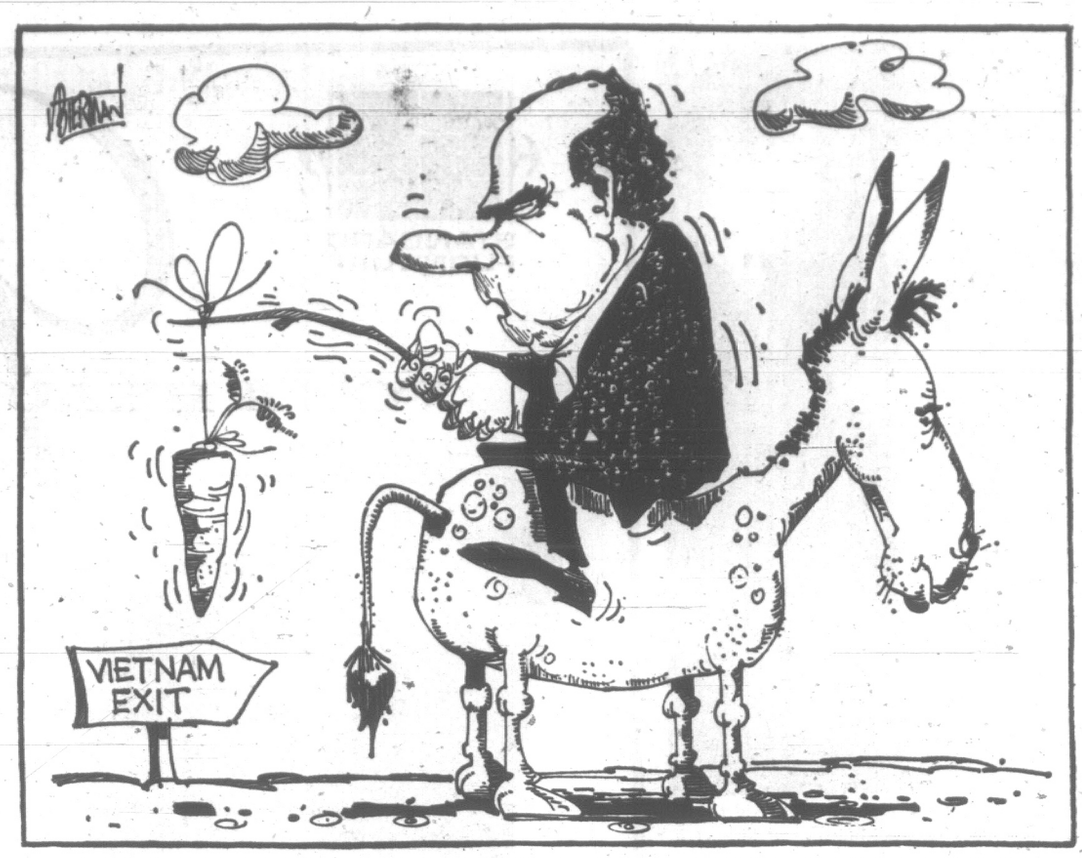

But in Egypt, on the other hand, there is also a so-called peace party which would like to opt out of the Palestine conflict, convinced that a separate peace would get the Israelis out of Sinai and loosen the grip of Soviet advisers in Egypt. The peace party, moreover, would like to curb Nasser's powers.

The internal stresses and strains arising from the conflict between the two may become more evident in Egyptian policy in weeks ahead. But, as Canada's External Affairs Minister Sharp remarked after a 90-minute meeting with Nasser, "One would have to be a considerable optimist to think that there has been much progress in the direction" of a peaceful settlement. In the meantime the so-called Egyptian "war party" keeps striking and throwing matches with no certainty that the lid is tight on the powder keg.

More Sea Park

REGIONAL PARKS COMMITtee chairman Leslie Passmore supports a proposal that local municipalities pool their 1971 centennial grants to purchase a proposed 2,447-acre marine park in East Sooke. If the municipalities agreed to the scheme it would save for public use the last wilderness coastal area on south Vancouver Island. At present, the total regional park area is 26,043 acres of which only 3,530 acres are semi-wilderness ocean and waterfront on lake or sea.

The 1969 Regional Parks report says the present acreage is "adequate but not extravagant." By 2005 the Capital Region's population will be 370,000, according to the regional parks report. Clearly, today's "adequate" acreage will not remain so for long. When British Columbia joined confederation in 1871 it was largely virgin land. It seems a fitting centennial project to preserve what we can of this heritage 100 years later.

"Giddy yup!"

FROM TORONTO — By HAROLD GREER

No Immunity From Human Rights Code

EVER since the Ontario Legislature enacted the Human Rights Code eight years ago, lawyers and politicians have been wondering what the courts would say if the validity of the law were seriously challenged. Discrimination, after all, is a state of mind and its practical manifestations can be subtle and extremely hard, from a legal point of view, to prove; any law which sets out to make it a statutory offence is almost asking for trouble.

Greer

Recognizing this, the government went to extraordinary lengths in drafting the legislation to keep it out of the courts. The Code is educative and persuasive in principle, provision is made for informal and formal investigation in which conciliation is the prime objective, and, all else failing, no prosecution may be launched without the consent of the responsible minister.

Not surprisingly, only two of the thousands of complaints which the Human Rights Commission has received since 1962 have ended up in the courts, and neither of these involved any fundamental challenges to the law itself.

The inevitable finally happened last May, however, when counsel for Kenneth Bell, a Toronto landlord who had refused to rent the upstairs of his house to a black Jamaican, sought and obtained from Mr. Justice Charles Stewart of the Ontario Supreme Court a writ of prohibition against a Board of Inquiry established under the act to look into the matter. Mr. Bell contended the accommodation in question was not "self-contained" as required by the law and that, in any event, the Human Rights Commission had already decided he was guilty and he was therefore entitled to be tried in a court of law without the expense, inconvenience and hazards of an inquiry which did not afford him the same protections.

"Legislative Beartrap"

Mr. Justice Stewart not only agreed enthusiastically with these submissions, he went on to attack the whole construction of the law itself. It was, he said, "a legislative beartrap which no subject can escape, a charge which cannot be defended, and a fine which cannot be escaped." A citizen, he added somewhat irrelevantly, had the right to exercise "an untrammeled and biased choice of those who dined at his table or slept under his roof" and it was "equally as important that the rights of a middle-aged white Canadian home owner be protected as those of a young, black, Jamaican tenant".

Thus challenged legally and politically, the government quickly appealed and the Ontario Court of Appeal has now come through nobly with a unanimous judgment that ticks Mr. Justice Stewart off on all counts. Written by Mr. Justice Bora Laskin, it is a decision which seems likely to stand as a landmark in Canadian jurisprudence, especially for those looking for a clear assertion of the supremacy, in the Canadian system, of the legislative over the judicial power.

Mr. Justice Laskin first clears away some of the underbrush in the Stewart decision. He points out that one of the functions of the Board of Inquiry was to determine if Mr. Bell's rental accommodation was "self-contained" and it was simply an "error in principle" for Justice Stewart to stop the board from proceeding on the assumption that it would reach the wrong conclusion. He also says Justice Stewart should not have assumed in advance that, just because the Human Rights Commission had unfortunately made up its mind about Mr. Bell's guilt, the Board of Inquiry would follow suit, because the two were quite different entities, both in constitution and membership. Nor could it be said, as Justice Stewart did, that the actions of the board or commission were beyond judicial review.

Prohibition Argument

Then he gets to the heart of the matter:

"The chief ground upon which counsel for Bell sought to support the order of prohibition was . . . that it deprived Bell of his rights at law and that, although it was not ultra vires in a constitutional sense, it was so offensive to democratic principles as to justify a court to prohibit its invocation."

This "startling proposition", Mr. Justice Laskin said, could be traced to the "celebrated but indefensible statement" in the Bonham case (a 1610 British judgment) that 'the common law will control Acts of Parliament and sometimes adjudge them to be utterly void; for when an Act of Parliament is against common right and reason, or repugnant or impossible to be performed, the common law will control it, and adjudge such Act to be void'.

Not so, Justice Laskin declared: "The courts construe legislation and apply it to situations found to be within its scope. They cannot ignore it when a situation to which it is addressed comes before them. Bell's 'rights at law', as his counsel used the phrase, are not rights to refuse obedience to an applicable law."

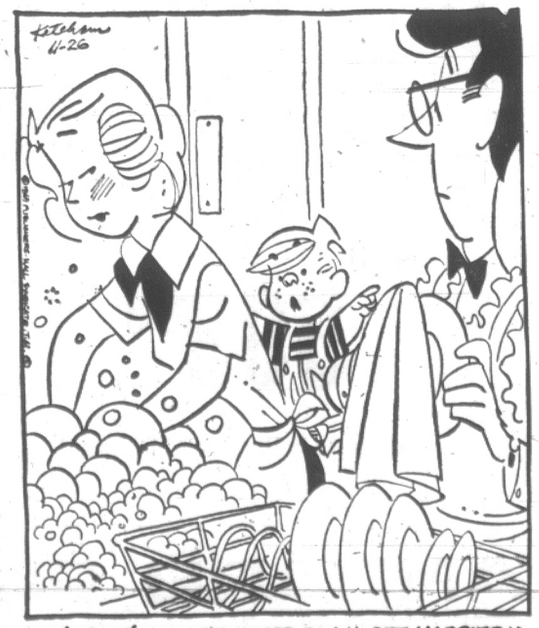

Common Law Change

Admittedly, he said, the Human Rights Code has drastically changed the common law position of owners of certain kinds of housing accommodation, just as it has changed the position of employers and of operators of places to which the public is customarily admitted.

"But the courts of this country have no mandate to enforce their own, let alone Bell's, notions of substantive due process to nullify legislation which is competently enacted under the constitutional distribution of legislative powers; at the most, they may, where the legislation is open to such construction, enforce procedural due process in line with principles worked out by common law techniques."

But the Human Rights Code, Mr. Justice Laskin said, was not open to any such construction and therefore "neither Bell nor any other citizen has any legal immunity from it".

FROM PARIS — By C. L. SULZBERGER

France Wants to Rejoin the Mideast Club

FRANCE'S current Middle East policy can be stated simply: Get four-power negotiations on the Arab-Israel crisis restarted as soon as possible, for, otherwise, the situation can only become worse. The French believe they can help bridge the gap between disparate Soviet and American views. This gap has become increasingly evident in bipartite talks between U.S. and Russian representatives which have continued while the four-power negotiations (including Britain and France) remain suspended.

Sulzberger

When Foreign Minister Maurice Schumann saw Secretary of State Rogers last September, Rogers said Washington did not wish to resume quadripartite discussions until the Israeli elections were over.

Nevertheless, Rogers promised France and Britain would be informed of all developments in the two-power talks. To the irritation of Paris, there has been no resumption of quadripartite negotiations. On Nov. 12, however, Undersecretary of State Elliot Richardson told Schumann America was ready to recommence them.

Richardson indicated that when Washington received Moscow's reply to the latest American peace formula quadripartite talks could resume. The French are impatient because they feel the four-power framework is the only one within which settlement might be arranged.

Evacuation Essential

France thinks Israel must recognize its security is impaired rather than helped by continued occupation of territories conquered during the 1967 war and the only way to insure security is by arranging evacuation of these areas under four-power auspices and guarantees.

Furthermore, the French feel Russian policy is still relatively restrained, but that this cannot be relied on much longer. The belief here is that Moscow tried to cool off last month's Lebanese crisis and is worried about growing influence of the Arab guerrillas (fedayeen). France is alarmed lest the Soviets, fearing China might outflank them on the left by encouraging the fedayeen, will harden their present line.

Neither Washington nor London — much less Jerusalem — is equally persuaded that today's Soviet line is moderate. Furthermore, the Israelis are scarcely hopeful that their position would improve if France rejoins negotiations.

This month, Jean de Lipkowski, number two in the Quai d'Orsay, assured Saudi Arabia France "will not change the just and noble policy followed by General de Gaulle with respect to the Middle East conflict." Israel regarded de Gaulle's policy as distinctly hostile.

When the Pompidou regime took over, the new President promised to relax some aspects of the French arms embargo, although the famous Mirage fighter planes would contine to be held up.

Last summer, after studying Pompidou's words, Israel sent a new shopping list here asking permission to buy various military spare parts and defensive weapons. The French keep telling the Israelis this list is under review but no single item has yet been agreed to. Furthermore, the French hint that approval of the list depends on a "positive" Israeli attitude to the four-power negotiations — which remain suspended.

France's Middle East policy has one primary goal today — to relaunch four-power talks. Obviously Paris wishes to restore its international diplomatic position and enhance its Middle Eastern prestige by getting back into the Big-Four club.

Sewer Vote

Central Saanich is to vote on a sewerage system: on whether to borrow $2.5 million to help Brentwood out of the mess in which that district finds itself. In every other district each lot has been approved as satisfactory for septic tank disposal. There is contemptuous disregard for the rest of the municipality which has no need to change. Central Saanich has no problem as such.

The Council tells us "this will allow yearly phasing out of the present building restrictions by-law.'

One wonders if Council has been remiss in cases where health hazard has been ignored.

It is hoped that 41 per cent will vote "against".—F. A. Thornley, Saanichton.

Candidates and Snow

In view of the campaign in progress for mayor and aldermen I would recommend a serious consideration by each candidtate of spending the taxpayers' money for proper equipment for handling snow in the squares, streets and sidewalks of this city. Last year this city's handling of snow was a disgrace and a great hardship to many older people. They had to shovel beyond their strength and could get no one to help them.

This equipment would cost money but it would be money well spent.

Last year's discomforts could very well be repeated and for a greater length of time.

Also, let them consider the necessity of increased policing of the squares, particularly Centennial, so that the revolting conditions prevailing up until now are finished with. Extra money spent to maintain order would be money well spent.

To what end new projects when one cannot have freedom to enjoy what the taxpayers have already paid for? First things first. — Mrs. Sybil Blyth, 460 Chester St.

Their Race Track

The protest as expressed by the Victoria Labour Council, regarding death and destruction on the Pat Bay Highway is long overdue. There is nothing wrong with the highway itself — the surface is good, there are no hidden curves and there are adequate areas where slow cars can be passed in safety.

However, no concerted effort has ever been made to enforce normal driving practices and hence a breed of jockeys has developed who treat the highway as their race track. Incidentally, they are not all young nor all of the male sex. There are no speed limits and the solid white line can be crossed with impunity. On the rare occasions when I have seen a police officer on the highway his car was sandwiched in a line of traffic either going to or from Swartz Bay and naturally those in his vicinity were proceeding at a normal rate. What an officer on a motor bicycle would have seen might have been a different story. At least he would have been free to move at will.

I have never yet travelled this highway without being passed on a number of occasions by cars travelling considerably in excess of the speed limit and at times have been thankful that I practise defensive driving. It is what I would recommend to all who travel that route. — A Defensive Driver.

Moon Colony

The Economist

The three were sent to the Ocean of Storms for more than just another lot of rock samples to compare with those collected from the Sea of Tranquillity on that triumphal first landing last July. The planners now want evidence of physical changes taking place on the moon . . . The answers are vital before NASA's planners can get down to the whole and sole point of sending men into space at all: so that the moon and other planets can be colonized for humankind. The first steps towards that have to be pioneering settlements on the moon that could create, in perhaps as little as 25 years (but perhaps, also, as long as 100 years) an artificially maintaineed atmosphere for a cost per acre that would be much the same as the Dutch spend now in reclaiming an acre of land from the sea.

'I'm Much Happier Now About Canada Continuing'

By DOUGLAS FISHER

There are two misconceptions abroad in Ottawa which amuse Gerard Pelletier, the Secretary of State.

The first is that he, a friend of the Prime Minister for 25 years is, if not an "eminence grise" to Mr. Trudeau, a very powerful influence upon him.

The second is that he himself sees his chief role in the government as a "Frenchifier" of the Federal public service.

He told me the other day that he couldn't deny the friendly relationship. He hoped Mr. Trudeau did listen to him. He continued: "But anyone who thinks I am a key figure in an inner circle around the Prime Minister doesn't know much about Mr. Trudeau.

'Very Quiet Man'

"The Prime Minister," he said, "is fundamentally a very quiet man. He always has been. He's a listener. It's silly, this stuff that he dominates cabinet meetings. The truth is that he says little. He is the chairman and like any good chairman of a committee he keeps moving through the agenda.

"He doesn't like digressions and it is easy for a score of men around a table to digress. He won't let heated argument build up but anyone who wishes to speak gets his chance."

Mr. Pelletier doesn't feel he has an inordinate advantage with Mr. Trudeau compared to any other minister.

"It is inevitable," says Mr. Pelletier, "that there be a scapegoat for the changes wrought by such acts as the Official Languages legislation. The Conservatives, in particular Mr. Diefenbaker, and some of the reporters in the Press Gallery have fixed on me.

"Now it's become the accepted wisdom. Pelletier is the bitter champion of the French group. And if you dislike a larger share of senior appointments for French Canadians and balk at the conception of a bilingual service in government departments and agencies, then I am the one to blame."

The Secretary of State shrugs and smiles wryly at this, acknowledging that unpopularity for himself is something he had not sought, but he can live with it.

Mr. Pelletier entered Federal politics, as did Messrs. Trudeau and Marchand, because he believed in the Federal option. He believed it would be disastrous for Quebec to separate.

He thinks it will probably take 10, perhaps 15 years before the continuance of Quebec in confederation is so assured that one will be able to look back in a relaxed manner at the present period of stress.

A decade from now the changes being carried out to make easier the participation by French-Canadians in Federal affairs will have been forgotten.

"In Quebec," says Mr. Pelletier, "it's not federalism we're saving, it's Canada itself. And if I can be paradoxical, outside of Quebec it's federalism that's to be saved rather than Canada. That is, English-speaking Canadians need to learn that federalism has its price, whereas Quebecers must come to appreciate that without Canada they will be much worse off.

"It's happening. I'm much happier about the prospect of Canada continuing. Don't believe the Hegelian-like arguments of the pessimistic determinists who say that there's an inevitable quality to Quebec's slow slide out of Canada.

Don't Wring Neck

"Jacques Parizeau — you know the chap who has gone with Levesque — said something in France a year or so ago to the effect that almost every Quebecer has the urge to say 'Let's pull a feather from this chicken, Canada.'

"He really doesn't want to wring the chicken's neck, however. Then the question comes: How many feathers can you pluck before you haven't a chicken? The overwhelming majority of Quebecers is now fed up with plucking Canada's feathers.

"I sense this. I see evidence of it in the Union National. It is very strong in the Quebec Liberal Party. Rene Levesque's party will be lucky to win three seats in the coming provincial election."

The dicey question about Quebec affairs now, believes Mr. Pelletier, is primarily economic, rather than political, although the close link between the two is obvious.

If corporations and capital do flee from Quebec, if unemployment rises and rises in Quebec and less so in the rest of the country, particularly in Ontario, then it will become harder to convince Quebecers about Canada.

Farm to City

In any case, says Mr. Pelletier, Quebec is going to be noisy for a long time. The transition from the farm to the city which has been going on in Quebec so quickly and later than in the rest of Canada has had one good consequence: There's a much greater appreciation of articulate men.

The arguments are more sophisticated. No longer can a few authoritarian figures dominate politics. Quebecers in thousands know what is at stake now with Canada.

"You'll see," he said, "you'll see very soon what I'm talking about. Quebec will reject Levesque overwhelmingly."

Does the state of federalism in the rest of Canada match this optimism about Canada he finds in Quebec? Yes. "We heard so much about the discontent in the West, especially over the Official Languages Act. What a distorted buildup that was! It wasn't true. It isn't true," he repeated.

Mr. Pelletier isn't so naive as to think everything is rosy for the Trudeau Government in Western Canada but he insists that the wails that separation prospects were growing over actions relating to language and the civil service were and are silly.

In sum, Mr. Pelletier is much happier about Confederation than he was when he left Montreal four years ago, not least because the ministers from Quebec have more influence and are doing more important work than their predecessors got the chance to do.

At no time in our talk did Mr. Pelletier sound bitter. He wasn't dour or hesitant. In fact, he was so expansive, so cheerful, I began to envy him his ministry and his leader-friend.

AILING Joseph Kennedy was able to attend 1967 World Series baseball game in Boston, where he was flanked by sons Edward, left, and Robert.

Thwarted Joe Kennedy Vindicated by Sons

By ANTHONY HOWARD
The Manchester Guardian

In the whole history of the United States there was never another American quite like Joseph P. Kennedy.

His own public career may have been thwarted — abruptly cut short by an indiscreet interview that he gave in 1940 to a Boston newspaper on his return from serving as Roosevelt's Ambassador to London. But that, at least in his later years, ceased to be a source of bitterness or regret.

"The measure of a man's success," he loved to say, "is the kind of family he has raised." On that test even his enemies could not deny him a unique triumph.

For a brief year, of his three surviving sons one sat in the White House, another in the cabinet, as attorney-general, and the third in the U.S. Senate as the youngest ever member of that illustrious body.

Like Fairy Tale

For a man whose own roots lay among the immigrant Boston Irish it was an almost fairy-tale achievement.

It was not, however, the kind of vicarious vindication that old Joe Kennedy himself could ever afford to be seen rejoicing in.

For his own unpopularity with large sections of the American public was deep, lasting and ineradicable.

So widespread was the suspicion and fear that his own name evoked that even while his second son was being nominated by the Democratic Convention at Los Angeles in 1960 he remained, by mutual arrangement, hidden in discreet seclusion in a film star's mansion in Hollywood.

For the past eight years, of course, his seclusion had been involuntary. In December of 1961 Joe Kennedy was crippled by a stroke — and he never thereafter recovered the power either of speech or of mobility.

He knew, it is said, that two of his sons had been murdered — and, as his other constant companion was a television set, he must presumably also have learnt of last summer's other sort of tragedy at Chappaquiddick.

But of the thoughts that went through his mind nothing can ever be known. In the whole situation there cannot help seeming a strong element of classic Greek tragedy.

For Joe Kennedy was more than the Founding Father — he was the driving force behind the whole Kennedy quest for fame and success.

Philosophy Gift

It was not just a case of the family fortune that he had made available for political use — though without it, it is highly questionable whether his second son (the eldest, Joseph P. Kennedy Jr., was killed during the war) would ever have reached the White House.

Equally important was the gift of his own philosophy that he handed on to his children.

"The thing daddy kept telling us," one of his daughters once publicly recalled, "was that coming second was just no good; you had to win, win, win."

For Old Joe himself "winning" had long since ceased to mean anything else but the ability to manipulate and control the Kennedy fortune usually estimated at over $300 million.

It was a fortune that he had built up entirely alone — from successive interests as varied as banking, Hollywood movie-making, Scotch whisky importing and finally Chicago real estate.

But though a suite on the 30th floor of the Pan-American building in Manhattan became his only visible power-base there was a time when his own ambitions reached at least as far as his sons' achievements.

In 1932, at the depth of the American Depression, he was one of the few businessmen to come out in favour of Roosevelt and the New Deal — and it was from the hands of Roosevelt that he received the only three positions in public life that he was ever to occupy.

In 1934 he became the first chairman of the then just-founded Securities Exchange Commission — and though he stayed in the job only a year he was widely considered to have made a striking success in it.

A year later — again at the direct request of his friend, F.D.R. — he took on another of the government's "boiler-room" jobs, this time as chairman of the Maritime Commission.

Then, at last, came his reward. In 1938 Roosevelt nominated him to the then glittering post of Ambassador to the Court of St. James.

For a time it seemed as if the new Ambassador — whose nine handsome children caught the nation's fancy — was destined to score yet another notable triumph.

Praise in Press

When he left London in the autumn of 1940 (it was never quite clear whether it was intended to be for good or simply to go home on leave) the British press was loud and unanimous in his praise.

Their tune, however, was very soon to change. For no sooner was he back in America than the Ambassador committed the fatal mistake of making known what until then had been only his private thoughts.

Democracy, he announced, was "finished in England" — adding for good measure that it was "bunk" to say that Britain was fighting for democracy. "She's fighting for self-preservation — and I say we aren't going in; only over my dead body."

Almost overnight on both sides of the Atlantic Kennedy found himself condemned as, at best, "an appeaser" and, at worst, "a quisling"; even 20 years later when he was fighting his son for the Democratic nomination, Lyndon Johnson could not resist hurling in the jibe at one State caucus, "I was never any Chamberlain umbrella man" — and everyone present knew what he meant.

It took Old Joe himself some time to realise just how finally he had crushed all his former political aspirations. For a period he continued to bombard Roosevelt with job requests.

No one has ever managed to pinpoint at what precise stage this disappointed but determined man decided to vindicate himself through his children.

But the crushing effect that the death on active service of his eldest son in 1944 had upon him — for months he seemed to lose all relish for life — strongly suggests that by then the scheme of vicarious political achievement had already formed in his mind.

Stain of Defeat

The effort that Joe Kennedy put into his fighting his sons' battles was all the more remarkable as from the beginning it was accepted within the family that there could never be any public acknowledgment of his role.

To the stain of defeatism over the war there had now been added the taint of support for McCarthyism in

Hess Lure Set By Bond Creator

THE MANCHESTER GUARDIAN

LONDON — A secret service coup schemed by Ian Fleming lured Rudolf Hess to Britain in May, 1941.

This disclosure is made in "A History of the British Secret Service" by Richard Deacon. Deacon claims that the British government then made one of the "major blunders" of the war by claiming that Hess was insane.

•

"The government handled the Hess affair with singular ineptitude and left many neutrals wondering whether what they had first regarded as a crack in the Nazi regime might not be a crack in the British hierachy," he writes.

The inhibitions which prevented the government from fully exploiting the incident were due to the fear that the pro-German influence in high places was still strong, according to Deacon.

"Thus the official British line on Hess coincided exactly with the German line — that Hess was insane. No doubt the Germans were greatly relieved about this. It was a major blunder by the British government, and played right into the hands of the Germans."

Deacon says that Hess was lured to Britain by a faked horoscope, a plan thought out by Fleming, then with the department of naval intelligence and later famed as the author of the James Bond novels.

He passed the idea on to two friends — one in another branch of British intelligence and the other a contact in Switzerland who was an authority on astrology.

•

"Fleming himself had decided that Rudolf Hess was their likeliest candidate . . . not only was Hess the keenest of the Nazi leaders to make peace with Britain to free Germany for the task of invading Russia, but he was also a mystic, a student of astrology and a consorter with occultists and fortune-tellers, even being credited with being Hitler's secret astrologer."

Fleming's contact in Switzerland succeeded in planting on Hess an astrologer who was also a British agent. All that was needed was to signify in the faked horoscope that the date of May 10 was particularly promising for "a journey in quest of peace" and that the indications were that the place in which to "seek peace" was in Scotland.

"Saturday night, May 10, was the occasion of the last major air raid on Britian from Germany and on that night Rudolf Hess, Deputy Fuhrer, Reichminister Without Portfolio, piloted his own plane to Britain and parachuted onto Scottish soil."

The book traces the development and organization of intelligence and counter-espionage services in the

RUDOLPH HESS

United Kingdom from the reign of Henry the Seventh to the present day. It includes the elaborate plot during the war to kidnap the Duke and Duchess of Windsor, ordered by Hitler and Ribbentrop.

The duke was spending his time in Madrid and Lisbon, and the kidnap attempt was to have taken place while he was hunting near the Spanish border.

He was to have been "inadvertently" lured over the frontier by a ruse, but at the last moment the British secret service had warning of the plot, Deacon said.

Opportunity to Demonstrate The Maturity We Encourage

By ART STOTT

When Roul Tunley was compiling his wide-ranging report on juvenile delinquency about 10 years ago, he made a significant point on one of the anomalies of American (he could have said North American) treatment of young people. He drew attention to the prevailing inclination of adults to encourage children to grow up, achieve maturity—often a precocious maturity—and then deny them the opportunity to prove themselves. From childhood they were urged to be little men, then bigger men and to recognize responsibility only to find that, willing as they might be, there was scant opportunity to practice the quality in jobs, which were not available to them, or in decision-making, which they were denied.

Stott

Mr. Tunley pictured a sort of hang-your-clothes-on-the-hickory-limb-but-don't-go-near-the-water dichotomy. He didn't consider this the sole cause of unacceptable behaviour by some adolescents, but he suggested it could be one important influence alienating them from a society run by their elders.

I'm far from ready to let the teenagers take over the whole show. In my opinion they haven't the experience, knowledge or judgment to handle the problems that would confront them if they did. But that doesn't stop me from noting the successes a number of them have achieved in activities originated and carried out largely on their own steam. The marches for millions is a case in point. So are other projects, including those launched to help various groups participate in Expos, both Canadian and Japanese.

The satisfactions they draw from accomplishment is, to me, an important element in the maturing process. They conceive an idea. They organize to implement it. They work to achieve their goal. And, frequently to the surprise of adults, they make it. In the process they have faced problems and made decisions.

★ ★ ★

It seems to me that a comparable situation occurs in the universities. The growth of student unrest is as natural as the burgeoning of fuzz on the face of an adolescent. It takes different form to that of earlier generations—it's always different partly because earlier student unrest is beyond the experience of the currently restless. They weren't around to notice it before. And admittedly the causes bulk larger and arise faster. Today's youngsters are a long way from the age of the ox cart.

But where their burgeoning maturity has been recognized, they seem to have channelled their energies and abilities along more productive courses than where they've been treated as kids, told to shut up and sit down.

The point was made to me the other day by a gentleman high in the councils of the University of Victoria as we discussed the relative freedom of his institution from the violent confrontations which have occurred in some others.

★ ★ ★

"We've listened to what they've had to say," he explained. "A lot of it has made sense and we've agreed to those of their proposals that were feasible and sound. And we've tried to be honest with them.

"Very often," he added, "when their suggestions have been far out, we've just kept listening until, having talked themselves out on something, they've recognized its impracticability and have withdrawn a proposal.

"We've appreciated their intentions and general displays of good, common sense. Sure they've been fired up at times, have run off the track. But, given a chance to hash things over, they've usually been able to sort out the sensible from the foolish and abandoned the latter. It doesn't always work. If someone among them can keep the fire burning to smoke up calm reason, they remain heated. But so far, we've been comparatively lucky. Maybe we won't always be."

Maybe not. It seems to me, though, that the course my friend outlined is logical and appropriate. It appears to strike a happy medium—no hard-nosed rejection of change because it is change, no addle-pated acceptance of change just because it is change, but a reasonable consideration of proposals to determine their merit or otherwise.

★ ★ ★

The age grouping which Roul Tunley discussed a decade ago differs from that represented by undergraduates at Gordon Head by a matter of two to six years. The principle involved is not so substantially divided. Tunley pointed to the effects of rejecting in practice the concept of maturity encouraged among the young. My friend discussing the University of Victoria, indicated the benefits which can come from appreciating progress toward maturity on the part of young people among whom that development is fostered.

The point my friend made was that you equip people to assume responsibility by giving them some opportunity to assume it. That gives them a chance to expand judgment, learning what is possible to them and what is beyond their capacities.

Here's the high sign for those who want good taste

$10 MILLION LOAN TO AID MINE IN B.C.

WASHINGTON (CP) — A $10,000,000 loan to Fording Coal Ltd. to help finance the purchase of U.S. equipment for a coal mine being developed in British Columbia was announced Tuesday by the Export-Import Bank of the United States.

Chairman Henry Kearns said in announcing the authorization that total cost of the project is estimated at $80,000,000, of which some $17,900,000 will be spent for equipment manufactured by U.S. companies.

Incorporated in December, 1968, Fording was established for the development and operation of an open-pit coal mine at a location about 30 miles north of Natal, B.C.

Scotiabank

The Bank of Nova Scotia Tuesday reported net earnings of $17.7 million or $1.18 a share for the year ended Oct. 31, compared with $15.5 million or $1.04 a share the previous year.

Total assets reached a record high of $5.9 billion up 13.9 per cent from $5.2 billion a year earlier.

Total revenue was $439 million against $325 million and expenses $379 million against $275.8 million.

Income from loans rose to $355 million from $253 million.

Pay 'N' Save

The Seattle-based Pay 'N Save Corp., a regional drug, hardware and department store firm, has reported a record quarterly net income of $522,519 on sales of $19.5 million.

The figures showed increases over the $461,874 and $17 million reported for the corresponding quarter of 1968. The firm, which has outlets in the U.S. northwest and Alaska, showed earnings per common share of 26 cents, an increase of 3 cents over last year's figures.

Weston

Nine-month operations of George Weston Ltd. produced net income of 98 cents a share of $657.8 million, up $177.7 compared with $1.66 counting non-recurring profits of five cents and 91 cents, respectively.

Actual operating income this year was 93 cents, against 75 cents last year, based on sales of $657.8 million, up $177.7 million, and operating income of $10.8 million, up $1.9 million.

Net income for the nine months was $11.38 million, against $18.8 million. The company said its sales gross included Kelly, Douglas and Co. results for the full period, unlike last year.

French Petroleum

Net cash income was higher but net profit per share declined fractionally in the nine months ended Sept. 30, reports French Petroleum of Canada Ltd.

Production income was $2.48 million, against $2.36 million in the period last year, and with investment income the total was $2.6 million, compared with $2.49 million.

After expenses, net profit came to $788,663, down $11,100, or 14 cents a share vs. 14½ cents.

Ponder

Ponder Oils Ltd. and its two wholly-owned subsidiaries had a net income of $177,086 or 6.7 cents a share during the first nine months of 1969.

The Calgary-based company said in a statement that figures are not available for the same period of 1968.

Ponder said that after paying a dividend semi-annually since 1966 it has suspended dividend payments to conserve funds for anticipated drilling commitments outside North America.

Gold Loses Glitter for Speculators

By HAROLD MORRISON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

The steep decline in the free-market price of gold reflects renewed confidence in paper money. It also raises fresh question about the real value of the yellow metal.

When currencies are under attack, hoarders tend to swing to gold, pushing up prices in panic attempts to hold on to something durable. The rush to buy gold tends to subside when confidence in national currencies returns or when governments indicate they are taking strong measures to ensure that the value of paper money is not eroded.

The puzzling element in the current situation is that while many of the major currencies appear to have been stabilized, erosion of the value of some of these currencies remains a possibility. Inflation is a trans-Atlantic problem though it would appear that, at least in the case of the United States, government policies are designed to restrain inflationary trends even if this means the threat of a mild recession.

NO INTEREST PAID

Combined with this prospect of restraint is the fact that investment in gold does not carry with it the possibility of profit unless the price itself goes up. There are no earnings in interest at a time when interest rates generally are among the highest in history.

Sensing that governments appear to have solved currency problems, at least temporarily, and knowing that national reserves now can be augmented by the "paper gold" of the International Monetary Fund, speculators have been wondering what to do with their gold hoardings.

OFTEN CHALLENGED

Decisions to get what price they can for their holdings may also have been influenced by South Africa's decision to sell a portion of its gold production on the free market, even when prices are steadily declining.

The official price of $35 U.S. an unce has repeatedly been challenged over the years by South Africa, Canada and other gold exporters. It has remained unchanged for more than three decades when prices of other commodities have doubled and trebled. The argument often heard among exporters is that the official price should be between $50 and $70 an ounce.

When the two-tiered price structure was established 18 months ago, the immediate prospect was that the free-market price would reflect the real value of the metal and climb substantially. Now it has dropped to a point where buyers have to be convinced that the free-market price won't fall below the official price.

Current gyrations probably are not a true reflection of what gold may eventually fetch on the open market. A sudden inflationary jolt or even an internal political crisis among some of the leading countries could sart another gold stampede.

But at the moment gold has lost its glamour. In terms of price change, other metals, such as nickel, have achieved greater glitter.

Dust Control Chief Named By Neptune

Pollution-conscious Neptune Terminals Ltd., North Vancouver, has appointed its first dust control officer for the firm's bulk shipping depot.

John B. Climo, 44, a science graduate of Auckland University and associate of the New Zealand Institute of Chemistry, will be responsible for seeing that coal and chemical dusts from the terminal are within North Vancouver air pollution requirements.

Neptune plans to open its coal handling facility, worth $7.5 million, early in the new year. It claims to have incorporated the latest in dust-control devices in terminal design.

Climo will be responsible for determining the quantity of moisture needed to suppress dust in the coal handling operation, or which other dust control measure will be used in the terminal, which also will ship potash, salt cake, ammonium sulphate, di-ammonium phosphate and methanol.

Trucking Control Talks Due

TORONTO (CP) — Transport Minister Donald Jamieson announced Tuesday that a federal-provincial conference on trucking with his provincial counterparts will begin Dec. 2 in Ottawa. Jamieson made the announcement to the Automotive Transport Association Ontario.

Jamieson said the government has decided to recommend early proclamation of Part 3 of the 1967 National Transportation Act.

Part 3 would end the arrangement under which provincial transport boards serve as federal agents in regulating interprovincial and international trucking operations.

"We feel the time has come to begin to assume some of these federal responsibilities in a direct fashion," said the transport minister.

"The purpose of the conference with the provincial ministers next week is to discuss how much and how soon direct addministration can be undertaken."

He did not say how much control the government was seeking.

Statistical Conflict At Hearing on Gas

OTTAWA (CP) — A public hearing designed to set new national policy for exports of natural gas to the fuel-hungry United States opened Tuesday with a statistical conflict on just how much gas Canada should keep in the next quarter-century.

Debate before the National Energy Board about future domestic requirements began late on opening day of the biggest public policy session on Canada's power resources since a royal commission on energy led to establishment of the national board 10 years ago.

Legal process and procedural tangles took most of the day—one measure of the scope of hearings which are scheduled to settle both long-term export policy and five specific applications that would almost double present gas export commitments to about 9.5 trillion cubic feet up to 1995.

DEBATE STARTS EARLY

The statistical debate emerged as soon as discussion started on what board chairman Robert Howland termed the philosophy of gas export policy. First topic in the general policy argument is "reasonably foreseeable requirements for natural gas for use in Canada."

Consolidated Natural Gas Co. of Calgary, subsidiary of Northern Natural Gas Co. of Omaha, Neb., and a new bidder for export rights, challenged projections of Canada's gas needs made in a study by energy board staff.

The staff study, published two weeks ago, forecast domestic gas needs to 1990. Consolidated presented research by consulting economists David Ross and William Lee of Vancouver indicating lower requirements between now and 1999.

The Ross-Lee study, which they said was projected from more up-to-date statistical signposts than the board study's 1966 base, shows lower annual requirements by a margin that ranges from 105 billion cubic feet in 1975 to 505 billion in 1990.

Total of the five export applications before the board would require 564 billion feet a year to fill, almost double the present rate of exports.

Court Action Delays Hearing On Takeover Bid

TORONTO (CP) — Consumers' Gas Co. has decided again to extend the period for withdrawal of deposited shares in its $250,000,000 takeover of Union Gas Co. of Canada Ltd.

Consumers' president Oakah L. Jones said in a statement the new date to reclaim Union shares is Dec. 12. The company first made an extension Nov. 3 to Dec. 2.

Jones said the extension was necessary to protect the interests of Union shareholders "in view of the actions of a small group who have stalled the scheduled hearing before the Ontario Energy Board by seeking a Supreme Court order prohibiting the board from proceeding."

The board hearing began Monday and was suspended until Friday after it was told the Supreme Court of Ontario would be asked to prohibit further consideration of the takeover until objectors have had time to prepare their case.

Donald Wright, counsel for the city of Chatham and a Chatham-based citizen group, told the hearing he would ask for a writ because the board earlier refused to adjourn the hearing.

Moon Has Echo Chamber Between Lava

HOUSTON (WP) — Scientists here now think that when the junked moonship Intrepid struck the moon last Thursday it hit a surface made like a gravel sandwich between two layers of lava—making it ring like a bell.

"What we have," reported Dr. Gary Latham of Columbia University's Lamont Geological Observatory, "is a first glimmer of understanding of what happened" when Intrepid was fired at the lunar surface.

What the seismologists believe, he said in an interview, is that Intrepid's signal was trapped between two lava layers, thus producing a signal that bounced back and forth again and again.

The lava-gravel-lava sandwich, in other words, acted like an echo chamber, propagating this ringing over and over.

The same impact on earth, seismologists say, would have produced a signal lasting no more than a minute. On the moon it did not even reach a peak of intensity for 15 minutes, continuing and gradually dying down, to seismologists' astonishment, for another 40 minutes.

The event immediately made Dr. Maurice Ewing of the Lamont Observatory exclaim: "It was as though one had struck a bell in a church belfry a single blow, and its reverberation continued for 55 minutes."

The event also made the seismologists working here agree that, once they achieved understanding, it would mean a major, completely unanticipated discovery" about the lunar interior.

Since Thursday they have studied and restudied the tracings received by radio from the superbly sensitive seismometer left on the surface by the Apollo astronauts.

They have checked geological observations. They have checked chemical analyses of the Apollo 11 samples of lunar material.

Area Studied By Geologists

Here is how Dr. Latham now tells the unfolding story:

"The area between the impact and the seismometer is one that had been carefully studied by the geologists. And they had mapped an underlying rubble caused by a huge collision sometime in time.

"Over that rubble is mare-like material—basalt or lava like the material of the Sea of Tranquility or other maria.

"On top of that is part of the fra mauro formation — debris or ejecta which most people believe was blasted out of the nearby imbrium basin. In other words, a loosely consolidated rubble. And on top of that is more material that can be seen from the surface, again a basalt or lava-like material.

"So you wind up with a rubble that is very low velocity material compared with the lava, a material that can trap seismic energy very efficiently. And the signal will bounce back and forth between those two lava layers."

As the seismologists further pondered, however, they thought of a possible rub. On earth, even in such a sandwich, such a signal would be very quickly damped.

Absence of Fluids, Gasses

"Here, too," Latham explained, "we think we have a clue.

"On earth all such materials are filled with liquids and gas" — gas, petroleum or water trapped in the crevices and cracks of almost all rocks. "On the moon, Apollo 11 sample analyses have shown, there is a nearly complete absence of such fluids and gases. You can hardly measure them.

"We think now that on earth the presence of such materials leads to the damping. And, for the moon, it means that almost any material will just ring like a bell.

"Other hypotheses may emerge. But for now, this one seems best."

For the moon, this theory — Latham also said — may now explain fully 100 events observed by the seismometer left by Apollo 11. "These lasted as long as nine minutes, and none of us was prepared to believe anything as long could be caused by an impact. But now we think we observed a hundred meteorite impacts."

This may begin to give science its first precise measurement of the rate at which meteorites hit the moon, causing craters, churning and re-churning the surface.

Russian Car Market Draws 'Beetle' Interest

BONN (WP) — Volkswagen has expressed interest to Soviet officials in finding an outlet for its world famous "beetle" compact car on the Russian market.

Though there has been no formal response from Moscow, Soviet interest in what has long been a national symbol of West Germany has been evident in the last few months, and has been taken here as a sign of the increasing readiness of the Moscow leadership to separate trade opportunities from politics in dealings with the West.

According to a company spokesman, Volkswagen president Kurt Lotz made an "indirect offer" for talks to Soviet Minister of Light Industry N. N. Tarasov at this fall's Frankfurt auto show.

Lotz reportedly emphasized Volkswagen's proven ability to manufacture cars in all climates, as shown by its plant operations in Brazil, Mexico, South Africa and Australia.

Plant officials said they doubt that the new Fiat plant in the Soviet Union, which will produce 500,000 cars a year, will fully satisfy growing demands for cars there.

The Italian firm however, is more readily acceptable to the Soviet leadership for political reasons, industry officials say.

Museum Searches High and Low For Clunkers

This Is What They Look Like

Has Anybody Got a Streetcar to Hang Up?

By HUMPHRY DAVY

Who would have thought the streetcar, a familiar sight in Victoria only 21 years ago, would become a prized collector's item?

Well, the Provincial Museum is looking for one now, and so are other museums.

●

History curator Daniel P. Gallacher said a streetcar is needed to form part of a proposed collection of vehicles used throughout the history of B.C.

The vehicles would be assembled and stored for future restoration and ultimate display, he said.

"But they are hard to come by," Gallacher said. "I have inspected two on Vancouver Island but they were too far gone to be of much use."

He would like someone to inform him where one can be found.

Gallacher is looking for other vehicles, such as a "Bennett Buggy" and a rum runners' boat.

And what is so important about a "smugglers' boat" in the history of the province?

The history books are mum on the subject, but many family fortunes were made in Victoria and Vancouver by smuggling booze to the United States during the days of prohibition in the 1920s.

Many of them plowed their profits back into local businesses.

●

The "Bennett Buggy" is more familiar to residents of the Interior. It was named after Prime Minister R. B. Bennett who had the tough job of running the country during the "great depression."

Some farmers were so hard up they couldn't afford gas for their cars. So they took out the engine and dismantled the hood and hitched the body or coach to a horse.

Gallacher also hopes to acquire, in time, a 1940 warplane, an old taxi, a truck used in the 1920s, and various types of internal combustion engines.

"A decade would be symbolized by a particular vehicle when setting up an exhibition of a particular period," he explained. "They will all be needed with time."

"Many things in use today will be antiques in a few years," he added. "Changes take place quickly these days."

A B.C. Hydro official, who had a lot to do with the disposal of the street cars, didn't think there was much chance of finding one in this area.

●

"The better ones were sold for less than $100 for use as summer camps," he said. "I imagine most of these have now been replaced by summer cottages."

He said the older cars were burned and the metal sold to Capital Iron Ltd., Store St.

He said a U.S. contractor bought the rails.

Fee for NFB Films Distresses Educators

Educators and social workers today were distressed by a federal government decision to charge for National Film Board films.

"The films produced by the board play an important part in the education of young and elderly people," said Dr. C. P. Jameson, chairman of the Greater Victoria School Board. "Everything should be done to promote their distribution, not restrict their use."

The rate structure for films, now loaned out free to various organizations, is expected to be announced next month and go into effect on the first of the year. It was indicated that six short films of 10 minutes each might rent for as high as $24.

The charge, as well as a reduction of NFB staff, is part of the government's austerity plan.

DOUBLE CHARGE

On a per capita basis, Canadians pay 33 cents a year for the NFB film service.

Father Patrick Ratchford, in charge of the Sir Thomas More Centre, said the low income groups which make use of the films for education and entertainment will suffer most.

"I also object to being taxed for the service and paying as well a user's fee," he said. "A small nominal charge would not be objectionable, but that doesn't seem to be the plan."

He said welfare groups will not be able to afford films if there is a charge and will be cut off from an important communication and educational resource.

"NFB films is an important resource venture and helps continuing education," he said. "In Newfoundland, they have done much to help various communities understand one another—they brought together communities which had never spoken to one another.

He said NFB also had performed important work among the Indians.

1,000 FILMS MONTHLY

NFB, which operates a library and theatre at 811 Wharf Street, loans out about 1,000 films a month to various organizations.

An NFB official estimated about 30,000 people a month view the films. The figure did not include school children since schools usually buy NFB films and run their own libraries.

Public reaction to a charge for the educational service has been so strong that school board officials have decided to hold an open house on Dec. 29, 30 and 31 and to show—free of charge—any film requested by visitors.

It will be held at the board's theatre.

Opposition to the charge came mostly from low income groups which already have difficulty making ends.

Mrs. Catherine Horne, executive director of Silver Threads, said the fee is "unfair."

Yarrows, VMD Face Help Lack

A heavy work load, including a number of new contracts, is quickly drying up the supply of skilled labor in Victoria shipyards and heavy industry.

Both Yarrows, Ltd., and Victoria Machinery Depot, which now have enough work to carry them to the end of July, are searching for workers.

Yarrows, which laid off hundreds of men over the summer, has $5.75 million worth of contracts, creating the need over a period of time for 100 more men.

VMD has gone as far as to advertise for men on the prairies.

The $3.3 million refit of the destroyer-escort HMCS Gatineau at HMC Dockyard in Esquimalt is one reason why private operations face a shortage of qualified tradesmen.

The dockyard has taken on between 300 and 400 men for the job.

HAVING TROUBLE

Yarrows' general manager John Wallace said many of the men his firm laid off found new jobs right away, and aren't available now.

So far, he said the demand for skilled labor has been met by hiring new people. However, his company is having trouble finding machinists and engine-fitters, and will soon need electricians and pipefitters.

The bulk of the demand is for welders and iron workers.

Canada Manpower and the trade unions are working with the companies in attempts to fill vacancies, Wallace said.

Harold Husband, VMD president, said his company is bidding for more contracts. "We want to keep our order book as full as possible."

He needs 25 machinists and welders. They have advertised on the prairies for men, but would prefer people living in Victoria, "our old employees if possible."

Husband said many of them have come back after the company canvassed the area.

Husband said the company, now out of the shipbuilding business, is seeking every alternative and opportunity for industry in Victoria.

The demand for skilled men shows that the new emphasis is working, he said.

WALLACE
. . . won't be easy

Yarrows' Wallace said there will be difficulties if the increase in available men doesn't match the gradual buildup of work. It won't be easy to find men in other parts of the country and bring them in, he said, because similar shortage also exist throughout Canada.

George Bevis, manager of Manpower's Victoria branch, said his people are checking the local labor supply to see if it will be sufficient.

LAST RESORT

A campaign to bring people into Victoria to work would be a last resort, Bevis said.

Manpower will make sure that all qualified people are working and then step up training programs to improve partially qualified people, before taking that step.

Wallace and Husband said they are not doing any training other than the normal apprenticeship program. Wallace said it takes five years to train an apprentice, and work at Yarrow's is not steady enough to keep a man in training that long, creating a shortage of apprentices there.

FROM THE HEART, a healthy Florenda Joy Dick presents a $3,857.88 cheque to Dr. A. C. Pickles, Royal Jubilee Hospital administrator. The six-year-old's life was saved early this year by heart surgery at the Mayo Clinic in Rochester, Minn. It was financed through a comunity drive sparked by Times columnist Arthur Mayse. The cheque, representing surplus funds, will be used to buy equipment to treat heart disease at Jubilee. With Florenda is her mother, Mrs. David Dick, 355 Gorge Road.

Too Many People Trip Project Learning Start

By BOB MITCHELL

Just about everyone who attended the first Project Learning meeting at Esquimalt Senior Secondary Tuesday agreed it is time to determine the over-all aims of the education system.

They seemed to accept the proposition that change in society is inevitable and necessary, and that change in education is long overdue.

They even agreed that schools should be places where students can develop as individuals in a non-regimented learning environment.

But they ran into a stumbling block when it came to deciding which members of the public should represent the Esquimalt group on one of six zone committees to determine the aims of education.

Thirty-three of the 100 persons who attended the meeting indicated they would like to participate on the committee. But then they learned only four places were available on each committee, the rest being taken by students, teachers, trustees and administrators.

WIENS
. . . hits insularity

Only a Handful of Teachers

More than one-quarter of the attendance was made up of high school students, with not more than a handful of teachers.

Dr. John Wiens, director of instruction for the Greater Victoria school board and the person mainly responsible for launching Project Learning, said while not everyone can participate on a committee, they can contribute by communicating to their representatives on the committees.

Several people said the degree of interest shown by the Tuesday turnout justified increasing the number of zone committees to give everyone a chance to contribute directly.

The matter was finally resolved when it was decided to accept the committee structure as originally proposed.

The meeting opened with a talk by Dr. Wiens who outlined some of the reasons why Project Learning had been born. He said the aims of education have never been seriously questioned, with the result that ideals are in conflict with actual practice in the schools.

"I think we have lost sight of our educational objectives when we ask our children the question when they come home from school: 'What mark did you get on the exam?' rather than 'What did you learn?' "

Dr. Wiens displayed on a screen colored circles representing groups such as students, parents, teachers and trustees. He said the tendency is for the groups to become insular, with the result that communication between them is lost.

The only time they do come together is during a conflict, and then they clash rather than harmonize.

To illustrate he read a sentence from a letter written by an American high school student to his principal:

"Why do we have to disrupt something to get anybody to listen to us seriously?"

Dr. Wiens concluded:

"One of the reasons we want to have students on these committees is that students in this school ten years from now will have children attending school."

The second public meeting will take place tonight at 8 p.m. in Reynolds junior secondary.

WORKMAN KILLED AS LOAD TOPPLES

A 22-year-old construction worker was killed this morning at an Esquimalt apartment site when a slingload of particle board slipped and swept him off a third floor balcony.

His name has not been released as next of kin are being notified.

Esquimalt police said the man was with two other workers, employed by Capital Builders Ltd., on the balcony of an apartment site at 1337 Saunders about 9:10 a.m. He was helping unload 50 sheets of particle board from a mobile crane sling.

He was cutting a metal band on the particle board when the load tipped and swept him off the balcony. The load landed on top of him.

Nine Contractors To Bid on Pool

Nine major contractors in Victoria and Vancouver are preparing bids on the city's new swimming pool.

Ed Phillips, executive director of the Amalgamated Construction Association regional branch, said interest in the pool and the response of contractors is excellent.

"When you get nine majors bidding you invariably provide a much broader base which can only benefit the owner."

Five of the firms studying plans are local, four are from Vancouver.

The sub-trade deadline for submissions is 4 p.m. Dec. 8. The deadline for general contractors is noon, Dec. 11.

Phillips said the reason for the great interest in the project was "ideal timing."

"City officials approached ACA some time ago to ask our assistance in finding the best bidding period," Phillips said. "We suggested this particular time because normally at this time of the year there is a bit of a sag in the construction industry."

The $1.6 million project is scheduled for construction as soon as the final bid is awarded.

Construction could be delayed if the bids come in higher than the estimated $1.6 million.

With the bulk of the money coming from the McPherson Estate trust fund, city council members have indicated that they will not go above the estimated cost.

The pool is to be built in Central Park as a replacement for the Crystal Garden.

Ask The Times

Q. What is the word meaning fear of empty spaces? And also the word meaning fondness of books? — Mrs. A.M.

A. The first one's easy — agoraphobia. The second depends on how far your "fondness" goes. If the fondness reaches a preoccupation, call it bibliomania. If it goes as far as worship, call the result bibliolatry. If you hide or hoard your books, you are a bibliotaphe. But what you're looking for is probably the word that simply means love of books for their rare and good qualities — bibliophilism.

APPEAL DRIVE TURNS TO ANSWERING SERVICE

United Red Feather - Red Cross Appeal organizers are making it as simple as possible to give if you haven't already.

Their latest idea is a 24-hour telephone answering service that started today.

Anyone who hasn't been canvassed can phone 385-6708 any time, day or night, and a United Appeal worker will contact them the next day.

The service will continue until the campaign ends Dec. 13.

This year's fund drive is $94,000 short of the $694,000 target.

Last year at this time the drive for $655,000 was trailing by $40,000.

Arthur Mayse . . .

IT IS A MATTER OF historical record that the Puritans of early New England banned Christmas observance as heathenish, and busted any scofflaw who so much as whistled a carol. I wouldn't go that far, but it's high time we restored The Season to Be Jolly to its rightful place in the calendar.

As matters now stand, the Ghost of Christmas Yet to Come begins its haunting no later than October. Before that month is done, the careless shopper may find that the greeting card he snatched up in haste reads "Merry Christmas" instead of a "Happy Birthday" or "Get Well Soon."

By November, the contagion is spreading fast. It is both virulent and sneaky.

The other evening, for instance, I surprised my wife and myself by asking, "What would you like for Christmas?"

"What I'd like," she said, "is to go back to September, when nobody was asking that question."

"Sorry," I said. "It just kind of slipped out."

"It's been too short a year," Win said. "Something's happened to a month. I'm definitely not ready for Christmas, I don't even want to think about it. But you can't escape it."

She was right. Once we did have an autumn period of grace before the big push began. During those weeks, we weren't required to plan anything more important than a final cutting of the lawn between damp spells, or what to do with the next weekend. If we'd seen anything Christmasy in a store, we would merely have assumed that someone had forgotten to take it down and stow it away the previous January.

★

But that was then, and as our grey-on-grey television screen was busily reminding us, Christmas no longer comes but once a year.

Against a background of quaint old-fashioned toys no doubt carved by gnomes in the Black Forest, the commercial offered a rundown of the latest under-the-tree gifts for children.

You can bet that even now in November a lot of kids are hoping for one or other of those costly playthings, as who can blame them. They also help explain why many a parent will still be paying off the Ghost of Christmas Past when next March brings the daffodils.

★

If Yule preparations begin too soon, by the same token, the aftermath lasts too long.

I was enlarging on that theme when Win spoke from behind one of those high-colored advertising inserts that this daily's mechanized gnomes occasionally tuck into your paper.

"I remember once you told me you'd never learned to play pool," she said.

True. As a son of the manse, I'd been gloomily certain that some lynx-eyed congregation member would spot me for sure if I slunk into a pool hall, and pass the word that the minister's boy had taken the road to hell. Later, I was ashamed to admit ignorance. But the idea of taking cue in hand has always been accompanied by a delightful sense of sin to be indulged when the time was ripe.

My dear one listened patiently to this explanation. Then she said, "You know, we could give ourselves a pool table for Christmas."

"Now you're doing it," I pointed out.

"I didn't mean to," Win said. "I guess it's a conditioned reflex."

★

That it is, but I don't think we can place the entire blame for the rushing of the season on manufacturers and merchants eager to reap a rich harvest. It could be that the spirit of modern man yearns ahead to the time when, in theory if not always in fact, peace and goodwill prevail on earth.

After all, when else except on Christmas Eve or Christmas Day can you smile at a passing stranger without getting a suspicious glance, or at best a nod with the thought behind it, "now where did I meet him before?"

Even so, it's possible that we could be helping to kill off the year's best-loved festival by the double process of making it far too costly, and stretching it out too thin.

By this time, the evening was getting on, and tireless TV was occupied with another Christmas-oriented commercial.

"Of course," I said, "there are some things that have to be started early. Like your Christmas cakes." That was a hint, and I followed it with another. "How many did you make this year?"

"None," win said cheerfully. "And when I do make them, I'm going to hide them. That way, maybe I'll save them from some people in this house who can't wait 'till Christmas."

That, come to think of it, is now a mere 25 shopping days away, and what's the use of fighting it any longer?

Bill WALKER

The Minister of National Health and Welfare is a dedicated hockey fan, and a dedicated Canadian, not necessarily in that order.

That much is completely certain after reading his dispatch concerning the future and well-being of Hockey Canada.

For the Honorable John Munro has come right out and stated that he, and "he" is government, is all for open competition between amateurs and professionals.

In his announced policy, the minister responsible for Hockey Canada, which, if you didn't know, really is a complete government undertaking, stated unequivocably;

"I believe Hockey Canada, abetted by the CAHA, should insist strongly at the next IIHF meeting on open competition."

Munro went on to say:

"I am fed up with the dual and phony standards of morality in international hockey; one for the European nations, another more stringent standard for Canadians."

And a "hurrah" and "huzzah" for Munro on that score.

It is half past time that Canada had a hand in dictating just what international hockey is all about, not kowtowing to the Russians and the Swedes at their every whim.

It is well known that the Russians don't go about anything unless they have a better than even chance of having their suggestions accepted. But this time they may have run into a tartar in Munro. He may not be there in person to present Canada's opinion, but his thoughts will be the ones that will be dictated.

For, in explaining the government's view on Hockey Canada, he has said:

"Hockey Canada has two simple objectives: to ice a good national team; to foster more and improved play. It begins, I reiterate, with co-operation—co-operation between the government, the CAHA, the NHL, the professional players, the colleges and the schools."

●

Which is what Hockey Canada's general manager Buck Houle said on his recent trip to the city. But Munro goes much further with announced policy and support, a subject that Houle touched on during his visit, but naturally, off the record.

However, Munro makes no bones about the task, or the problems that had beset the team previously.

First of all he says:

"Let me restate the reason for government interest in fostering sport. Hockey, for example, IS Canadian; it has been a vital part of the life and concern of an overwhelming number of plain Canadians for several generations. Hockey provides a community of interests and rivalries across Canada that's the real stuff of nationhood."

Why did the government get into the sport, and the spending of funds to support Hockey Canada?

A miserable record in international play, and a dimming of our national image . . . the apparent transfer of power in the NHL to the U.S. although Canada is the natural source of talent for pro hockey . . . the immense participation of young boys and the rapid tailing off among older boys and men . . . dissension and misunderstanding within Canadian hockey . . . alleged domination by the pros . . . a lack of playing facilities and no common reservoir of practical plans using new technology . . . a dearth of good coaches . . . and a general indadequate input of funds from public and private sources . . . and an antagonism, real or imagined, between hockey as a game—too rough, too demanding of time, to much specialization at too young an age—and the formal educational process.

Sound reasons all, and this is why out of it all has come Hockey Canada as an umbrella organization, representing all interests in hockey.

And to upgrade Canada's image once more. That is fundamental as well.

Munro calls it a relatively "crisis" situation, in reference to the National team.

For the goal here is to work toward an "ad hoc" team for the world championships as the Europeans do.

There also is that move to change radically, as quickly as possible, the IIHF rules on both players and play which inhibit a good representative team from Canada.

And finally, or the ultimate in this phase of operations, is to work toward placing the best possible 20 Canadian players on the ice for Canada in Montreal, in mid-March, 1970, for the world championships, within the limitations of both the IIHF rules and the internal obligations of the professional leagues.

Which is another story, and will be dealt with at a later date, because the method of determining the final 20 players is a complex one.

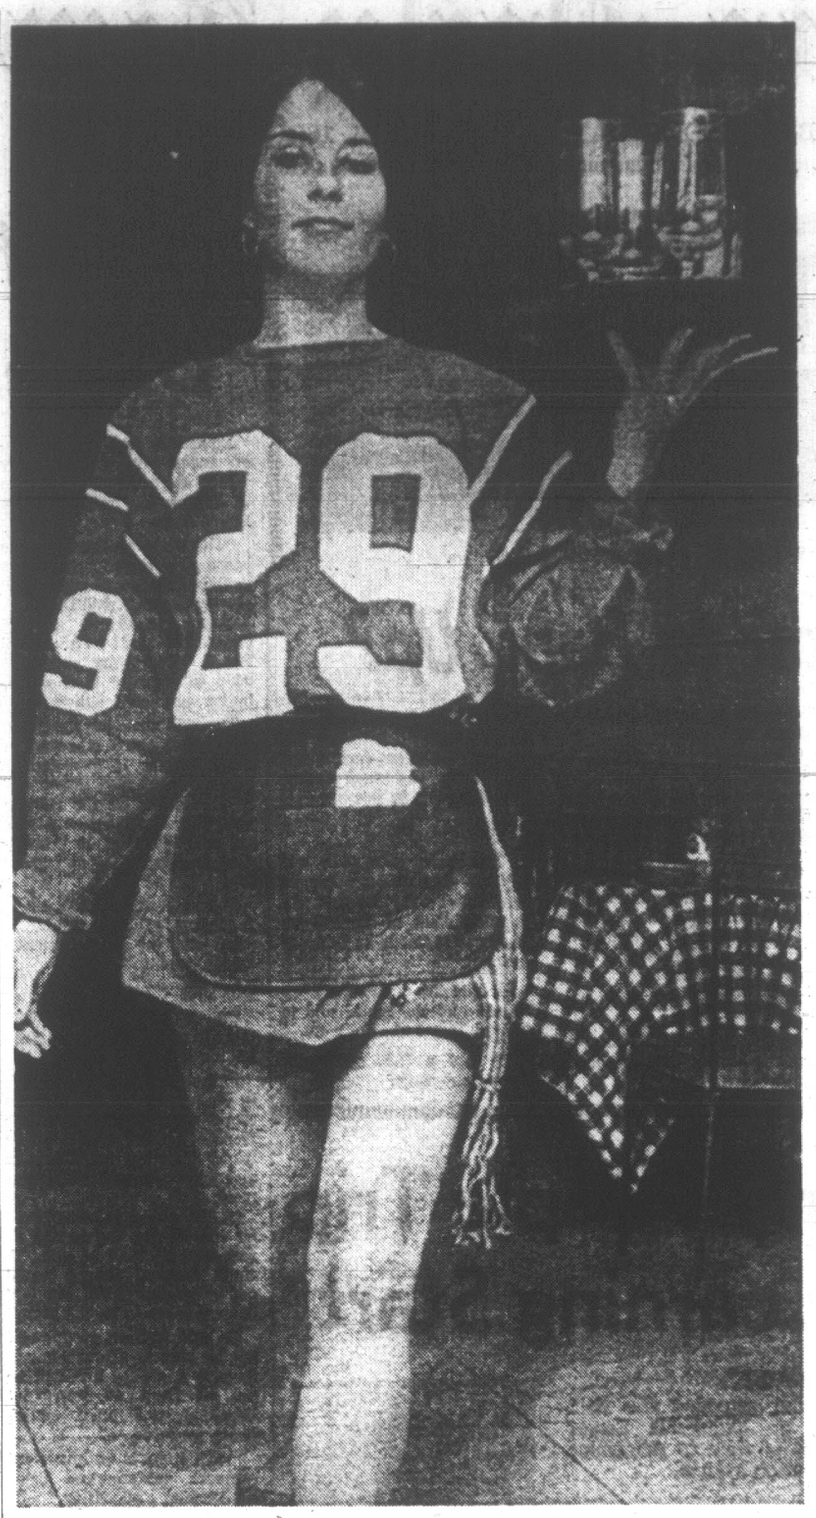

But right now, it appears that Buck Houle and company do have the right to go to the bank, which is the Department of Health and Welfare, and say:

"This is our budget; our obligations which should be honored are detailed; your continuing interest is appreciated; would you kindly oblige."

Munro is duty bound to answer:

"The minister and the Trudeau government are with you all the way. Good luck."

Which is the way it should be, and not too late, either.

BACKFIELD IN MOTION . . .

. . . may be the only penalty called against Lynne Ecew, who shows a new use for football sweaters. Rather than store them in mothballs, Montreal Alouettes, of Eastern Conference, permitted sweaters to be put to use in Montreal cafe. Sweaters—the smallest a size 46—became instant mini-skirts. Obviously No. 29 looks better on waitress Lynne than it ever did on defensive half Ed Rutkowski. (CP Wirephoto.)

Roughies Dominate West's Dream Team

TORONTO (CP) — The Western Football Conference champion Saskatchewan Roughriders have place 11 players on the West's 1969 all-star team.

The team was selected by vote of the Football Reporters of Canada. The Eastern all-stars were announced last week.

The Roughriders, who meet Ottawa Rough Riders in the Grey Cup final at Montreal next Sunday, had quarterback Ron Lancaster, fullback George Reed, flanker Hugh Campbell, centre Ted Urness, guard Jack Abendschan and tackle Clyde Brock on the offensive team.

Saskatchewan end Ken Reed, tackle Ed McQuarters, outside linebackers Wayne Shaw and Wally Dempsey and back Bruce Bennett were all named to the defensive squad.

Campbell tied with Ken Nielsen of Winnipeg Blue Bombers with 10 votes each, for all-star flanker position and Ken Reed tied for the second defensive end position with John Helton of Calgary Stampeders.

British Columbia Lions had six players selected while Calgary had five and Edmonton Eskimos and Winnipeg two each.

George Reed and defensive back John Wydareny of Edmonton were the only unanimous choices with 23 votes each, although Lancaster, fullback Jim Evenson of B.C. and Bennett each had 22 votes, just one short of the sweep.

The only other player to receive more than 20 votes was McQuarters with 21.

Cougars Tackle Royals

Ed Forslund has been absent, and will be again tonight, but there's no cause for concern among Victoria Cougar fans.

He'll be back Thursday, possibly Friday.

Forslund, who alternates with Geoff Ward as Victoria's goaltender, missed his regular turn Sunday in Kamloops when the Cougars clipped the Rockets 6-3 in B.C. Junior Hockey League play.

Victoria coach Doug Anderson said he gave Forslund "a few days off" to remain in Vernon and tend to some family matters.

AT WESTMINSTER

Forsland's absence means Ward will play in the nets for a third straight game tonight when the Cougars visit New Westminster to meet the last-place Royals.

But Ed's absence doesn't worry Anderson.

"Because Forslund is the holdover, I guess you might say he's No. 1," the Cats' coach said. "But, really, there isn't much difference between the pair."

Cougars, who play their next home game Saturday night at Memorial Arena against Vernon Essos, saw their hold on first place reduced to a single point Tuesday.

ESSOS BEATEN

That came about when the second-place Kamloops team shaded the Essos 4-3 in Vernon behind the two-goal effort of Bob Nystrom.

Kamloops went ahead 2-0 in the first period on goals by Nystrom and John Senkpiel and chalked up a third midway through the second period on Nystrom's second, a power-play effort.

Vernon bounced back with a power-play goal of their own on a shot by John Manson and another goal by Wayne Dye at 19:03 of the second period. Essos then tied the game early in the third on an unassisted breakaway shot by Lawrence Quechuk.

Andy Laramie tallied the winner for Kamloops as he slipped the puck in the net at the 12:36 mark of the final period.

Stamps Losing Terry?

CALGARY (CP) — Calgary Stampeders of the Western Football Conference have signed their No. 1 quarterback for next season, but Jerry Keeling will be without one of his favorite receivers.

Terry Evanshen, 25-year-old split end who was rookie of the year while with Montreal Alouettes in 1965 and the outstanding Canadian player in the Canadian Football League in 1967, said Tuesday he won't be back with the Stampeders next season.

SIX OFFERS

He played out his option this season when he was unable to come to terms with the Stampeders and says he is considering offers from six professional clubs in the U.S.

Evanshen has caught 328 passes for 5446 yards and 46 touchdowns in his five-season CFL career. He holds the CFL record of 96 receptions for one season and a WFC record of 1662 yards for one season. Both records were set in 1967.

CONFIDENT

"I love Calgary and will make my home here regardless of what team I play with," Evanshen said .

He said he had no doubts about his ability to play in the National Football League.

"I've proved I can play pro ball ever since I came into the league in 1965."

Tour's Life Depends On New Sponsor

TORONTO (CP) — Ron Fitch of Vancouver, newly-elected president of the Canadian Professional Golfers' Association, said Tuesday the organization will try to attract new sponsors to keep the Canadian professional tour alive.

Canadian Breweries Ltd. announced earlier this year it was withdrawing sponsorship of five tournaments it has backed previously. The company said it would continue sponsorship of the $12,500 Ontario and Quebec open tournaments and the $6,000 Manitoba Open.

The brewery company's withdrawal means new sponsors will have to be found for the British Columbia, Alberta, Saskatchewan, and Atlantic open tournaments and the tour championship.

The annual CPGA meeting also elected the following executive officers: Rudy Huot, Quebec City, first vice-president; Al Nelson, Vancouver, Peter Semko, Saskatoon, and Vic Whibely, Guelph, Ont., second vice-presidents; John Davis, Burlington, Ont., captain; Andre Gagnier, Montreal, vice-captain.

Czechs Post Second Win Over Canada

PRAGUE (AP) — Czechoslovakia defeated Canada 6-4 Tuesday in the third game of a five-match exhibition hockey series here.

The Czechoslovaks also won the second game, 5-2. The opener ended in a 4-4 tie.

The Czechs scored the last three goals in the final period to overcome a 4-3 lead.

Fran Huck, Steve King, Billy Heindl and Grant Moore were the Canadian scorers.

Vaclav Nedomansky, scoring while the Canadians were shorthanded two men in the first period, Ivan Hlinka, Vladislav Martinec, Jaroslav Holik and Lubomir Ujvary, with two, counted for the Czechs.

Ferguson Out One Game . . . Just for a Starter

By The Canadian Press

John Ferguson, who has accumulated more than 100 penalty minutes in each of his nine professional hockey seasons, today has his name tacked onto a growing list of player suspensions by National Hockey League president Clarence Campbell.

The 31-year-old Montreal Canadiens left winger appeared before Campbell Tuesday and was suspended for at least tonight's game against the Maple Leafs in Toronto.

Ferguson could be hit with an additional suspension and fines when Campbell completes his formal judgment which may be announced later today.

Ferguson was ticked off for his part in a fight during a game against the Blues in St. Louis Nov. 15. He was given a match penalty for stick swinging during a scrap with Gary Sabourin of the Blues. The game misconduct carries an automatic $100 fine.

Campbell's get-tough policy started Oct. 17 when he handed out 30-day suspensions to Ted Green of Boston Bruins and Wayne Maki of the Blues.

DREW $500 FINE

Defenceman Green suffered a fractufed skull in a stick-swinging duel with Maki in an exhibition game between the Blues and Bruins at Ottawa Sept. 21. The two also were fined $300 each, plus an amount equal to their salaries for the suspended period.

Mike Walton of the Maple Leafs was the next to get stung. Campbell announced Nov. 7 that the speedy centre had to sit out three games and pay fines for pushing a referee during a game against Oakland Seals Nov. 4. Walton's fines were $75 plus an amount equalling his salary for the duration of the three games he was suspended.

Goalie Gary Smith of the Seals returns to action tonight in a game against the Blues in St. Louis after sitting out his three-game suspension imposed by Campbell last week.

Campbell also fined Smith $50 plus the three-game salary for a shoving incident with referee Ron Wicks during a game in Boston Nov. 10.

Ferguson's game misconduct in the St. Louis match helped push his total to 56 minutes in 17 games this season.

STARTED IN 1960

The Vancouver native started his professional career with Cleveland Barons of the American Hockey League in the 1960-61 season where he collected 126 minutes in penalties. His total increased the two following seasons but dropped to 125 minutes for the 1963-64 season when he joined the Canadiens.

He led the NHL in penalties during the 1966-67 season with 177 and reached a personal high of 185 minutes last season. Forbes Kennedy, who split the season between Philadelphia Flyers and Toronto, took top honors with 219 minutes.

In other games tonight, the Bruins meet the Rangers in New York, Detroit Red Wings are at Philadelphia, Los Angeles Kings play the Black Hawks at Chicago and Pittsburgh Penguins are in Minnesota against the North Stars.

The North Stars said Tuesday they have called up Bob Whitlock from Iowa Stars of the Central Hockey League. General manager-coach Wren Blair of the North Stars said he plans to use Whitlock at centre to relieve Danny O'Shea on part of his shifts.

O'Shea, slowed down by the flu, a groin injury and injured thumb, will continue playing part shifts.

Billy Martin On Expos' List

MONTREAL (CP) — Billy Martin, deposed coach of the American League Minnesota Twins, loomed today as a prime candidate for a third-base coaching position with Montreal Expos for next season.

The Montreal National League team lost Dave Bristol Monday when he was appointed manager of Seattle Pilots of the American League.

Jim Fanning, Expos general manager, said Tuesday Martin "is under consideration" although no definite announcement on a successor will be made before next week.

Surrey Fashions InstantContender

Surrey Rams have grown mighty strong in two short seasons.

That's the length of time the Lower Mainland club has competed in the British Columbia Big Four Juvenile Football League, and this Sunday Rams face Oak Bay Farmer Construction for the British Columbia juvenile crown.

Not only are Rams in the final, but they also hold a 13 point advantage going into Saturday's second of a two-game, total-point series with the Vancouver Island Juvenile Football League champions.

Rams bunted Farmers 20-7 in the series opener last Sunday on the mainland.

In the Big Four League this season, Rams have scored 285 points in eight games while yielding only 41.

QUARTERBACK SOLID

Much of their offensive strength lies in the hands of quarterback Trevor Jolleys, who has averaged over 20 passes per game with a 62 per cent completion record. He also has 14 touchdown passes to his credit this season.

Terry Bailey, an 18-year-old, 215-pound fullback, is the key running back and has accumulated a record of 18 TDs this season.

Oak Bay will be facing a "Big" line on Saturday, with tacklers Eric Haistad and Bruce Nicolson both tipping the scales at 235 pounds. Guards Rob Caplett and Doug Wellington weigh 220 and 225, respectively.

Game time Saturday is 1:30 p.m. in Centennial Stadium.

HENRY IN, HUCUL UP AT KANSAS

ST. LOUIS (UPI) — Camille Henry, a veteran of 14 years in the National Hockey League, was sent by the St. Louis Blues today to be player-coach with the team's Kansas City farm club.

As coach at Kansas City, Henry succeeds former St. Louis player Fred Hucul, who will remain Kansas City general manager. Henry will make his debut in a game against Oklahoma City tonight.

CROWD OF 33,172 EXPECTED . . .

. . . IN EAST-WEST FINAL

Montreal May Contribute Record Gate

MONTREAL (CP) — Greg Fulton, secretary-treasurer of the Canadian Football League, says Sunday's Grey Cup game will produce the first $400,000 gate in history.

The former Calgary statistician said Tuesday the Regina Roughriders-Ottawa Rough Riders clash will draw a crowd of 33,172 to the Autostade and a gate of $405,600.

The largest crowd ever to watch the East-West playoff was in 1955 when 39,417 packed Empire Stadium in Vancouver and paid $197,182.91 for the privilege at a top price of $7.50 a seat.

★ ★ ★

The next year the prices scaled up to $10 and in 1963 the scale rose ot a top of $12, which led to a record gate of $342,032.50 in 1963 at Vancouver.

In 1967 the price rose again—to a $15 top—and in 1968 Calgary Stampeders and Ottawa drew 33,185 fans who paid $358,558 to watch Ottawa win 24-21.

The last time the game was here, in 1931, 5,112 fans paid a total of $5,286.42 to watch Regina Red Wings lose 22-0 to Montreal Winged Wheelers.

★ ★ ★

One who remembers the circumstances "as though it happened only an hour ago," is Clary Foran, 66, coach of the Wheelers.

Foran recalled it was in the 1931 game that the first official forward pass was thrown in East-West competition, although it had been used often in the west.

★ ★ ★

He also recalled snap Red Tellier walking up to George Gilhooley of Regina and dropping him with a single blow, thereby picking up a life suspension from football that was rescinded three years later—just long enough to make it impossible for Tellier to return to active play.

"It was a shame," said Foran. "He was picked on all the game but I was out of spares and told him he had to stay on the field.

"So he waited until after rather than risk being sent off."

★ ★ ★

Sunday's game gets underway at 10 a.m. PST and will be televised nationally by the CTV and CBC networks.

Coveted Grid Honor To Oklahoma Back

NEW YORK (AP) — Steve Owens of Oklahoma, who has shattered some long-standing records in United States college football, beat out Purdue's Mike Phipps Tuesday for the Heisman Trophy as the outstanding player of 1969.

"It's something every player dreams about," the six-foot-two, 215-pound senior tailback from Miami, Okla., said.

"The Heisman Trophy is supposed to go to the best college player in the country and in this case it did," said Chuck Fairbanks, head coach at Oklahoma.

"Steve is the greatest inside runner I've ever seen. He is remarkable at diagnosing defences and finding holes. He has tremendous durability and strength."

In one of the closest competitions in years, Owens received 1,488 points in a poll of 992 U.S. sports writers and broadcasters to 1,334 for Phipps, the quarterback who led his team to three wins over Notre Dame.

It was another disappointment for Purdue, which now has seen three of its brightest stars beaten out for the trophy in the last four years. Last season, Leroy Keyes was runner-up to O. J. Simpson of Southern California. Quarterback Bob Giese was beaten out by Florida's Steve Spurrier in 1966.

The 50-pound copper statuette — football's equivalent of the Oscar — will be formally presented to Owens at New York City's Downtown Athletic Club, sponsor of the award, at a dinner Dec. 4.

VIKING VIEWS

By Brian Butters

After last weekend's hectic action, University of Victoria teams are settling back into regular league play in the Western Canada Intercollegiate Athletic Association and local circuits.

Two WCIAA teams are on the road, as the basketball Vikings travel to Saskatoon and Regina to play teams from both campuses of the University of Saskatchewan, and the hockey Vikings meet UBC in Vancouver.

UBC's Thunderettes will be in town Friday and Saturday night to take on the Vikettes in WCIAA basketball action. Their game on Saturday night will be preceded by an exhibition tussle between the Uvic Jayvees and Vanacouver Killarney.

★ ★ ★

Uvic's soccer Vikings are having an interesting season in the Victoria and District Soccer League. After winning only two of their first five games, the team rebounded and has gone undefeated in its last eight games, including four shutouts.

They have defeated Oak Bay and Victoria West in their last two games, and now are in fourth place in the local loop, only two points out of first.

Probably the main reason for their current success has been defence. Goalie Dave Achurch and fullbacks Kevin Costain and Tony Gage have been solid performers for the Vikings this year and if the offence continues to pour in the goals, the team will be a strong challenger for the top spot in the league.

They play Oak Bay on Sunday at 2:15 p.m. in Heywood Avenue Park.

Two Uvic rugby squads see action Saturday in the Victoria Rugby Union's first division.

Undefeated Vikings will be out to keep their streak intact as they tackle the Oak Bay Wanderers at Windsor Park. Norsemen meet James Bay at Gordon Head in an attempt to move up a notch or two in league standing. Both games are at 2 p.m.

★ ★ ★

As the year moves into the rainy season, an interesting phenomena takes place on the Uvic rugby pitch. Perhaps due to poor drainage, a large puddle about ten feet in diameter and four to six inches deep, accumulates in the middle of the field on the 40-yard line.

A favorite practice of cold, windblown sideline spectators at rugby games is to observe the number of times players get dragged through, tackled in, and otherwise immersed in "The Puddle."

On Sunday, in the Vikings' game against the Castaways, the count was a measly one, much to the disappointment of the many fans. Doing the honors in the play was Uvic stand-off Ted Hardy, who, in the process of making a tackle, was deftly manipulated by his opponent and ended up flat on his back six inches deep in "The Puddle."

However, he took it all in good humor and dragged himself up, wrung himself out, and ran off shivering to the next play. The Vikings ended up by winning the game 6-3, and Hardy did not, despite rumors to the contrary, contract pneumonia.

★ ★ ★

The Vikings' basketball games against UBC should prove exciting. The Uvic girls, who went undefeated in winning the WCIAA last season, have won one game and lost another against the Thunderettes earlier this year.

Performing for the Vikettes will be Heather and Rose Witzel, the twins from Courtenay; Jean Robertson, Barb Tribe, Lynn Hagglund, Marcia McIntyre, Lawrie Sawden, Peggy Robinson, Gail Vaughan and Deirdre Ogden.

The me's junior varsity squad will be attempting to keep its record intact as they take on Killarney in the prelim to the Vikettes' game on Saturday night at 6 p.m. Gary Taylor's Jayvees have yet to lose a game this season.

Unless Bob Bell's basketball Vikings pull off a couple of victories in their games in Saskatchewan, the lads will be far behind in the race for playoff spots, although the season is young.

Their two losses to Winnipeg and Manitoba over the weekend were not a very nice welcome to WCIAA competition, but they can't expect much more from the rest of the teams in the league. If the crew plays as they did against Manitoba on Saturday, they should have no difficulty in knocking over Regina and Saskatoon and be right back in the race.

Soft Line for Sports Suggested by Player

JOHANNESBURG (AP) — Golfer Gary Player has defended apartheid in South Africa but urged that strict racial separation be softened to let United States tennis ace Arthur Ashe compete in open tournaments here.

"The government of South Africa, rightly or wrongly, has decided on a policy of separate development," Player said.

Player called for time and understanding to let South Africa implement apartheid, which he said is "intended for the betterment of all races."

Player's comments were in reply to an overseas organization called Halt All Racial Tours. Eight members of HART confronted Player in New Zealand recently, but the golfer said he would only answer written questions on his own time.

The government once indicated that Ashe would be permitted to play in South Africa on a U.S. Davis Cup team, but not as an individual competitor. However, recent harsh comments about apartheid by Ashe may have convinced officials that he should not get a visa under any circumstances.

HUFF ADMITS RECOVERY SLOWER AT 35

WASHINGTON (AP)— Sam Huff, the veteran linebacker who came out of retirement to be a player-coach for Washington Redskins, apparently will hang up his spikes for good at the end of the National Football League season.

"It doesn't look promising as of now," Huff said when asked if he planned to return as a player next year. "I've played 15 games this year already and at the age of 35 you start getting beat up and you just don't recover quite as fast."

Huff came out of a year's retirement last spring after 12 seasons in the NFL with New York Giants and Redskins.

B.C. Launches Skiing Buildup

VANCOUVER (CP) — A two-pronged program, designed to broaden competitive and recreational programs for British Columbia skiers, was announced on Tuesday by Dr. Peter Andrews, Western Division president of the Canadian Amateur Ski Association.

He predicted the program would create a "tremendous surge" in skiing interest in the province.

The program consists of a quasi-competitive program designed to encourage recreational skiers to test their skill against a standard set by the association plus a series of racing competitions for skiers under 17 years of age.

Under the recreational scheme, a standard time for a giant slalom course will be established based on a run over the course by Bob Swan, Winnipeg-born member of the national ski team who skis for the Ottawa Ski Club.

The association said in a statement that the standard time, somewhat akin to par in golf, will give recreational skiers a basis on which to judge their own performance.

MERIT BADGES

As an incentive, skiers will be awarded pins on the basis of performance—a time within 10 per cent of that set by Swan will rate a gold pin; 11-20 per cent, a silver pin; 21-40 per cent, a bronze pin.

A series of standard courses will be set in various ski areas. The association said the courses would be "fairly easy, open giant slaloms, with some 20 gates on a moderate slope.

For young competitive skiers in B.C., a new 12-race program is planned culminating in a final competition at Whistler Mountain in Garibaldi Provincial Park, March 28-29.

The races will be for skiers age 14 to 16 years, with three races being held in each of the four B.C. zones—Lower Mainland and Vancouver Island, Okanagan, Kootenay and Northern.

The top 15 racers in each zone will compete in the final.

FIGHT DELAYED

MELBOURNE (Reuters) — A British Empire title fight between Bobby Dunlop and Al Sparks of Winnipeg has been postponed because the Australian title holder is suffering a stomach upset. The fight was to be held here Friday but set back to Dec. 6.

Demonstration Threat Idles Springbok Team

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — The Northern Ireland government banned Saturday's rugby match in Belfast between Ulster and the South African Springbok team after threats of demonstrations against South Africa's racial segregation policies.

The decision was taken Tuesday night by the government's security committee after meetings between army and police chiefs and the Ulster cabinet.

And in London, a member of the British Parliament suggested serious consideration should be given to the cancellation of the South African cricket tour of England next summer. The rugby tour has been marred by several demonstrations.

The Northern Ireland decision followed demands in the Ulster Parliament by opposition lawmakers to call off the match. They said it would lead to further civil unrest.

Longhorns Replace Buckeyes as No. 1

NEW YORK (AP)—Ohio State dreams of a second successive rating as the No. 1 team in U.S. college football have apparently been ended by last Saturday's 24-12 defeat by Michigan.

Weekly rankings by the Associated Press disclose that voters have moved Texas, Arkansas and Penn State ahead of the Buckeyes. Texas, idle Saturday, but with tough games remaining against Texas A. & M. and Arkansas, was moved into the top spot. The Longhorns received 33 of 38 first-place votes and totalled 748 points in the voting.

Arkansas, also 8-0, received 603 points and Penn State, 9-0, received three first-place votes and 570 points to win third-place ranking.

Ohio State had 509 points but didn't receive a single first-place vote after corraling 31 out of 39 the previous week.

Southern California, now ranked fifth, and Michigan, now seventh, received the other first-place votes. Missouri was ranked sixth, Notre Dame held on in eighth place and Louisiana State and Tennessee each advanced one position to be ninth and 10th, respectively.

The next 10, in order are: UCLA, Auburn, Nebraska, Mississippi, Stanford, Purdue, Florida, Houston, West Virginia and Toledo.

LOU PINIELLA

Pilots Dealt Top Rookie To Kansas

NEW YORK (AP) — Lou Piniella, a Seattle expansion draftee who was traded to Kansas City April 1, was named American League "Rookie-of-the-Year" Tuesday by a 24-man panel from the Baseball Writers Association of America.

Piniella received nine votes and Mike Nagy, Boston pitcher, six.

Carlos May, Chicago White Sox outfielder involved in an accident while training with the marines in August, was third with five votes.

Voting is on a first-place only basis.

Piniella, a 26-year-old outfielder, was made available in the expansion draft last fall by Cleveland. He was selected by Seattle on the strength of a .317 year at Portland of the Pacific Coast League.

Seattle traded him to Kansas City during spring training for outfielder Steve Whitaker and pitcher John Gelnar.

Selwood's Blast Boosts Canucks

VANCOUVER (CP) —Rookie defenceman Brad Selwood's goal early in the third period gave Vancouver Canucks a 4-3 Western Hockey League victory over San Diego Gulls before 7,349 fans Tuesday night.

Selwood's 40-foot blast from the point gave Vancouver a 4-2 lead which they held until Len Ronson's second goal of the game ended the Gulls' scoring.

Pat Hannigan, Len Lunde and Paul Andrea each added a goal for Vancouver who moved into a first-place tie with Portland Buckaroos.

Ronson picked up his 18th and 19th goals of the season and Kevin O'Shea added another for San Diego.

Canucks jumped to a 3-1 first period lead when Hannigan and Andy Bathgate combined for two goals—Bathgate setting up Hannigan's first goal in the period and Andrea's goal which gave Vancouver a 3-1 lead.

Ronson closed the gap to 3-2 at 3:24 of the second period beating Canuck netminder George Gardner with a hard drive.

Selwood made it 4-2 at 3:08 of the final period taking Gerry Goyer's pass and hitting the glove side behind San Diego netminder Jack McCartan.

The Gulls then stormed back with Ronson making it 4-3 flicking a shot over Gardner's outstretched glove.

LET'S MAKE THE GREY CUP CANADIAN

The Grey Cup is Canada's most important single sporting event. But the appalling fact remains that most of the players we will be watching battling for the cup are from the United States. In Saturday's Weekend Magazine Bruce Kidd, former Olympic runner, speaks his mind on the CFL and the Grey Cup.

Exhibition Park Opens Its Gates

VANCOUVER (CP) — Jack Diamond, British Columbia Jockey Club co-president, said Monday Exhibition Park in Vancouver will hold its first harness racing meet in the fall of 1970—subject to the approval of several parties.

Diamond said both he and the harness horsemen were thoroughly impressed with the results of Sunday's exhibition harness race and because of this, he would recommend a 1970 fall meeting to the racing board of the Pacific National Exhibition and to the BCJC directors.

"We will have to apply to the B.C. racing commission and the department of agriculture in Ottawa for racing dates," Diamond said. "And we'll need their approval to go ahead—but we have made the decision to give it a try."

Diamond's announcement came less than two weeks after he informed the B.C. Standardbred Breeders' Society that feasibility studies showed it was impossible to have an harness meet in the fall of 1970.

MIND CHANGED

The studies showed track conversion in wet weather was both costly and unreliable.

"But after seeing what happened Sunday we became convinced that a meet could be held without converting the track and despite poor weather conditions," Diamond said.

Lifting Record

GRAEFRENRODA, East Germany (AP)—Soviet light heavyweight G. Ivanschenkow has established a world record in the Olympic combination press, snatch, clean and jerk by lifting a total weight of 1,085.4 pounds.

He bettered the previous world record in the event of 1,079.9 pounds.

Mitt King Suspended After Second Arrest

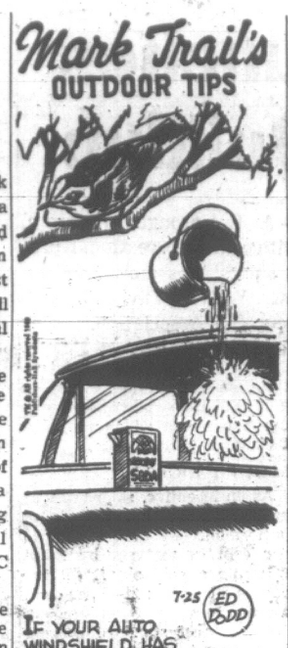

SACRAMENTO (AP — The California Athletic Commission Tuesday suspended the boxing license of world lightweight champion Mando Ramos following his second arrest in a month.

Bob Turley, the commission's executive officer, said Ramos will not be allowed to box in California "pending the outcome of his difficulties."

Ramos, 22, was booked for investigation of drunken driving after two policeman said they noticed his car travelling erratically in the Wilmington area. He failed a breathalizer test, police said.

Rather than post bail, Ramos said he would remain in jail for a court appearance later in the day.

Less than a month ago Ramos was arrested and booked for investigation of possessing marijuana. He pleaded innocent at his preliminary hearing. His trial is pending.

Only Few Signed N-Pact

By MAX HARRELSON

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — Despite United States and Soviet ratification of the treaty banning the spread of nuclear weapons, there are other obstacles to overcome before it can become fully effective.

The least, perhaps, is getting 19 additional nations to ratify the pact, thereby fulfilling requirements for bringing it into force.

The action Monday by Washington and Moscow is expected to give the necessary push to countries that have been holding back until they made sure the two leading nuclear powers would adhere to the treaty.

The pact could not have entered into force anyway until it was ratified by the United States, the Soviet Union and Britain. Britain gave its final approval some time ago.

It now has 24 of the 43 ratifications needed and probably will get the others within months. Some like the Soviet Ukraine and Byelo-Russia are expected to act quickly.

REMAIN OUTSIDE

The big problems are the fact that Communist China and France—each with nuclear weapons—remain outside the pact and that a dozen nations with nuclear potential are delaying ratification.

If this situation continues, it could seriously impair the effectiveness of the treaty by permitting additional countries to acquire nuclear weapons.

So far Canada is the only one of the nations with nuclear potential to ratify the treaty. Sweden may follow soon and West Germany is committed in principle to ratification, but has to work out some problems with its allies in Western Europe.

Japan has an election coming up and public opinion is divided, which may cause an indefinite delay. India and Pakistan are not happy about the guarantees promised by the United States, the Soviet Union and Britain for help in the event of a nuclear attack.

There is another difficulty in the Middle East. With tension at a high pitch between Israel and its Arab neighbors, most countries in that area are sitting tight. An Israeli spokesman said, "we are still studying the problem." Arab diplomats say no additional ratifications by their governments can be expected under present circumstances.

PACE IS SLOW

In view of the fact that 90 countries signed the treaty when it was approved by the UN General Assembly 18 months ago, the pace of ratifications has been surprisingly slow.

Only two Latin American countries—Mexico and Ecuador—have ratified the treaty and not a single Asian country unless you count New Zealand. Iraq and Syria are the only adherents in the Middle East. From among Africa's 41 countries, four have ratified: Botswana, Cameroon, Mauritius and Nigeria.

Five Soviet-bloc countries adhered to the pact before the Soviet Union acted. They are Poland, Bulgaria, Czechoslovakia, Hungary and Mongolia. Western European adherents are Austria, Denmark, Finland, Norway and Iceland.

Although France refuses to join the pact, it has made it clear it will abide by its ban on the dissemination of nuclear weapons to non-nuclear countries. The Peking government has refused to recognize any arms control measures.

Identical Votes Too?

CASTLEGAR (CP) — A set of identical twins is seeking the mayoralties of the twin towns of Kinnaird and Castlegar in province-wide municipal elections Dec. 6.

Bob Maddocks, a former mayor of Castlegar, hopes to make a comeback by defeating incumbent T. M. Little.

Bob's twin brother Colin is trying to unseat Carl Loeblich, mayor of Kinnaird for the past 10 years.

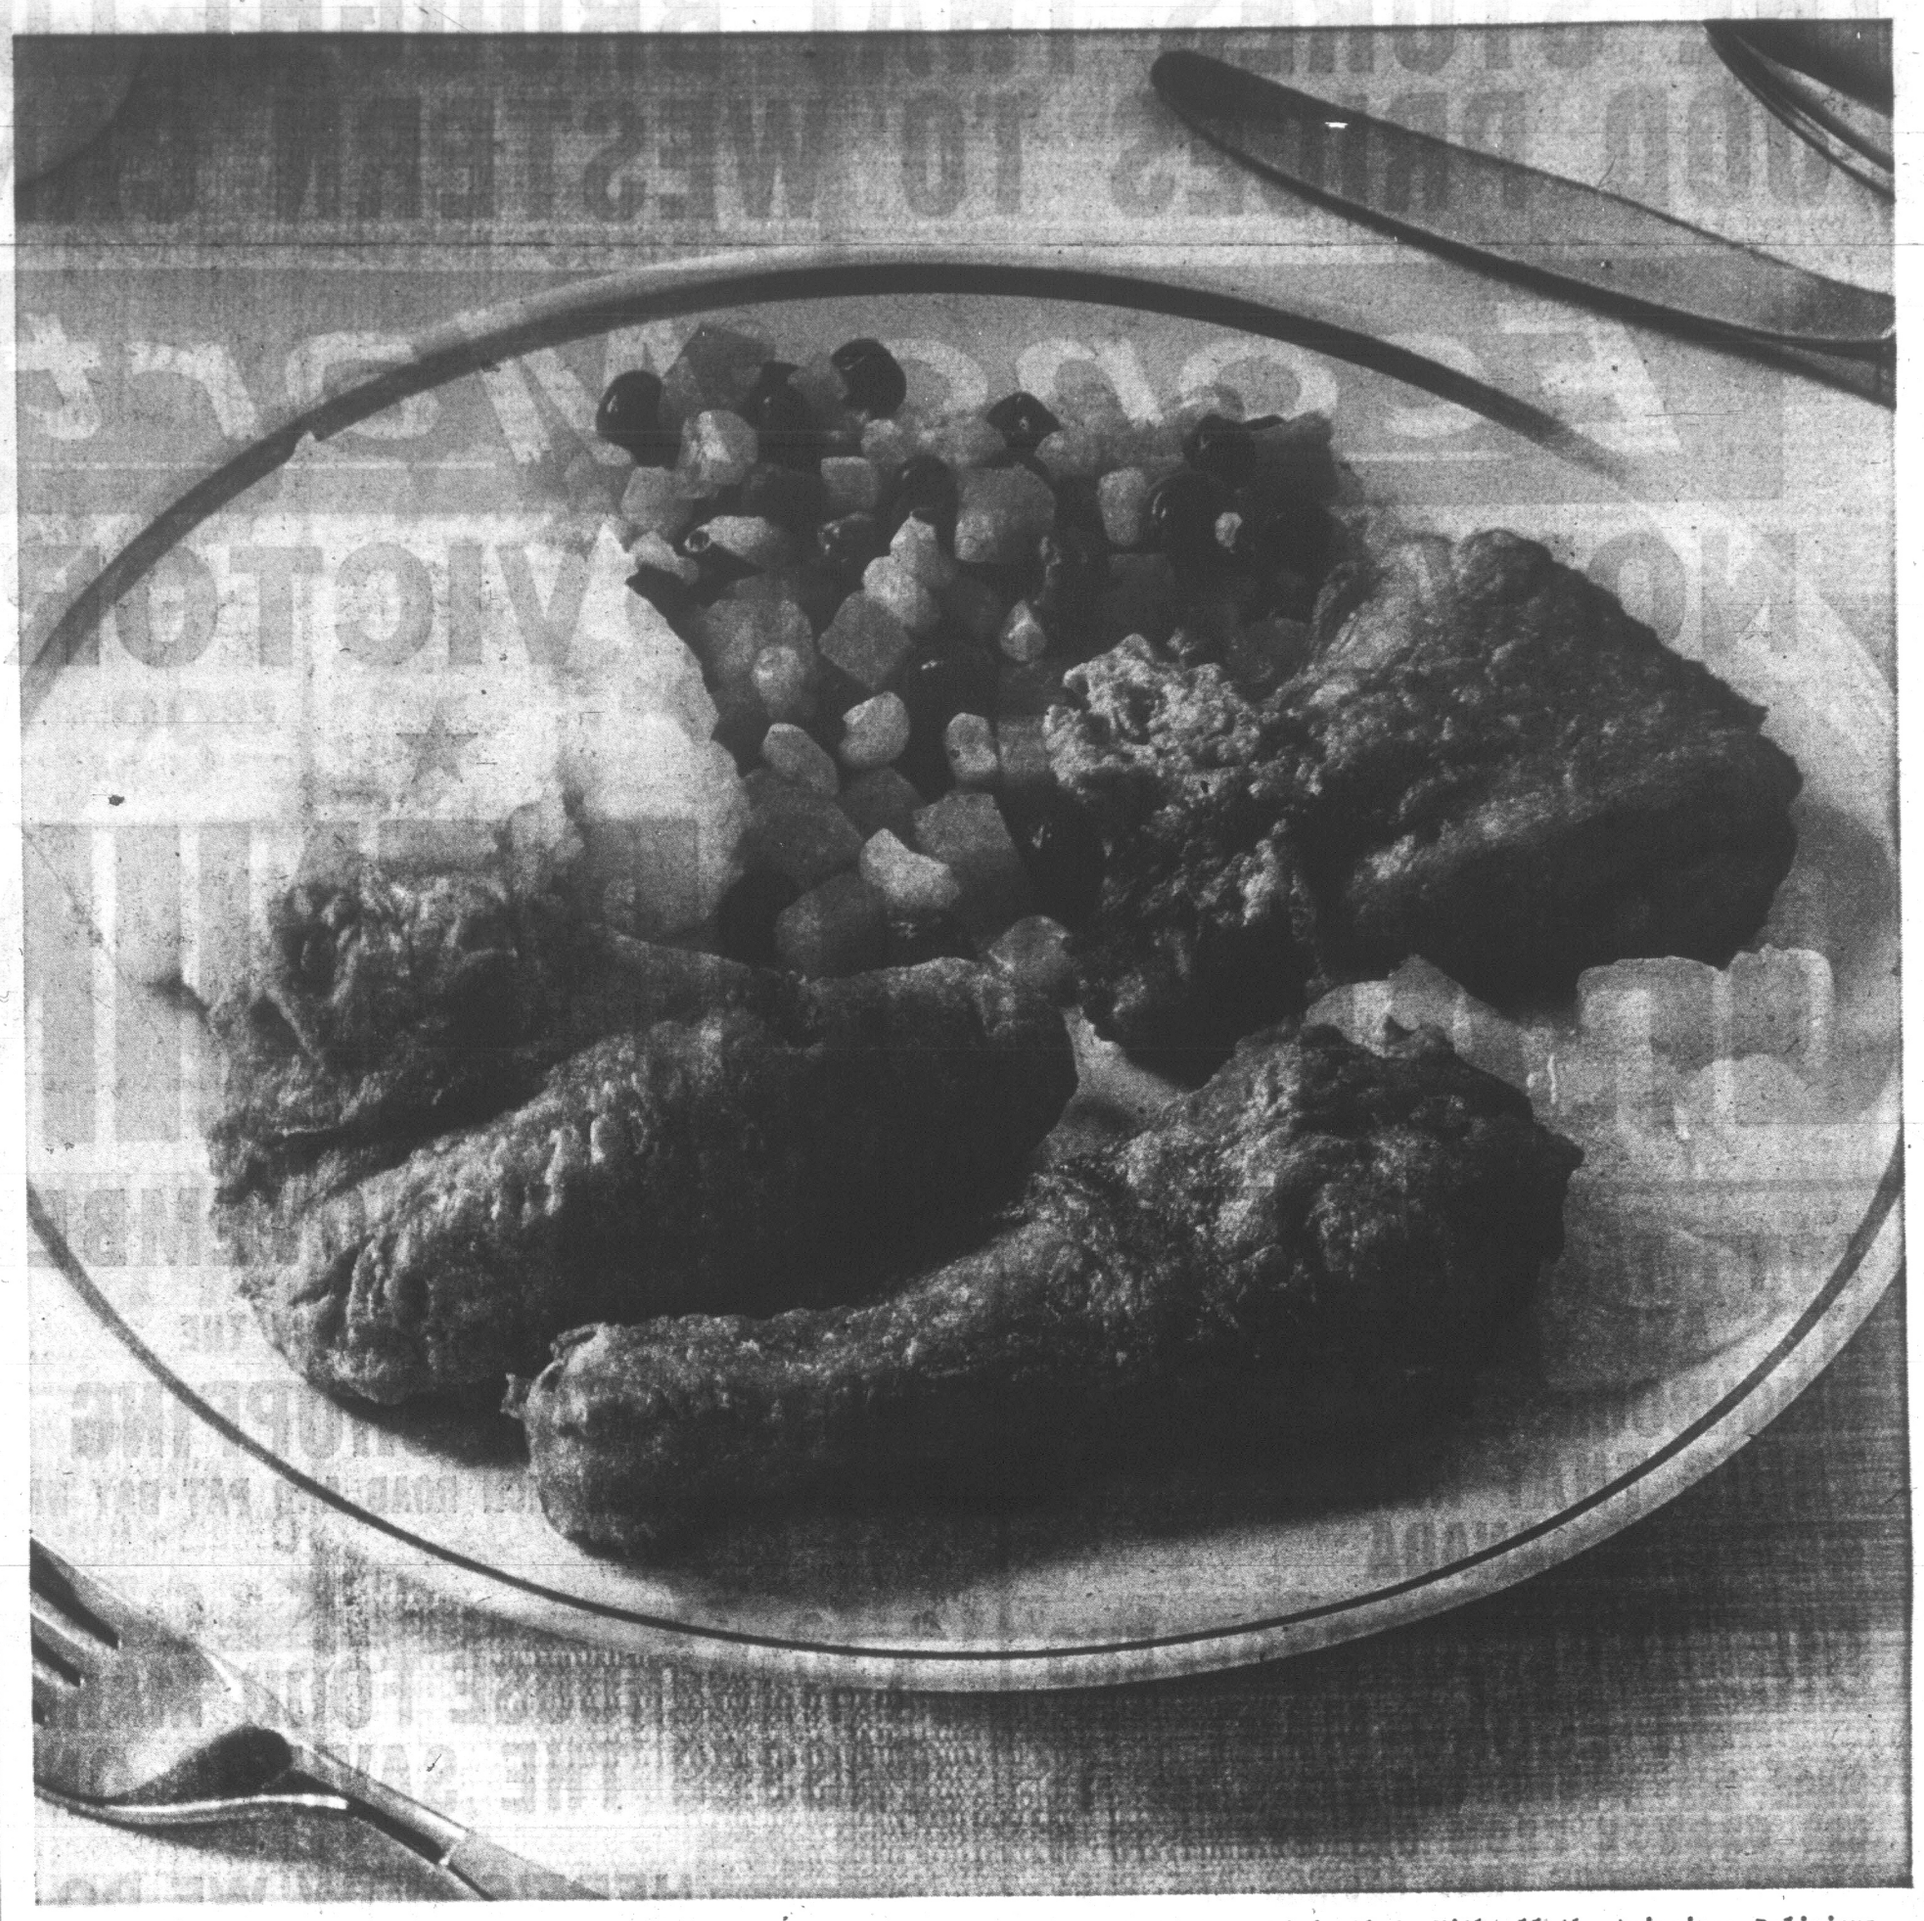

The 43-year-old Maddocks brothers operate a chain of shoe stores in the Kootenay district.

'Where Are Those Places You Can Live on $30 a Week?'

Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — "Thirty Buck Ben," is the nickname tagged onto Finance Minister Benson by the opposition in Parliament.

He was chided in the Commons Tuesday for suggesting in a Toronto radio broadcast that there were places in Canada where a man could live on $30 a week.

Stanley Knowles (NDP—Winnipeg North Centre) moved at the beginning of the question period that the minister's salary of $35,000 a year (which works out to $673 a week, less taxes) be cut to $30 a-week.

Knowles required unanimous consent to put the motion.

'FAINT NO'

Mr. Speaker Lucien Lamoureux said he had heard a "faint no" from the government benches. There were shouts of laughter and cries of "shame" from both sides as Benson smilingly disavowed being the man who had refused consent.

Later in the sitting Tom Bell (P.C.—John Lancaster) asked Benson—a heavy pipe smoker—if the minister realized that a tin of pipe tobacco costs $2.25. That cost along with all the matches Benson uses to keep his pipe lit, would not allow him anything to spend on eat or drink each month, if he only earned $30 a week.

Robers. McCleave (PC—Halifax-East Hants) asked if Benson was stating taxation policy when he said a person could live on $30 a week.

Benson said he did not state that $30 was a living wage.

The minister explained that he had been asked by Gordon Sinclair, a Toronto broadcaster: "Do you think that in any place in Canada a man can live on $30 a week?"

THERE ARE PLACES

Benson said he had replied: "Yes, I think there are places in Canada . . . They can't live to the standards that one would want them to live to. I think there are places in Canada where people are living on $30 a week.

"And there obviously are places where married couples were living on $3,500 a year. Previously a married man with two children was living on it ($3,500) because he was filing his tax return as his only income and was paying $118 in tax. We're taking that $118 in tax off."

WHERE?

An opposition backbencher interjected" where are those places where a man can live on $30 a week?"

"The minister will be known as $30-a-week-Benson," said Douglas Harkness (PC—Calgary Centre).

McCleave, in the house, asked if the $30 a week was accepted by Health and Welfare Minister John Munro.

Benson said the opposition were getting the whole question mixed up. There were outbursts of laughter again.

Benson explained that the question in the broadcast arose because he was being asked about the proposed increase in exemptions set out in the government's white paper on tax reform.

CYC Crime Hinted Prior to Inquiry

OTTAWA (CP)—State Secretary Gerard Pelletier conferred with Solicitor-General George McIlraith and Justice Minister John Turner about "possible criminal activities" in the Company of Young Canadians before and after Montreal complaints October 11 touched off a Commons inquiry.

Mr. Pelletier Tuesday night told the Commons committee carrying out the inquiry that he asked for a report from CYC Executive Director Claude Vidal in late September after hearing "disturbing noises" from Montreal.

He told Robert McCleave (PC—Halifax-East Hants) he conferred with Mr. McIlraith and Mr. Turner about general reports rather than any particular individual.

Lucien Saulnier, Montreal executive committee chairman, appears before the committee Thursday and Friday to testify about the Oct. 11 charges of subversion he made against the CYC.

Today's witness will be Donald Hamilton, executive assistant to Premier Harry Strom of Alberta. Alberta is the only province to accept an invitation to appear before the committee.

WANTS OVERHAUL

Mr. Pelletier said, in a prepared brief, that the CYC's legislative framework should be overhauled to ensure operational efficiency and public accountability.

Under the present act, the government had "no influence whatsoever" over the CYC.

The 15-member council was dominated by 10 members elected by volunteers. For this reason, it would be impossible for the cabinet to make changes even if the CYC were to "undertake acts that were obviously intolerable."

Because the CYC wasn't an agent of the Crown, the government had no power to seize its assets. Short of an act of Parliament, there was no way "to handle a crisis situation" within

This meant, for instance, that the CYC, the executive director and his associate could take $100,000 of CYC funds and go to Hong Kong before anyone could stop them, Mr. Pelletier said.

The council set policy and the executive director was supposed to carry it out. The council was dominated by volunteers and testimony had indicated that it reversed itself at times if volunteers were adversely affected.

"The executive director has no authority over the volunteers and the volunteers may disregard his directives or circumvent his authority."

Mr. Pelletier denied that he has ever intervened in CYC affairs. He said that after about 20 Montreal volunteers advised him in May, 1968, that Quebec director Martin Beliveau advocated ignoring the CYC act, he called then director Alan Clarke to his home.

He said the situation was put before Mr. Clarke, who agreed it was serious. Mr. Pelletier said Mr. Clarke suggested firing Mr. Beliveau, Mr. Pelletier's executive assistant, Andre Ouellette, proposed instead that the facts be placed before Mr. Beliveau and he be asked to resign.

Mr. Pelletier said he had confidence in Mr. Clarke and had no idea he was going to resign and allege interference in CYC affairs that threatened the company.

HAD NO AUTHORITY?

The minister said that given the safeguards of the CYC act, he couldn't force an executive director to do anything. Officials had told him they were uncertain whether he had the authority to fire an executive director.

Mr. Pelletier also denied threatening to go to the cabinet and propose that the company be disbanded if the Beliveau situation wasn't straightened out.

He said that amending the act to give the government more control over the CYC wouldn't mean the CYC would be subject to pressure every time there was a complaint about it.

It would be in the same position as a Crown corporation like the CBC. When the CBC ran film in which Greek actress Melina Mercouri criticized Greece's military government, the Greek ambassador was sure to protest the following day to the external affairs department.

The department always replied in such cases that the CBC was an indepenent agency.

Bruins Brighten Boy's Recovery

Seven-year-old Lane Crockett of Victoria woke up from heart surgery in the Vancouver General Hospital Nov. 13 and asked his parents to get him a Boston Bruins hockey sweater.

Lane's father, Neil M. Crockett of 1604 Michelle Place, a salesman for Imperial Equipment Ltd., left the hospital that day and searched Vancouver sport shops for a sweater of his son's favorite team.

There were Montreal Canadien sweaters, Toronto Maple Leaf sweaters, but there were no Boston sweaters.

He decided there was only one alternative: to phone the Boston Bruins head office and speak to the public relations manager.

"The P.R. man wasn't in," said Lane's mother Hughene in an interview from Vancouver today, "so they asked him if he would speak to anyone else."

"Anyone else" turned out to be Milt Schmidt, coach of the third-place Bruins. He told Crockett while the club couldn't send the little boy a player-size team sweater, they would send him something to remember them by.

A few days later Lane received a letter from Schmidt with a photo of Boston star Bobby Orr, signed by Orr.

"It really gave him a lift," said Mrs. Crockett. "His hero used to be Bobby Hull, but now it's Bobby Orr."

She said her son has been a National Hockey League fan "since he could walk," and would have started playing minor hockey this year if it hadn't been for the operation.

"He'll have to wait until next year, but he's not too unhappy about it."

CASTRO MELLOWING?

Flexible Policy Seen Evolving In Cuban Line

By ANDREW TARNOWSKI

HAVANA (Reuters) — The Cuban government, long an outspoken champion of guerrilla warfare as the key to social revolution, now appears to be adopting a more flexible policy toward Latin American.

Premier Fidel Castro during the last year has maintained unaccustomed silence on revolution and guerrilla warfare in the Latin American countryside—apparently a tacit admission of failure to export the Cuban-style model.

He has also voiced cautious approval of the continent's military governments.

At the same time, Cuba has stopped criticising the Soviet Union's "soft line" policy of seeking commercial and diplomatic links with existing governments in South America.

A number of factors are seen here by observers as contributing to this shift in Cuban policy.

CHE'S DEATH A BLOW

The death of guerrilla leader Ernesto Che Guevara in Bolivia in 1967 was a profound shock for Cuban leaders. It was followed by the continued failure of Cuban-backed guerrillas in Latin America.

New types of revolution, such as the one that produced the military government in Peru, are having a success too obvious to be ignored by Havana.

Simultaneously, the Soviet Union, which has long borne the burden of military and economic aid to Cuba, seems to favor a normalization of Cuba's relations with the continent.

Castro's silence over the Soviet Union's softer line in Latin America dates from August, 1968, when he announced qualified approval of Russia's military intervention in Czechoslovakia.

This year, signs have abounded of increasingly warmer relations between Havana and Moscow.

This trend was illustrated recently by a seven-day official visit to Cuba by Soviet Defence Minister Andre Grechko.

SUPPORT PERU

Meanwhile, Castro has given qualified support to the anti-American socialist revolutionary measures undertaken by the new Peruvian military government.

Peru's confiscation of the American-owned International Petroleum Co. in January and its subsequent announcements of far-reaching land reforms and nationalization of large estates appears to have made the government more palatable to Cuba, which has always had contempt for military governments.

Cuba now has relations with only Canada and Mexico in the Western Hemisphere.

A leading factor in Cuban policy toward Latin America this year is Castro's almost complete preoccupation with domestic economic problems.

Castro has publicly staked the reputation of his revolution on achieving a 10,000,000-ton sugar crop. He has mobilized 100,000 troops to cut cane, and has postponed national holidays in an effort to achieve the target.

THE STYLE that has won her several championships wins for Gail Bamford the admiration of baritone John Dunbar and pianist Grace Timp. Looking on, at left, are Gerri-Mae Watling (L) and Helen Ogilvie, of the Adeline Duncan Dance Studio. All are participants in the Musical Art Society concert at McPherson Playhouse, Sunday.

'Hair' Cast Warned of Arrests

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (UPI) — The district attorney vowed Tuesday to arrest members of the cast of Hair if they go through with a nude scene. The producers insisted the show would go on uncut.

The showdown will come tonight when the curtain goes up on a preview of the musical play at the International Hotel. The controversial scene comes minutes before the intermission when the entire cast appears on stage nude.

★ ★ ★

District Attorney George Franklin suggested that the staging be "restyled" to avoid violating the state's obscenity statutes. Producers of the show met late Tuesday and announced that the show would be "uncut with no alterations."

"If they expose themselves they will be arrested. I've told them what I think the law is and their $100,000-a-year attorneys can read the same law I read," said Franklin.

Topless female showgirls have paraded on stage in this gambling resort for a number of years in the showrooms of the neon lighted gambling resorts. But Franklin objected to both men and women appearing bottomless.

B 'Nai B 'Rith purchased all the seats in the house for the opening and resold the tickets for charity. The official opening night of "Hair" at the International Hotel's legitimate theatre is Dec. 3, following a week of preview showings.

Franklin said members of the cast who exposed themselves would be charged with a gross misdemeanor. A second offence would be a felony. "That means from here on out they will have to register as sex offenders," said Franklin.

Cold Audience Warms to Borge

By SUSAN RILEY

Victor Borge's audience was receptive but it definitely couldn't be called warm.

It was so chilly in Memorial Arena Arena Tuesday night it was hard to tell if people were clapping or their teeth were chattering. Borge let no one forget it, either.

He welcomed everyone to "Ice Capades", told them to clap to keep warm, and invited them to grab a hot dog before they froze.

BORGE
. . . hit show

When he started playing the piano the frost lifted.

He is a thoroughly professional performer. In spite of a muffled sound system, the chill and the huge concrete-floored arena he established rapport with the audience immediately and sustained it. Having chosen the chilliness as his theme he mentioned it constantly ending with the comment: "there is a time and a place for everything but this (shiver) sin't the place for everything, that's for sure . . ."

Some of his material was rehearsed but when the finger accidentally came off singer Maureen Mulvey's glove Borge ad-libbed expertly, never missing on timing.

His comedy is dignified slapstick. He isn't the knee-slapping, foot-thumping kind of comedian but rather the throaty chuckle type.

He fell asleep in the middle of one soft, classical piece and slipped off his piano stool with a thump. Later, when the singer hit a particularly piercing note Borge jumped up clutching his heart and flipped open the piano stool to get a banana. He ate it.

He caught his finger in the microphone, tied his legs in a knot and stumbled around in semi-darkness looking for his piano when a blue spotlight darkened the stage.

●

A fast, bouncy number would be transformed to a soft, slow piece when Borge turned the sheet music upside down.

Borge started a couple of serious numbers but they didn't last long. He would shiver, loosen up his fingers, or lean over and make an absurd remark into the mike.

He emceed the show himself and that was as refreshing as the nippy draught. He walked on stage alone, introduced his accompanists, and set the pace of the show.

When the wooden chairs were getting uncomfortable and the show was slowing down, it ended.

The arena may have left the audience cold but Victor Borge didn't.

BRITISH ISLES CONCERT SET

Songs and dances of the British Isles will be performed by leading Victoria artists Sunday at McPherson Playhouse.

The concert, the second in Victoria Musical Art Society's 1969-70 season, features John Dunbar and contralto Eleanor Duff with Grace Timp at the piano, the Adeline Duncan Dancers and Highland dance champion Gail Bamford.

Among the program selections is a group of Margery Kennedy Fraser Hebridean songs to be sung by Miss Duff and some fine Irish and other songs in addition to Scottish numbers by Dunbar.

The concert will start at 2:30 p.m. and non-member tickets will be available at the door.

'Socialism Needed'

EDMONTON (CP)—Socialism is the only answer if Canadians want to end the illusion that Canada is a politically independent country, Mel Watkins, national vice-president of the New Democratic Party, said Tuesday.

B.C. Cool to $10 Million Grant

A federal government announcement that it will pay up to $10 million of the deficit for the proposed 1976 winter Olympic games at Garibaldi got a cool reaction from the B.C. government Tuesday.

"I believe that what we would require is a formula rather than a fixed sum type of situation," Recreation and Conservative Minister Ken Kiernan said.

He said current "guesstimates" are that the deficit for the games would be $20 million rather than the $15 million suggested in Ottawa.

In addition, he said, the estimate is expressed in 1968 dollars. A lot could happen before 1976 to inflate the figures, he said.

The fixed federal contribution would leave the province and the city of Vancouver with "all the uncertainties," Kiernan said.

But he said the federal offer "would certainly indicate that Ottawa is interested."

Kiernan said the estimates of deficit did not include "any expenditure required in terms of beefed-up transportation."

•

He said that as far as he knew no negotiations on a formula have begun.

"Our expectation would be that a satisfactory formula could be worked out," he said.

Premier Bennett said only that the matter of federal help for the Garibaldi Olympics bid was discussed in his meeting with Prime Minister Trudeau in Ottawa recently.

Kiernan said the formula should be worked out prior to decision on the Olympic bid in Amsterdam next May.

Swan Lake Farm Land Offered

Saanich municipality was offered 30 acres of farm land ringing the east end of Swan Lake Tuesday night.

The municipal lands and planning committee authorized lands commissioner Frank Harris to negotiate a firm price and report back.

A real estate company, acting on behalf of the Thomas Pendray Farm at 3918 Saanich Road, offered the land for $155,000—$35,000 down and $600 per month at seven per cent per year interest.

FUNDS MARKED

Planner Tom Loney said the acquisition of land around Swan Lake has been discussed in the past and certain funds were earmarked in the 1965 capital projects referendum approved by ratepayers.

That budget included just over $1 million for land purchase, principally the McRae Estate (now called Cedar Hill Park).

The municipality at that time hoped to purchase most of the land surrounding the lake "in order to develop a distinctive and attractive setting for the municipality's administrative facilities and for other public use."

Victoria Was 'Vancouver' And Then It Was 14 Days

A Vancouver man who told Saanich police he had lost his driving licence was jailed for 45 days Tuesday for driving while his permit was under suspension.

Robert Davidson, 61, pleaded guilty to the charge when he appeared in court.

When officers checked him on Carey Road a week ago he told them his wallet, including licence had been lost in Vancouver.

He was given 48 hours to provide proof he had a licence and later came to the police office to admit it had been suspended.

Court was told the accused had a previous conviction for the same offence and two impaired driving convictions.

Larry Walker, 31, of Vancouver was sentenced to 14 days when he pleaded guilty to intoxicated driving.

Police spotted his car Monday speeding on Pandora, some of the time in the wrong lane.

Court was told he had considerable difficulty opening the door of his car and when police asked where he thought he was, he told them "Vancouver."

"Just be thankful you didn't kill someone," said Judge Ostler in passing sentence.

Ruth L. Clark, 23, of 1258 Johnson, was fined $150 for failing to remain at the scene of an accident and $25 for driving without a licence.

Her car collided with another at the corner of Springfield and Wilson on Oct. 12.

After the crash she stopped and told a bystander that she was going to the store for cigarettes. She left and failed to return.

She was later located at home.

Clavert Russel Broomfield, 28, 513 Ackland was fined $350 for impaired driving and court recommended that his driver's licence be suspended for four months.

He was stopped by police on the Island Highway Nov. 10 after having been observed driving erratically.

Frederick C. Breen, 67, of 467 Lampson was fined $350 for impaired driving and banned from driving in Canada for four months.

He lost control of his car on Esquimalt Road near Alston Oct. 13, spun around in the street and drove into a guard rail.

Larry V. Bauer, 19, of Work Point Barracks, Esquimalt was fined $300 for impaired driving, $150 for failing to remain at the scene of an accident and prohibited from driving in Canada for six months.

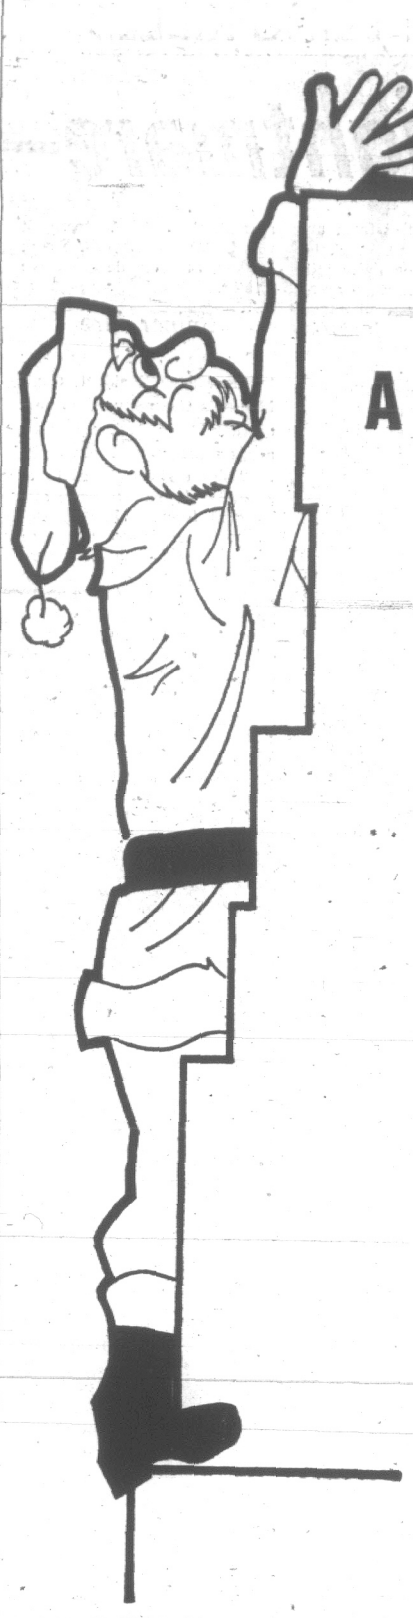

He had been observed by witnesses driving at a high rate of speed east on Lyall on Nov. 13.

He had earlier hit a parked car and left the scene. Damage to both vehicles was estimated at $325.

It's simple how quickly one may lose pounds of unsightly fat right in your own home. Make this home recipe yourself. It's easy, no trouble at all and costs little. Just go to your drug store and ask for four ounces of Naran Concentrate. Pour this into a pint bottle and add enough grapefruit juice to fill the bottle. Take two tablespoons full a day as needed and follow the Naran Plan.

If your first purchase does not show you a simple easy way to lose bulky fat and help regain slender more graceful curves; if reducible pounds and inches of excess fat don't disappear from neck, chin, arms, abdomen, hips, calves and ankles just return the empty bottle for your money back. Follow this easy way endorsed by many who have tried this plan and help bring back alluring curves and graceful slenderness. Note how quickly bloat disappears—how much better you feel. More alive, youthful appearing and active.

ACT OF REVENGE FOR BEST MEN BEING KILLED

Out of the Nightmare—A Massacre Happened

Braestrup, who has spent nearly 20 years as a reporter, has covered Vietnam, Laos, the Philippines, Indonesia and Malaysia; he was an eye-witness to the 1965 coup in Algiers and to the riots in Casablanca.

By PETER BRAESTRUP

WASHINGTON (WP) — If the Pinkville massacre occurred, was it merely one of many such unpublicized instances in Vietnam? Was it peculiar o the Vietnam war in U.S. military experience?

At this point, the circumstances surrounding the Pinkville incident are less clear than press summaries would indicate. The action, six miles Northeast of Quang Ngai City, occurred March 16, 1968—more than 18 months ago. Witnesses' published accounts differ in some inportant details confused by time and the fog of combat. But all so far agree the civilians were slain by GIs.

Truth Elusive

"The truth," as army counsel Robert E. Jordan III put it "is elusive."

From cross-checking with several of the men involved, with other Americans then in Quang Ngai province near Pinkville, and from Pentagon sources now familiar with the case, a tentative picture emerges.

It will not surprise that tiny minority of aging Americans who fought as infantrymen in the Second World War or Korea; it will be easily recognizable to combat veterans of Vietnam. The atmosphere of combat, like love, is difficult to describe to outsiders, and as one of Pinkville's riflemen said last week, "you have to have been there to know how it is."

The tentative picture of Pinkville that emerges is this:

Revenge Motive

Under stress, in a particularly vicious corner of the war, the officers and senior non-commissioned officers of a tired, understrength rifle company (Company C, 1st Battalion, 20th Infantry, 11th Brigade), at the very least, apparently failed to prevent many of their men from slaughtering hostile but unarmed South Vietnamese peasants in revenge for the deaths of some of their best comrades.

As far as is now known, the 30-minute horror of Tucong hamlet (also known on military maps as My Lai 4) was Company C's only such experience during the arduous year-long Vietnam tour of its members; it faced greater hazards both before and after Pinkville; its company commander, Capt. Ernest L. Medina, 33, won the army's third highest decoration, the Silver Star, and a Bronze Star as well.

For Company C, as well as for other American division units, the Pinkville sector was a nightmare area. As Lt. Col. David Gavin, the district advisor, and other officials noted, it had been communist territory since the 1940s.

Hard-Core Pockets

It was like other pockets along a 100-mile stretch of coastal Quangnam, Quangtin and Quangngai provinces. Even in early 1969, the commander of the U.S. forces in Vietnam, Gen, Creighton Abrams, considered that they represented the last "hard-core" pockets remaining to the enemy on South Vietnam's coast north of the Camu peninsula.

In the high-wooded mountains immediately to the west the North Vietnamese regulars of the 3rd NVA division still roamed, ready to lend support to the oft-bombed, oft-chased Viet Cong units on the coastal plain.

In early 1968, hidden in the eastern third of Son Tinh district's rice paddies and salt flats and along the tree-lined creeks were the 48th Viet Cong Main Force Battalion, Gavin recalled, with two independent VC local force companies. Enemy strength fluctuated widely, depending on losses, Gavin said.

Tactics Standard

Standard enemy tactics when allied units tried to sweep the area were to avoid contact.

As Company C was to discover, allied infantrymen and their supporting air and artillery seldom had the warriors' satisfaction of hard contact with the enemy in the Pinkville area. Instead, as they slowly slogged along the paths, through the bombed hamlets, they usually met only snipers.

Yet hidden mines and booby-traps, often fashioned by Viet Cong guerrillas from unexploded allied artillery shells and bombs, took a daily toll. Seldom, in the Pinkville area, did the GIs get a warning of danger—as often happened elsewhere in Vietnam—from the local peasants.

One reason according to U.S. officials was that some of the hamlets in Pinkville were what Viet Cong called "fighting hamlets"—where the whole population was considered by the communists as "revolutionary combatants."

As one former U.S. civilian provincial adviser put it, Saturday "the ratio of forces was such in Quang Ngai in March, 1968, that we tried to protect relatively secure areas and not go looking for certain trouble. We (pacification and aid technicians) did not go in that area without a couple of battalions. At that time, everyone (in Songmy village, including Tucong hamlet) was part of the Communist apparatus; men, women and children. The naive way Americans are talking about it must be making the Communists laugh."

Temporary Control

Another civilian adviser said that at that time about 25,000 of Songtinh district's 100,000 people were living in refugee camps close to highway one or Quang Ngai city.

The Pinkville area was normally in the operational area of the 2nd ARVN (Army of the Republic of Vietnam) Division, headquartered at Quang Ngai city. Some South Korean Marines had been based just north of the area. Neither the Koreans nor the ARVN, in March, 1968, were interested in heading into Pinkville.

So the Americans temporarily took over the sector. In an effort to sweep the Viet Cong base area they set up Task Force Barker, composed of one artillery battery and a 120-man rifle company from each of the parent 11th Brigade's three battalions. Given the target, it was a small force; U.S. troops were spread thin. In Vietnam it was headed by Lt. Col. Frank Barker, the brigade executive officer.

Sniper Fire

For five or six weeks prior to the alleged incident, Capt. Medina's Company C, as part of Task Force Barker, scouted areas adjacent to Pinkville in Sontinh district, based at Landing Zone Uptight and later at Landing Zone Dottie about three miles north of Tucong. On March 1, according to one survivor, the company's two platoons were pinned down by sniper fire in a nearby hamlet. On several other occasions, the mines and booby traps extracted a toll.

Unlike rifle companies in Korea and the Second World War, Company C—in a common Vietnam pattern when fighting guerrillas—was largely on its own. It rarely advanced alongside other units, but landed by helicopter and moved alone through the paddies as a kind of giant patrol force, while other companies did the same a mile or more away and the battalion commander co-ordinated things by radio from his command helicopter overhead. Such dispersed small-unit tactics allowed company non-coms and officers considerable latitude and a kind of hour-by-hour autonomy, especially when action was light.

Tactics Teacher

Medina, 33, a one-time paratrooper and former enlisted man from Springer, N.M., could run Company C without much direct interference from above. Commissioned in 1964, he spent two years at Fort Benning teaching tactics. He arrived in Vietnam with Company C and the 11th Brigade from Hawaii in late November, 1967. By the time he left Company C July 1, 1968, for the usual headquarters stint at the American Division, he had earned the right medals, as noted above. "I never got any feeling that he was particularly blood-thirsty," observed an acquaintance of the time.

On March 15, the day before Pinkville, a popular member of the company was blown to pieces by a booby-trapped 155-mm. shell. According to some witnesses, after days of no contact, booby-trapped paths and roads and unhelpful peasants, the grief of some of the tired, frustrated men in Company C turned ugly. They asked Medina when they could go in and clean up the Viet Cong.

Had Orders

Versions of Medina's exact words vary. But he promised the men a fight next day. He had orders to clean out—destroy—the Viet Cong hamlets in Pinkville.

No witness has publicly quoted Medina as giving or relaying orders to shoot civilians. Two witnesses, recalling the mood of the men, said some felt they had at least tacit approval. The massacre allegedly occurred the next day, as Medina followed his first two platoons into the hamlet of Tungco. They met light resistance.

Normal Pattern

"The normal patterns in sweeps like this," observed an officer who later served in Medina's battalion, "was to encircle the hamlet, and round up all the people for interrogation. In that area, the VC didn't have government ID cards, so there would usually be four or five of them who would make a break for the paddies. Often I've seen our people withhold fire to avoid hitting civilians. Sometimes you got a wild melee, and people got hurt in the crossfire. It's a hard way to fight a war."

Indeed, fighting "selectively"—separating the guerrilla foe from the population—has been a new, frustrating experience for Americans (although many U.S. units have fought the enemy in semi-conventional mountain warfare far from the populated coast). Some units, notably the 4th Division in the Central Highlands have reacted by evacuating civilians from areas thinly spread allied troops are unable to control—contributing to the estimated total of 1,500,000 "refugees."

Man Responsible for Ecological Slums

By JUDI FREEMAN

Victoria bird watcher Enid Lemon has a series of slides which show the natural beauties of flora snd fauna of Vancouver Island, British Columbia, the American West and Mexico.

But on Friday when she gives her illustrated lecture in the Newcombe Auditorium on the wanderings of an amateur naturalist, she's going to slip in several slides of an "ecological slum."

"Just briefly, I want to show people what pollution did to a river in Mexico, how it can destroy all these beautiful areas," said Miss Lemon, head of the provincial government's forestry service library.

Miss Lemon agrees with the statement made recently by Dr. Marcus Bell, University of Vietoria ecology professor.

He said scientists have been far too quiet about the effects of pollution and suggested they had a moral obligation to speak out.

"University interest is exactly what we need to help solve the problem," said Miss Lemon.

"We're only tenants on this earth. What right do we have to destroy this world?" she asked in an interview.

She firmly believes that housewives can help solve the pollution problem, too.

"If every woman would switch to plain soap or a biodegradable detergent, pollution problems would lessen," she contended. The average laundry detergent is high in phosphate, an element which does not break down into substances which could be absorbed into the environment.

The phosphates go down the drain into rivers, lakes and seas, stimulating the plankton or algae to an unusual growth rate. Eventually, the balance of nature is so far out of whack that the algae covers the water, cuts out the sunlight and kills all other life, she said.

ENID LEMON CAPTURES BIRDS ON FILM

However, Miss Lemon hopes that something will be done before future generations are completely deprived of unpolluted wilderness.

In the meantime she spends all her spare time on photography excursions. Her slides have been willed to the provincial museum and the University of Victoria has made copies of slides portraying the area's fungi and ferns.

Her major interst is in the birds of the area.

"It is a challenge, especially with a still camera, to photograph birds. They have tolerances or distances in which they will allow you to approach. Once you establish that distance you can study their private lives—it's really peeping," she said.

Miss Lemon pointed out that a university study listed more than 800,000 naturalists or bird watchers in Canada.

As an amateur naturalist, Miss Lemon takes off for a weekend trip in her van equipped for camping and loaded down with a camera "but all you need for bird-watching are binoculars, an identification book and two strong legs."

Miss Lemon, a member of the Victoria Natural History Society, was president of the club for three years. She also has organized the Audubon Wildlife programs in the city for the past 10 years.

Myth of Ideal Marriage 'Ridiculous'

Outspoken Anthropologist Tells Students

STANFORD, Calif. (UPI) — People need to be reintegrated into cities, and marriages remodelled if our society is to survive, according to anthropologist Margaret Mead.

In a talk to Stanford University students, she termed "ridiculous" the idea that every marriage should be considered ideal.

"You can't be a good economist, a good husband, a good skier, a good tennis player or good in bed, anymore than every woman can be an ideal housewife," she said.

"That's why we'll have a growth of male-female associations, in which you play tennis with good players, ski with good skiers and dance with good dancers . . ."

Miss Mead reviewed the history of married couples after the Second World War who moved in with in-laws, rushed to own homes in suburbs and then tried to live with the ills of their folly.

She said this situation must be reversed in order to end segregation of young housewives with small children, oldsters in retirement communities and students confined to campuses.

"We've used up farm land, clogged the roads with cars and forced women to drive 15 miles to pick up the children or shop for an item they need," she said. "We've tried that for 25 years and it hasn't been productive."

She envisioned the construction of "many new cities the size of Chicago" with residents of all ages organized on the basis of abilities or interests.

"And we've got to stop paying people for not producing food when other people in the world are starving," she added.

Women Described As 'Oppressed Group'

VANCOUVER (CP) — Women will be regarded as cheap labor until they begin considering themselves wage earners rather than "home-centred," says Dr. Margaret Benston, a chemistry professor at Simon Fraser University.

Dr. Benston, who recently conducted a seminar at SFU on the topic of "women as an oppressed group," says women's work in the home is not regarded as real labor because it is unpaid.

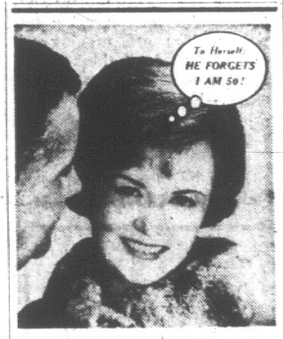

Society does not think of child-raising as work—although women with children work an 80- or 90-hour week, she says, adding:

"Women see themselves as home-centred and not as wage earners, and if they work outside the home they are cheap labor.

"Because they see themselves as home-centred, they most often work at part-time jobs with no fringe benefits and no pensions."

And because work in the home is not regarded as real work, it has not been made more efficient as has work in factories or manufacturing plants, said Dr. Benston.

"Despite the vacuum cleaner, it is still the same as in pre-industrial times."

LIFTS FACES OUT OF LINES, WRINKLES, SAG

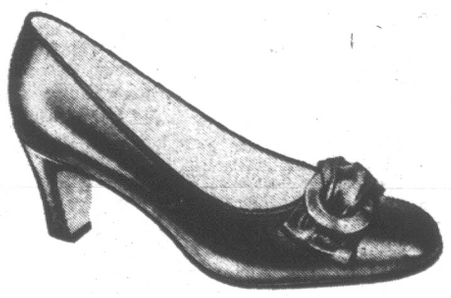

Even skin that sags and is no longer smooth, could be made firm and much younger looking. That "older look" usually appears first around the throat, but is comparatively easy to treat by very simple means that require no skill at all.

Get 2nd Debut with CEF 600 or CEF 1200 in double strength from your drug or dept. store and apply it gently to your throat and face each night before retiring. After just a few days, you will notice your skin becoming firmer again and smoother. That is because the 2nd Debut has revitalized your skin with a new supply of water from the surface clear into the inner skin.

Socialites Promise Boycott of Rare Furs

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A group of socially prominent women has announced a boycott of fur coats made from the pelts of wild foxes, leopards, cheetahs and other animals facing extinction.

Leopard, sealskin and other exotic furs will no longer be purchased by Mrs. John Fell Stevenson and a group of the Bay area's fashion set, they declared. They said at a press conference that they would continue wearing less-exotic mink, rabbit and other domestically cultivated species.

One member of the group, Mrs. William Hamm, said support would be welcome from Jacqueline Kennedy Onassis, whom Mrs. Hamm described as a world fashion leader.

"I doubt that she would be interested," Mrs. Hamm said, however. "She buys six or seven or eight fur coats a season."

Mrs. Stevenson commented: "It cannot be said there is more warmth in a cheetah coat than in a wool one. And, is it that much more enticing to look at?"

The boycott, sponsored by the Friends of the Earth conservation group, has secured written pledges of 35 women.

Mrs. Stevenson and Mrs. Hamm said many of the world's fur-bearing animals are being wiped out due to a worldwide demand for their skins.

Signers of the boycott pledge have agreed not to purchase the skin, pelts or feathers of animals or birds endangered by extinction, particularly by poachers in African game reserves seeking attractive prices on the high-fashion market.

Book Review

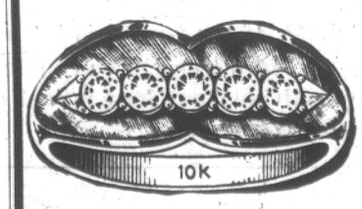

EVERYONE WAS BRAVE by William L. O'Neill is a book for the truly dedicated feminist who is interested in a detailed account of American women fighting for their place in society. More scholarly and objective than Betty Friedan's Feminine Mystique, it details the careers of brilliant women who refused to be crushed by male-dominated society, "who struggled to find a use for their education." Overlong biographies and lengthy accounts of early feminist meetings make it hard going for less aggressive feminists. But the theme of women as second class citizens is still common in contemporary writing from women's magazines to university theses. O'Neill is not too optimistic about women achieving their potential, but concludes that if they win the struggle . . . "women would be no longer bound by their past, but liberated from it with unimaginable consequences for the future of mankind." (Burns and MacEachern, $9.75)

Bullfighting Career Ended in Ontario

OTTAWA (CP) — The matadora's hat belonging to Isabel Marti-Aguilar is packed deep in the closet of her Ottawa home along with a picture of the Virgin of the Macarena, the patron saint of bullfighters. But her memories remain.

"Bullfighting is such a challenge, when you're risking your life every minute in the ring," she said in an interview here where she now lives with her artist husband Leo and their two-year-old son.

"It makes everyday life seem tame."

Isabel's career virtually began and ended in Canada. It began with a yen to be a veterinarian when she was growing up in Toronto, adopted home of her widowed, immigrant mother.

But her relatives took a dim view of such work for a woman. An uncle in Mexico even agreed to pay her way to the best school in the country for any higher education she chose—except veterinary medicine.

She asked to study bullfighting.

PUT HIM TO TEST

"I had put him to a trying test," she said of her uncle. "But there was nothing he could do. He had given a gentleman's word of honor."

By the time she was 18, Elizabet Bilbao, as her public knew her, had the finest of training from one of Mexico's most experienced matadors and during the next three years she fought her way to the top.

As one of Mexico's few respected matadoras, she was cheered by crowds as big as 80,000 persons on Sunday afternoons as her red cape flicked far below in the Plaza Mexico, the world's largest bull ring.

In 1957 she was awarded the coveted silver ear as top bullfighter in the southeastern states of Mexico.

WORLD DISINTEGRATED

Hers was a world that practised all its exacting traditions —the ceremonial drama before a fight where one cannot lay the hat on a bed without bringing bad luck, where help is needed to don the heavy encrusted coat, where one must rent an expensive hotel suite for the occasion and dress to the music of a flamenco guitarist.

But 11 years ago her world disintegrated in an incident recounted to this day with a never-failing accompaniment —a burst of raucous, sarcastic laughter.

Word came to her Mexican circles that Lindsay, an Ontario town, wanted to stage a bullfight for charity, something never before tried in Canada. Isabel was instructed to make arrangements.

But representatives of the Lindsay Chamber of Commerce, who flew south to oversee operations, didn't like the "scrawny, dark" men she had hired as fighters. They balked, she says, at the price of the bulls she planned to buy from one of Mexico's most reputable ranches.

Then there were the thousands of protest letters from people across Canada who despised bullfighting for its "cruelty."

The comparatively inexpensive bulls finally selected were held up at the Mexican-U.S. border "because they had ticks." And when they did arrive, they were lazy and tired from tight quarantine restriction.

Lindsay's "bloodless bullfight"—matadors used wooden swords to support their capes—turned out to be a matador's nightmare.

CAUGHT IN HORNS

At one point a floundering bull stepped on Isabel's cape. She tugged to get it away, then was caught in the bull's horns and flipped half way across the plaza.

The sand was so deep the fighters couldn't get a footing.

"The bulls were charging straight at our chests. We couldn't be artistic. All we could do was show our bravery."

With great passion she explained that a bullfighter does not enjoy killing. It is a "quick, fast, clean death at the last minute—when the bull has given up—when you are the master.

"It is the moment of truth.

"People like Leo and I compare it to ballet or painting. It is full of pageantry and much like the theatre for us and not truly a spectator sport as people have come to consider it —and as some bullfighters exploit it."

After Lindsay, Isabel was tumbled off her pedestal. She went to Spain to "live down that performance," returning a year later to Mexico to fight only in the small towns.

Isabel hasn't fought since her husband told her to stop nine years ago. But, flexing a rock-hard arm muscle, she says she could fight again.

DEAR ABBY . . .

Short-Hair Christ

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: You said in your column that Christ has long hair. Where did you ever get such an idea?

In the New Testament, Corinthians 11:14 is says:

"Does not Nature itself teach you that for a man to wear long hair is degrading to him, but if a woman has long hair, it is her pride."

Listen here, Abby, if Christ had had long hair, do you think that Paul would have made such a dirty crack about it in his letter to the Corinthians?

Look it up, and tell me if I am wrong.—A Yak From Yakima

DEAR YAK: I looked it up, and your quote is correct. I got the idea that Christ had long hair from some of the pictures of Christ I have seen. And in Paul's day, hair to the shoulder was probably considered "short"—hence his remarks.

DEAR ABBY: I have a neighbor who is such a wonderful friend she would do anything for me. When an emergency arises she is more than willing to take care of my children. That's my problem.

This lady swears like you wouldn't believe. I am sure she doesn't realize it, but she can't utter two sentences without using half a dozen swear words. After being around this woman for one day, my son came up with one of her choice vulgar words. When I told him that word was bad, and he shouldn't say it, he said, "Mrs. L. says it all the time, and it she can say it, why can't I?"

Now, Abby, I wouldn't hurt my friend for the world because as I have said she is a good person, but her language is something else! Is there a solution?—Her Neighbor

DEAR NEIGHBOR: I doubt if you would hurt your friend it you asked her to watch her language in the presence of the kiddies. (I also doubt that it would do much good, but it's worth a try.) And cover all the bases by telling your children that there are some good people who use bad words, and when children are told not to use those words, they shouldn't.

DEAR ABBY: I am writing this on behalf of all the fat people who have someone nagging them half to death to take off weight. I pray that you'll print this because a lot of people need to see it.

First of all, I realize that when my mother nags me about being fat, she means well, but she does more harm than good.

All fat people feel guilty because they're fat, but when they're nagged about it they feel worse, so when a person feels sorry for himself what does he do? He treats himself to something to make him feel better. And to a fat person, that's food. (And don't tell me to keep carrots and celery on hand because no fat person is satisfied with that. He wants a candy bar!)

A fat person knows he is fat. He puts on his clothes, takes them off, has the seams let out, and is ashamed everytime he goes shopping.

Do you think he wants to be fat? Good Lord, no! He prays to God every night to make him thin.

Right now I'm trying to lose weight, but my mother nags me constantly. When she's watching me, I don't eat much. But as soon as she turns her back, I sneak in the kitchen and stuff myself. Then I'm proud because I feel like I've put one over on her. Isn't that terrible?

So, please! Ask mothers and "friends" to quit nagging fat people. You are making us fatter! And don't think I am the exception. We are all the same.—Fatty In Philly

Coif Completes Evening Elegance

To accent this shirt-styled evening gown in beige and brown satin with a two-tone bow on the beige cummerbund and huge pockets, Geoffrey Beene chose a Helene Curtis coiffure. The hair is sleeked back from the face and crowned with a cluster of wide-rolled puffy curls. One tiny curly on the forehead softens the formality.

By FLORENCE DE SANTIS

While hair styles should always be chosen first for their flattery, they also fulfil an important accessory function. Holiday evening clothes require coiffures that complete their elegance.

The covered-up look is back for formal clothes, whether in the velvet pantsuit or the satin gown. Helene Curtis is one expert in matching designer styles with the right hairdos. In contrast to recent seasons, the styles are off the face, smooth on top, with a few rather than a dozen curls. Many are created with hairpieces, so a short daytime style can easily be turned into an elegant upsweep.

Chester Weinberg went so far as to create some special hairpieces of his own, to be made by Helene Curtis, but called "Chester's Coils." Braids entwined with jet beads or gold braid were among his ideas, both adding to the natural hair and decorating it at the same time.

Geoffrey Beene liked shirtdresses for evening, with his grandest in beige satin for the bodice, brown for the skirt, a bow-tied cummerbund tied in a two-tone bow. For this dress, he chose a coiffure entirely sleeked back to a crown of wide-rolled puffy curls that also descend the back of the head. In front, the accent of one curl in the middle of the forehead, like the little girl in the nursery rhyme, just to break up the classic formality.

On the other hand, Bill Blass of Maurice Rentner is in the mood for fluid, playful dresses in the Thirties manner, so he likes the hairdo to swing free in a smooth fall with turned-up ends. For anything in the mini Twenties mode, however, he sees short hair in fluffy styling which is done with a blower to keep it soft but uncurly.

Gayle Kirkpatrick sees elegant at-home evening wear in an Oriental manner of velvet tunic and pants with a sleeveless coat of blazing patchwork velvet lined in snowy white lamb. For it, he chose Helene Curtis' "Kabuki" hairdo, folded and puffed at the sides up to a smooth crown slightly waved and folded under at the back of the crown.

This close-up of the model at the left clearly shows the curl detail of the classically sleek coiffure as well as the two-tone bow accent.

'I Lean Toward the Black' Admits Housewife-Witch

HALIFAX (CP) — A housewife, a university student and an office worker here recently confessed to being witches, and agreed to be interviewed if their names were withheld.

The first witch, a housewife and mother, said she had been interested in witchcraft for 20 years.

"I'm interested in the practice of both white magic (power for good) and black magic (power for mischievous purposes) but I lean towards the black," she said.

A firm believer in spiritualism, she would like to locate a medium to communicate with a close relative who died about a year ago.

This Halifax witch corresponds regularly with the leader of a group of witches in the United States, and once attended a witchcraft service.

The university student developed an interest in witchcraft only a few years ago, and before coming here, used to meet with a group of girls to study the subject and practise their powers.

She claimed she could sense others' pains and read people's thoughts, but said she couldn't always use these powers.

The office worker, who is also a housewife, has been a witch since childhood.

She believes there is a supernatural power from which can be obtained certain powers, and she practises witchcraft as a religion in her home.

She claims she has predicted accurately the date of winter storms, and believes people with stronger powers than hers can communicate with the dead.

She said she believes in using her powers for good but she can "hex" people if necessary.

"In most cases, my hexes work."

Astral projection — making the spirit come out of the body—she claims to have experienced to a minor degree.

"When my spirit comes out I get the feeling I want to float away—but I don't dare."

SHOPPING GUIDE

Aunt Leads Penny To Gift Bargains

By PENNY SAVER

"If you have any ornament lovers on your list, I know of a shop that has a sale on English china," remarked Mathilda as we stepped off the bus at a downtown stop.

"Aunt Hester!" I exclaimed. "She's an annual problem for me."

"In that case, I had better come along," said my aunt with a smile, "since I, too, solved the problem of Hester's gift in that shop."

When I found out what Mathilda had chosen I had to hold back a pout. The store has a wide selection of tiny little items decorated with leprechauns ranging from 98 cents to $1.98.

"I bought her one of these, and one of these and one of these," said Mathilda pointing to a tea strainer, a tiny cream jug and a mustard pot shaped like a tea pot.

The tea strainer is made of stainless steel and is actually a perforated cup to dredge out a tea bag when the brew is done. It sits in a little ceramic cup shaped like a barrel that catches the drips. This item was $2.50 and is now $1.98.

The cream jug is no more than four or five inches tall and also echoes the wooden barrel design. It is 98 cents.

The mustard pot like a tea pot has a lid, a little plastic spoon and a plastic liner to make cleaning easy. Again the finish with the little leprechaun common to all these items, echoes the wooden barrel theme. The mustard pot is $1.25.

These items all say Victoria as well, since they were made in England as Victoria souvenirs. Other items include an ashtray for $1.35 with a photo of seagulls set in the bottom, a leprechaun bell for 98 cents, a a blue pin cushion in a barrel with a seagull sitting beside it for 98 cents.

Frustrated by Mathilda's previous purchase, I turned to another item on sale——Toby jugs with the body of the jug made to look like that jolly gentleman in his three-cornered hat. One corner of his hat forms the pouring spout.

These jugs come in three sizes. One for $1.75 (formerly $2.25) is very small. A medium size one, now selling for $2.25, used to cost $2.95. The largest is around the same size as a regular jug (it holds just over a pint of liquid) and has been reduced from $4.95 to $3.75.

Please call 382-3131 between 9 a.m. and 12 noon, for the name of the store we visited.

Following the reception the couple was entertained at a family dinner attended by their children, eight grandchildren and one great granddaughter.

Mr. and Mrs. Willett were married November 23, 1909, in Brandon, Man. and, after living in Saskatchewan for a number of years, took up residence in Victoria in 1941.

Sensational New Hearing Aid Costs Less Than 10 Cents Per Year To Operate
Space age technology has come to the hearing aid industry. A new hearing aid has been developed that actually costs less than ten cents per year to operate. This is a far cry from the $25 to $70 a year the average hearing aid costs to run. Aid also automatically controls speech interfering noises and can be custom adjusted for correct hearing on the spot. Lotta Returns For 25th Time

By ELIZABETH FORBES

Thousands of Victorians know Dr. Lotta Hitschmanova, dynamic executive director of the Unitarian World Service Committee who has been coming here at this season for 25 years, with her plea to help the starving children of the world.

Forbes

On her first visit, in 1944, it was the war orphans of France that Dr. Lotta was asking us to help. She was looking for long-distance foster parents who would each take on the care of a child for a year.

Her eloquence and her first-hand knowledge of conditions in Europe (she herself was a victim of the Second World War) brought her the foster parents she needed.

Today those orphans are grown men and women, many of them with children of their own. Dr. Lotta's grey-green eyes soften as she tells you that when the first babies came the USC sent layettes to them" and I became a grandmother many times over."

★ ★ ★

In the 25 years of her dedicated service, she has travelled the world, searching out the places where children are in desperate need.

Also in that time the Canadian people have helped her not only to feed hungry children but to build hospitals and schools for them and to rehabilitate their families in Korea, India, Greece, Hong Kong and other places.

This newspaper has sponsored the USC fund drive for 17 years and Times readers have had much to do with the success of Dr. Lotta's efforts.

Into the bargain a group of volunteer Victoria women headed by Mrs. E. G. Woodward maintain a depot here where good warm clothing is received, sorted, cleaned and packed for shipment wherever Dr. Lotta believes there is need.

★ ★ ★

When this energetic little woman breezes into town in her grey-green uniform and peaked military cap, she always has a special goal in mind. She knows there is terrific need in some particular place, she has a definite plan to overcome that need and she can tell you how much money she should have if the plan is to succeed.

No matter how ambitious the plan and the target for funds, Dr. Lotta is optimistic. "The people of Canada have never let me down," she will tell you.

That means the people of Victoria, too. They have always listened to her plea and they have always paused in their Christmas shopping and their Yuletide well-being to remember, through the Times fund, the pathetic little ones with big eyes and emanciated bodies, who need their help.

★ ★ ★

Dr. Hitschmanova reaches this city in the course of her cross-Canada tour, early Thursday morning. On Friday afternoon at 2 p.m. in Royal Canadian Legion Hall (Britannia Branch) she will speak at a public meeting planned to start the present drive.

She will show a film titled The USC Story. In it you will see where the money you have donated in past years has been used to good advantage and you will no doubt also be told where the money you plan to give this year will be allocated to help starving children somewhere in the world.

★ ★ ★

Now that I've written the word Christmas I suppose I might as well go on and express complete shock that it's actually 12 months since we last began planning for the Yuletide. Where on earth has the time gone?

Naturally there are wise ones who have planned and shopped and are almost ready for the festive season.

They bought their cards at the sales last January. They picked up their gifts here and there throughout the year. Right now they are boasting that those cards are addressed, the gifts wrapped and their cakes, puddings and mincemeats are on the way.

All very wonderful. I envy those people but I cannot emulate them. As usual I'll be joining the last-minute rush.

SENTENCE FOR ARSON SUSPENDED

A city man who earlier pleaded guilty to attempted arson was given a suspended sentence Tuesday and put on probation for 18 months.

Douglas Angrove, 37, of 545 Dalton, was intoxicated when he tipped over an oil stove in his home after a domestic quarrel, court was told earlier.

Judge Ostler told him Tuesday he is at a crossroad in his life and he should accept help for his personal problems because the future of his children is at stake.

Kiss Of Death . . . To Trees

VANCOUVER (CP) — Not that they're spoilsports, but forest scientists want to get rid of the mistletoe that is a tradition at Christmas parties.

It's fine stuff for bachelors but forestry experts report that in Western Canada alone, 25,000,000 cubic feet of standing timber is killed each year by the parasitic mistletoe.

Twenty-five federal forest rangers are searching British Columbia forests for mistletoe in a program designed to produce chemical or biological methods to eradicate the tree-killer.

Getting special attention this year is "witch's broom" a dwarf mistletoe that damages commercial softwood stands. Ther are five types of it found in Canada.

Some are peculiar to certain species of tree, others have a broad range of targets. Trees most commonly attacked are larch, hemlock, pine and Douglas fir.

At present, the only effective method of controlling mistletoe is "stand sanitation"—cutting or pruning infected trees to prevent the mistletoe spreading further.

Bonn-Warsaw Tensions Easing

BONN (WP) — West Germany formally proposed talks with Poland Tuesday aimed at normalizing relations between the once bitterly hostile countries after almost a quarter of a century.

Although the contents of a German note handed over in Warsaw were not revealed, Bonn officials have made clear that they are ready for talks on all subjects, including the most sensitive one of Poland's boundaries as drawn by Germany's conquerors.

The Bonn note has been in preparation for six months, ever since Polish leader Wladyslaw Gomulka suggested in May that the two countries negotiate directly on recognition for the "Oder-Neisse Line"—the shorthand phrase for Poland's western border.

NEW BOOST

However, West German politics got in the way, with the recent federal election. The coming to power of Chancellor Willy Brandt and his Social Democratic Party, which wants to talk seriously with the East, gave the Polish-West German dialogue a new boost.

The West German note, covering a page and a half, was delivered by Dr. Heinrich Boex, head of the Bonn Trade Mission in Warsaw, since Bonn has no diplomatic representation in Warsaw.

Officials in the West German Foreign Office are not expecting easy sledding in the bargaining ahead.

CONCESSIONS

In return for diplomatic relations, the Polish government is certain to demand trade concessions which will bring Poland closer to a par with the East Germans, who already enjoy trade benefits with the West through the "Interzonal Trade Agreement" between the two Germanies.

The major political issue is the "Oder-Neisse Line, "formed by two slow-flowing central European rivers. This is the boundary which was set by the Allies for Poland before the end of the Second World War. It embraced large parts of formerly German Silesia, Prussia and Pommerania, from which millions of Germans were driven after the subsequent defeat of Hitler's armies. These formerly German territories are still technically "under Polish a dministration" pending a final peace treaty between a reunited Germany and its conquerors.

But since such a treaty is now clearly a political dream, Poland is expected to demand from Bonn some provisional recognition, perhaps as part of a mutual agreement to respect present borders, or to renounce the use of force.

Chancellor Willy Brandt told a Polish newspaper last week that Bonn "respected" the desire of all Poles to live within secure boundaries. The official policy of Brandt's Social Democratic Party is that West Germany "recognizes, that is, respects" the Polish border.

East Germany recognized the finality of the "Oder-Neisse Line" in 1950, so the touchstone of Warsaw's border problem remains West Germany. On the other hand, Gomulka's proposal of direct talks with Bonn have worried the East Germans, since the talks suggest that Poland may be ready to settle its problems with West Germany without insisting on recognition of East Germany as a precondition.

Professor Advocates Takeover Of American-Owned Industries

EDMONTON (CP) — A University of Toronto history professor said Monday that takeover of some of the American-owned industry in Canada might be the only answer to U.S. domination.

There is no doubt that there has been and now is U.S. domination, Kenneth McNaught told about 450 persons in an opening address at a University of Alberta student-sponsored teach-in on American domination of Canada.

At a news conference later he said:

"Public ownership might be done in a number of ways. It could be at the federal level or at the provincial level depending on jurisdictions. Or, it could be jointly owned by a public investment corporation and either the federal or provincial governments.

"Or, conceivably in terms of public utilities—say a telephone company—owned at the municipal level if this is large enough, as in Montreal or Toronto.

"There is massive Canadian capital available. A terrible amount of it is tied up in insurance companies—we are the most over-insured people in the world."

Boy Dies

NEW WESTMINSTER (CP)—Bradford Fourchalk, nine, of nearby Burnaby died in hospital Tuesday in this Vancouver suburb, four months after he suffered head injuries in a traffic accident near Mission in the Fraser Valley.

TOBOGGAN IMPAIRMENT

THOMPSON, Man. (CP) — A 21-year-old Thompson man has been fined $200 and costs and has had his driver's licence suspended for six months for operating a power toboggan while impaired.

John Edward Bellfontoine was arrested Sunday after RCMP saw him operating his machine erratically. He pleaded guilty to the charge in court.

Thompson Magistrate Neil MacPhee said it was the first such case in Manitoba.

Moon Patches Pursued

By George Lardner, Jr.

HOUSTON (WP) — Relying on an obscure regulation published last July, the United States space agency has been quietly trying to make "unauthorized" possession of souvenir Apollo flight patches a federal offence.

It has also been enlisting FBI agents in an effort to make it stick.

America's astronauts, it appears, feel strongly that they should be the only ones generally entitled to give the patches out.

"They sort of feel it's a personal thing," says Julian Scheer, associate NASA administrator for public affairs.

Businessmen who have undertaken to reproduce the insignias for sale contend just as strenuously that they ought to be in the public domain.

NASA, they complain, has been cracking down in heavy-handed fashion.

Meanwhile, space agency contractors like Grumman Aircraft and Engineering Corp., which made the lunar module, have been granted exceptions to the blanket rule.

'HEAT'S ON'

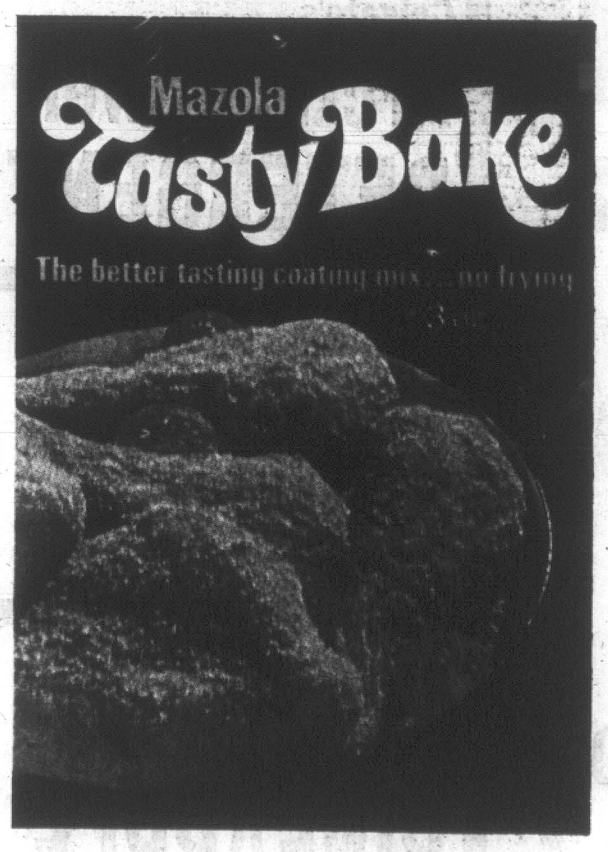

"They've had the FBI after me," protested Louis Arsenault, president of Space Age Enterprises here. "How do I know? They knocked on my door about eight weeks ago.

"They tried to scare me into stopping. They had a NASA security man with them."

"The heat's on," agreed George W. Tiedemann, vice-president of Space Promotions Inc., a Florida firm that makes tie clips and other jewelry bearing Apollo flight insignia. "People are afraid to buy them and people are afraid to sell them."

Scheer said he was unaware of FBI involvement in the crackdown. But he defended the drive as a legitimate effort "to discourage exploitation" of the insignias, which the astronauts design themselves and hand out at banquets and other ceremonial events.

NIAGARA FALLS TURNED BACK ON

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont. (CP) — The flow of water over the American Falls was back to normal today as workmen continued to remove a 600-foot cofferdam that held back part of the Niagara River for five months.

Crews carted away earth and rock from the dam, stretching between Goat Island and the United States shore.

Work will be interrupted Thursday for the Thanksgiving holiday in the United States.

An official of the New York state frontier authority said about 6,000 persons visited Goat Island Tuesday to watch the progress of rewatering that began in the morning.

Col. R. S. Hansen, district engineer from the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers at Buffalo, said the $1,450,000 diversion of the waters over the Horseshoe Falls to study erosion on the Niagara River bed and face of the American Falls, will save the beauty of the falls for future generations.

He said the results of the project, conducted under the auspices of the International Joint Commission, will be made public in October, 1971.

Dam Project Holds Promise

OUTLOOK, Sask. (CP)—Two years after ribbon-cutting politicains officially launched it, the $117,00,000 South Saskatchewan River dam project has all the untested promise of a robust infant.

People working close to the giant project say they can't tell yet how it will prove most useful—as a means of irrigating vast tracts of dusty farmland, as a source of hydro-electric power or as a centrepiece in a huge recreation area.

When Saskatchewan and Ottawa signed an agreement July 25, 1958, to share the cost of building the Gardiner Dam and of harnessing the water flowing through this community 60 miles south of Saskatoon, Prairie wheat was king.

Now, things are different.

"What's the point of filling up bins with wheat these days?" says George Hart, manager of the dam project. "With the market situation the way it is, people are really searching for other crops."

But while researchers are sifting analytically through the soil to determine its best agricultural use, farmers are advised to keep growing wheat, oats, barley and flax, the crops they know best.

Later, specialty crops—perhaps sugar beets or alfalfa meal—may be grown in large quantities, and herds of cattle may roam the valley where farmers once were at the mercy of nature.

REACHES HUDSON BAY

Originating in the Rocky Mountains, the South Saskatchewan River flows east to Elbow, Sask., 110 miles northwest of Regina, then swings sharply northward through Saskatoon, later joining the North Saskatchewan River and passing through Lake Winnipeg into Hudson Bay.

This fall there were between 6,000 and 7,000 acres of land under irrigation in the region, criss-crossed by a network of 430 miles of canals and drains.

G. S. Brown, chief engineer for the Saskatchewan agriculture department's conservation and development branch, says the irrigated acreage likely will rise to about 20,000 next spring.

As a result of soil surveys, an original long-term goal of 500,000 acres of land under irrigation has been trimmed to 212,000 acres.

By the end of the Saskatchewan government's current fiscal year March 31, irrigation will have cost more than $11,800,000, a burden borne solely by the province in the hope of an eventual rich dividend.

A power plant, to convert the river flow into electricity for the southern half of the province, cost an additional $17,000,000.

Rising 210 feet across the river bed and stretching three miles across the sparsely-treed shallow valley, the dam is an impressive sight.

BOON TO TOURISTS

Some of the flow down a 380-foot spillway goes to potash mines near Saskatoon. Use of man-made Lake Diefenbaker behind the dam for fishing, boating and swimming could turn out to be a thriving boon to tourists.

As nature adjusts, the lake's 475-mile shoreline constantly changes.

D. M. Hitchins, project co-ordinator for the Saskatchewan Water Resources Commission, says the government agency is keeping a firm grip on affairs.

"Not only do we control the land around the project, we also control the water," he said in an interview.

Recently the provincial government revised its policy on buying agricultural land in the project area and boosted to $83 from $80 the price that would be paid for an acre of top farm land.

The bottom price, for non-arable land, remains at $12 an acre.

Under the new deal, a farmer with a family who lives and works on the land full-time may get a "disturbance allowance" of up to $7,200, as part of a purchase price.

Some dryland farmers fought bitterly against the dam project and some are still battling for a better price on their land.

The allowance for disturbing the farmer and his family, part of a new policy that went into effect Nov. 1, replaces such practices as applying a bonus according to the number of irrigable acres on a farm.

Prairie Hospitals Facing Strikes

REGINA (CP) — Non-professional workers at two more Saskatchewan hospitals voted Tuesday night to strike to back up wage demands but Premier Ross Thatcher still insists the government can not afford to go beyond the increase offered earlier to the union.

At Yorkton Hospital, 123 of 169 workers voted to strike and at Kamsack Union Hospital, R. J. Henderson, prairie director for the Canadian Union of Public Employees, said 50 workers had voted "100 per cent in favor of strike action."

The workers joined others at hospitals in Weyburn, Battleford and Humboldt who had voted earlier to strike. Negotiations are continuing at four other hospitals and two sanatoriums. No strike dates have been set.

At St. Joseph's Hospital in Estevan and Victoria Union in Prince Albert, workers already are on strike.

The workers, orderlies, clerical and kitchen help, are asking for an 8.4-per-cent wage increase. There are 183 striking workers at the Prince Albert hospital and 90 at Estevan.

'CAN'T AFFORD IT'

Premier Thatcher, who earlier said strikers could wait "until heck freezes over" for the 8.4-per-cent wage boost, Tuesday night said the province just could not afford to pay the increase.

It could not be given "because of the Saskatchewan wheat sale situation and tight money," he said in Weyburn.

He told the strikers that if the board of governors of any hospital ask the government to invoke Bill 2, it will be done immediately.

Bill 2, passed in 1966 in an emergency session of the legislature, provides for daily fines of $1,000 each for workers who do not report to work within 48 hours of a government return-to-work order.

Premier Thatcher said the government must exercise restraint in granting pay increases and urged workers to accept the six-per-cent boost offered earlier by the government.

John Macmillan, national director of CUPE, said the premier is a "dictator," while another CUPE official said the strike will continue until workers get the increase demanded.

MORALE IS HIGH

Barry Davis of Regina, representing the workers at Weyburn, said "morale is very high," at the Estevan hospital, where the strike began Oct. 23.

Strikers are receiving $25 weekly in strike pay, plus $15 a week for each dependent adult and $10 for each child, up to three children, when an adjustment is made.

JURY URGES NEW AGENCY TO AID YOUNG DRUG USERS

VANCOUVER (CP) — A coroner's jury recommended legalization of marijuana and hashish and formation of an agency to help young drug users Tuesday, following an inquiry into the death of Kevin McClay, 17.

The jury ruled Kevin's death Nov. 5 was accidental due to a heroin induced coma and said:

"If we have an unenforceable law then either we get rid of it or we make it enforceable. In our opinion marijuana and hashish could be made generally available through controlled outlets.

●

"Laws relating to remaining so-called soft drugs and hard drugs heroin must be made enforceable."

Police found McClay dead in a Vancouver basement suite surrounded by 3,000 gelatine capsules commonly used for packaging heroin, 200 to 250 tablets of suspected LSD, suspected hashish and marijuana, weighing scales and aluminum foil.

●

The jury was told that no one could reach the boy—neither his parents, his two older brothers nor the RCMP who had checked him twice for drugs and had warned him to lay off heroin "for his own good."

The jury attacked the lack of education regarding drug use both in schools and in homes and pointed out the lack of any social agency to establish dialogue with suspected drug users.

It suggested that law officers should contact the proposed agency when it became apparent they were dealing with a minor after expressing distress that the RCMP involved in the McClay case made no attempt to contact his parents even though it was apparent the boy was in trouble.

Hydro Wants to Triple Power Output

VANCOUVER (CP) — The continuing demand for electrical energy should force the provincial government into a decision this year about financing new generating facilities, Dr. Gordon Shrum, chairman of the British Columbia Hydro and Power Authority, said Tuesday.

He said in the Crown corporation's annual forecast of power growth needs that the decision should be made this year to provide enough time for construction and equipment ordering.

The report, which shows that maximum power demands over the next 11 years will grow at the rate of 9.3 per cent a year, said the corporation's decision has been delayed because of a partial freeze on government construction caused by tight money and high interest rates.

Hydro said it will need 36,113,000,000 kilowatt hours of energy in the year ending March 31, 1980, compared with 13,603,000,000 kilowatt hours used in the year ended March 31, 1969.

Dr. Shrum said he hoped to discuss the matter soon with Premier W. A. C. Bennett, who as finance minister is Hydro's fiscal agent.

NOT UNSYMPATHETIC

"I am not unsympathetic to the problem of hospitals and schools, which are demanding that money be borrowed, nor to the needs of welfare," he said.

"But we also have to think about jobs. If we don't provide for the power needs of B.C., it will affect the job situation. If there is not enough power there could be a brownout (a voluntary or mandatory cutback in power)."

Dr. Shrum said the postponement of a decision on new facilities "could develop into a serious situation" and if a crash program is needed "it is very expensive in terms of construction, civil works and equipment delivery."

He said Hydro's current capacity of 3,510,000 kilowatt hours would provide sufficient supplies for three years.

The chairman said in an interview that if the government maintained its ban on heavy capital expenditures Hydro might be forced to use makeshift generating facilities in the form of gas turbine plants or small thermal units.

The report listed the following alternatives for power supply:

—Another dam and more generators on the Peace River a few miles downstream of the W. A. C. Bennett Dam;

THERMAL PLANT

—Construction of a thermal plant on Vancouver Island;

—Installation of generators at the Mica Dam now under construction on the Columbia River, and —Construction of the Kootenay Canal plant on the Kootenay River which would take advantage of a new reservoir to be created by the Libby Dam in the United States.

One reason for the forecast increases in power demand is more mining activity, primarily in the Highland Valley, Princeton and East Kootenay areas.

The report said this is caused by the coal mining boom north of Fernie where Kaiser and Fording Coal are preparing for large-scale production and there are prospects of others.

It also forecast existing pulp and paper mills, also heavy users of power, will maintain full production and there will be new production.

Residential and general sales are expected to maintain steady growth levels in line with the annual population increase of about 10 per cent.

Game Preserve 'Open' to Indians

WHITEHORSE, Y.T. (CP) — Indians in the Yukon Territory can legally hunt for food on game preserves because territorial game laws prohibiting the action are not constitutional, the judge of the Northwest Territories said Tuesday.

Mr. Justice William Morrow upheld an appeal by Tom Smith against a conviction for shooting a moose in a Yukon game sanctuary and ordered the fine and costs be refunded.

Smith, of Haines Junction, was fined $25 and costs last December for shooting a moose in the Pine Creek game sanctuary, 100 miles west of Whitehorse.

The written judgment centred around an interpretation of "unoccupied crown lands" and was expected to have an impact on the Northwest Territories where game laws are similar.

Judge Morrow ruled that by the Yukon Act, the commissioner-in-council can regulate hunting by Indians in occupied crown lands but not in unoccupied territory, except in the case of game which has been declared in danger of becoming extinct by federal authorities.

Reasons Given

VANCOUVER (CP) — Unsettled employment conditions and the general tight money situation were suggested Tuesday as factors in the failure of the United Appeal campaign to reach its 1969 goal of $3,900,000. It was announced at a meeting of the UAC board of directors that so far the fund has reached 87.7 per cent of the final projected goal of $3,757,726—which is 96.3 per cent of the original goal of $3,900,000.

Health Care Cost Cuts Coming . . . But Not Easily

By KEN KELLY

OTTAWA (CP) — Provincial governments have been offered recipes for curtailing health care costs but it will be months before the lines of action emerge clearly.

This became evident Tuesday in the wake of meetings of federal and provincial health ministers which authorized publication of three volumes of recommendations and criticisms of the health care system.

Federal Health Minister John Munro said the health ministers agreed to establish semi-permanent machinery to study the proposals made to them by seven "task forces" set up a year ago.

Some could be adopted now by the provinces. Others could be implemented by the federal government. But the main recommendations for lines of action would be placed before the next conference at a date to be set later, possibly today.

Two main threads in the reports concerned regional planning and control of health services and facilities and improved administrative and management controls.

But the regional control proposals seemed headed for rough weather.

Ontario Health Minister Tom Wells said regional planning and control is central to development of his province's health services but he does not favor giving regional boards the wide executive powers proposed to the health ministers in the "task force" studies.

Mr. Munro left the question of implementing regional proposals to provincial initiative when asked to comment about the statement in the reports that regional planning should go ahead immediately.

British Columbia Health Minister Ralph Loffmark declined to discuss the regional proposals and made it plain to reporters that only the provinces could decide what should be done within their own jurisdiction.

And Mr. Wells raised the whole issue of federal jurisdiction in the health field by saying that only after it has been clearly defined by Ottawa can organized development of health services proceed.

There was no immediate reaction from the provinces on the proposals for greater administrative and management controls over health care services and facilities.

But at a news conference attended by Mr. Munro and most of the provincial ministers, Health Minister Norbert Theriault of New Brunswick said his province and others are "very disappointed" in the federal decision a year ago to scrap the hospital construction grants program.

Earlier Health Minister Sidney Green of Manitoba warned against the federal government trying to withdraw from such cost-sharing programs as medical care and hospital insurance.

Mr. Munro noted that on hospital insurance the federal act requires five years notice before federal withdrawal, but for medical care Ottawa is required to discuss future participation with the provinces before 1972. These programs were not being cut.

Main attention of the conference, being held behind closed doors, was centred on the task force reports and their 384 recommendations, spread through 1,000 printed pages. The reports have been in provincial government hands at least a month.

They warn that the "remorseless escalation of costs" must be curtailed to avoid higher taxes, poor quality of service or both. Costs were projected at $6,200,000,000 by 1972, up from $3,700,000,000 in 1967, at present rates of increase.

With 70 per cent of costs represented by fees, salaries and wages, only greater productivity and better operation of the health care system could cushion against the impact of pay increases.

The reports called for major reforms of the system before the public is asked to pay more money to maintain or improve existing standards.

Israel Said Interfering With Affairs Of Moscow Regime

By STEPHEN SCOTT

UNITED NATIONS (CP) — The United States and the Soviet Union clashed Tuesday over the question of the position of Jews in the Soviet Union.

Israel, which introduced the whole matter, and the United Nations itself, also came under fire.

A Soviet letter was circulated as a UN document strongly protesting what it called the "provocative and slanderous" action of Israel in asking for help from Secretary-General U Thant for 18 families in Soviet Georgia wishing to emigrate to Israel.

Later in the General Assembly's political committee the United States brought up the question of these families and another in the Soviet Union and said that Jews in Russia are being deprived of the opportunity to preserve their cultural identity.

The Soviet Union entered strong objections to the presentation by Rita Hauser of the United States and prevented her from completing the reading of a letter she said came from one Soviet family.

Soviet ambassador Jacob Malik had circulated as a UN document a letter he sent to Thant protesting a news conference and subsequent actions by Israeli Ambassador Yacob Takoah earlier this month.

Takoah said then the 18 families in Soviet Georgia wanted to emigrate to Israel but were prevented from doing so by the Soviet Union.

At the same time Israel asked Thant to use his good offices on behalf of those families.

Malik said that Israel was interfering with the internal affairs of a member state of the UN, a violation of the charter. He said the aim of the Israelis was to divert attention from the "flagrant violations of human rights" by Israelis holding captured Arab lands.

Malik said that the UN should not have circulated the Israeli document and should not have given Israel facilities to hold a news conference for UN correspondents.

Canada has expressed concern in the humanitarian committee over the fate of Jews in the Soviet Union.

Airlines Agreed On Fare Changes

CARACAS, Venezuela-(AP) — The world's major airlines have reached general agreement on revisions in their North Atlantic rate schedules, including a new 29-to 45-day excursion fares.

The 43 members of the International Air Transport Association, in effect, revalidated—with some modifications—the air fare package adopted in Dallas, Tex., last February, H. Don Reynolds, chairman of IATA's traffic conference, said. He said details still must be worked out, and all IATA members must approve the final agreement before it can take effect.

Airline delegates have been meeting here since Nov. 18 in an attempt to end the price war set off by Alitalia's posting of a $299 Rome-New York roundtrip fare in October. The conference now is looking at fares on mid-Atlantic routes.

MODIFY RATES

Reynolds said agreement had been reached on three major modifications in the Dallas rate package for North Atlantic routes:

1. The 14- to 21-day excursion fare period will be extended to 28 days.

2. A new 29- to 45-day individual excursion fare will be added to the schedule, with the fare varying according to season. The roundtrip New York-London fare, for example, will range from $250 in the winter to $295 during the summer.

3. There will be an 80-passenger fare for groups having a "common denominator" and not formed solely to take advantage of group rates. On the New York-London route, for example, roundtrip fare will be $170 off-season, $190 in the basic season, and $235 in the summer.

"We have every reason to believe the aggreement will be final," said Reynolds. "We still have a lot of work to do."

Year In Jail For Having Stolen Goods

A man caught with a quantity of stolen women's clothing was sentenced to a year in jail when he appeared in provincial court Tuesday.

Court was told that William Pick, 35, of no fixed address, had a lengthy record of similar offences.

Police earler testified that Pick was found with $251 worth of women's clothing Nov. 10, part of $2,500 in clothing stolen from a Government Street boutique a few days before.

The accused told officers he had bought the clothes from an unidentified man at the rear of a beer parlor.

Edward Karpenko, 30, of no fixed address, was fined $200 when he was sentenced for theft of goods valued under $50.

Court had been told earlier that Karpenko tried to shoplift $10 worth of underwear from Woodward's Nov. 15.

Heart of TV 'Ratings Game'

By JERRY BUCK

NEW YORK (AP) — Some of the most powerful people in the United States television industry sit at home and build fortunes and destroy ambitions with the twist of a dial. They are the Nielsen families.

If you can please these 1,200 families, network executives will cater to you, sponsors will flock to your program and the public will adore you.

If you don't, it's oblivion for your show after 13 weeks on the air.

That, of course, is a simplified version of how the ratings work. But the numbers do determine program popularity, and delivering a big audience for a sponsor is what the American television business is all about.

●

Supremacy in the ratings means higher advertising revenues, and this year the stakes are higher than ever. NBC is making a serious, determined effort to wrest first place from CBS—which it has held since 1955—and has taken an early lead. ABC is making its best showing in years.

The ratings debate is an old one. Critics assail the race for high numbers as an abdication of the industry's public responsibility in pursuit of profits. From the other side comes the contention that shows need good ratings to attract sponsors and, from some, the contention that the public is getting what it wants.

The daily and weekly ratings are analysed, evaluated, interpreted and sometimes cursed by such subscribers as the networks, producers, advertising agencies, advertisers and talent agencies.

●

In television's short history, rating services have come and gone, and at present the A. C. Nielsen Co. of Chicago is the oracle of American tastes.

The 1,200 families in the basic national Nielsen survey are selected to present the country's 58,000,000 television households.

A company spokesman contends the sampling conforms to U.S. census projections in population distribution, income, education levels and racial mixture.

A new group of families is picked each year.

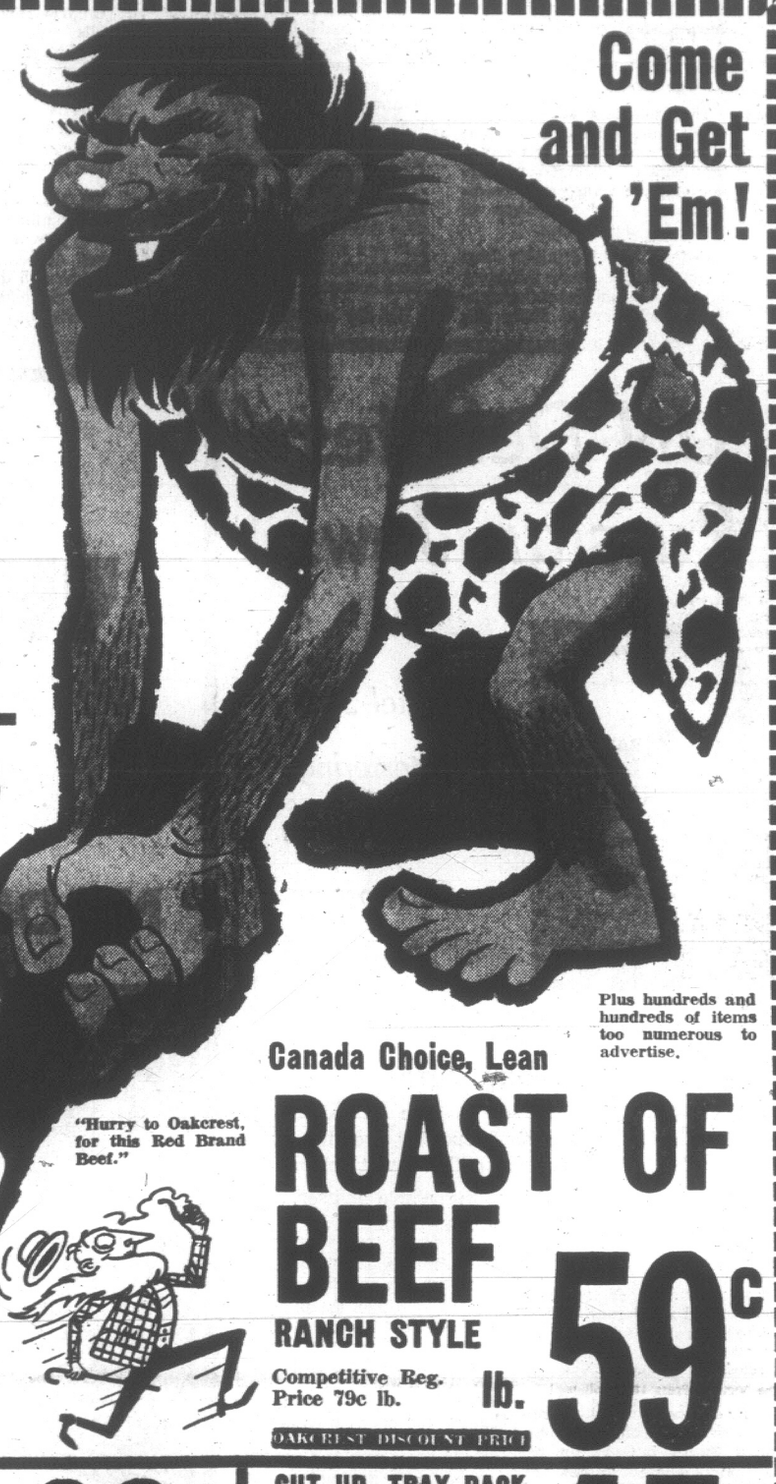

Nielsen primarily counts households rather than total number of viewers. There is growing support for some system of counting people, but as yet no effective means has been devised to do so quickly and economically.

When a family agrees to participate, a meter is attached to its TV set and it records on a punched tape whether the set is on and to which channel it is tuned. A once-a-minute scan allows the meter to detect channel twisters.

The tape cartridge is mailed in weekly and participating families receive 50 cents as a handling fee. Nielsen also pays half of their TV repair bills.

The names of Nielsen families are kept secret so that they cannot be influenced in their viewing.

We wish to extend our heartfelt thanks and appreciation for the acts of kindness, cards of sympathy and beautiful floral offerings received from our many friend sand relatives in our sad bereavement in the loss of a beloved husband and father. We especially wish to thank the Rev. Hays, Drs. and nurses of Jubilee Hospital and officers and members of Henderson Lodge, AF and AM.
Mrs. Agnes Lockett and Family.

At some time or other the thought that we would suffer the loss of a loved one occurred to us, but we little realized the extent of sympathetic understanding that would exist. We are more grateful than mere words can express to all of you who did so much to help us through this time.
—Oliver Amor and family.

Tonight's Top Television Shows

NON-TIPPER ALAN KING strikes a blow for John Q. Public tonight on Kraft Music Hall. King, with Angie Dickinson above, in a sketch from the production, refuses to tip the maitre d' for a reserved table during "Alan King—Public Consumer Number One", 9 p.m. on Channel 5.

MOVIE TO WATCH this evening is at 8:30 on Channels 2 and 6—Night of the Iguana. Based on the award-winning Tennessee Williams play, it stars Richard Burton, Ava Gardner, Deborah Kerr and Sue Lyon. It's set in a decrepit Mexican hotel, and revolves around the at-odds emotions of the defrocked minister, the Rev. Mr. Shannon.

THEN CAME BRONSON. 10, Channel 5. "Two Per Cent of Nothing." Bronson and his inevitable penchant for helping losers takes over the show again. This time, it's a wildcatter who's down to his last few bucks, but is hanging on to his dream of bringing in a big oil gusher. The 2 per cent of the title refers to Bronson's take, if and when the oil comes in. Fans will probably be pulling for Bronson's desperate employer, played by guest star Steve Ihnat.

MEDICAL CENTRE. 9, Channels 7, 12. The series tries to be current with a drama about a student's attack on a psychology professor. Our fighting doc, Joe Gannon, becomes convinced physical problems are the cause of young Sorenson's outburst against his teacher, but he has a hard time convincing the professor. Putting Gannon on the side of the kid instead of the opposition makes Joe an underdog again, and that's half the message. Fans should know Gannon's heart is in the right place along with his medical training.

GLEN CAMPBELL HOUR. 7:30, Channel 7. A holiday show with Glen's parents and Flip Wilson on tap. From Delight, Arkansas, come Mr. and Mrs. Wes Campbell to prove their boy inherited some of his talent. The Campbell men sing "Poor Married Man," and Mrs. Campbell counters with "That Silver Haired Daddy of Mine". As for Flip Wilson, he loves to dress up and does so playing a waitress in a diner. He also talks about a girl friend and faces a bear, about to gobble him up for Thanksgiving. Campbell, his Dad and banjoist Larry McNeeley trot out "Turkey in the Straw," Jackie DeShannon sings solo, and Glen closes with "Try a Little Kindness."

MUSIC HALL. 9, Channel5. "Alan King — Public Consumer Number One. " Funny show from start to finish with a perfect cast to match. Alan King's long-suffering consumer is well known to his legion of fans, but familiarity won't stop you from laughing at his targets tonight. Whether he's exploding about "planned obsolescence" or wailing about credit cards, plastic wrappings, or the gullible and vulnerable consumer, he's grand. When he joins Marian Mercer, Angie Dickinson, and Paul Lynde in an assortment of skits that ring a bell, he gets excellent help, particularly from Marian Mercer, who's equally intolerable as a disinterested nurse or a programmed salesgirl. Tune in and enjoy them all.

Natural Gas Export Hearings Very High-Priced Operation

By CARL MOLLINS

OTTAWA (CP) — By almost any measure, public examination of national policy on the export of natural gas is a big-money affair.

Most components of the hearings that opened Tuesday before the National Energy Board carried hefty price tags and established Canadian records of scale.

The hearings are designed both to establish a policy for guidance of the board in allocating gas for export and to deal with five specific applications for licences to pipe more gas to the demanding United States market.

Whatever the outcome on the main issues, cracked one participant at the close of the first day, one result could be an increase in the selling price of gas because of the cost of the hearings alone.

Documentation was only the most obvious of the features with an implicitly-high price. The army of about 50 lawyers on hand was another, not to mention such sideline expenses as same-day transcripts in scores of copies of every jot and tittle of legal argument.

Nobody would attempt to put a total price on proceedings that show every sign of stretching into next year.

One company president commented that while it makes him go pale to think what his lawyers and expert witnesses are costing—one counsel was said to be a $500-a-day man and most experts are ferried from Western gas country—he almost faints when he contemplates the cost of compiling the formal application for the export licence.

The applicants were asked by the board to submit evidence on the general philosophy of export policy—how to calculate reserves, domestic needs, surplus for export, price and other factors—in addition to supporting their particular bids for licences.

That involves hiring economists, engineers and other experts to add to the proliferation of studies, tables, charts and maps that fill carton boxes, spill from desks and strain secretarial-arm ligaments in the crowded hearing room.

It took 3½ hours Tuesday just for the laywers to announce their presence formally, to name which one of more than 30 intervening companies, associations or governments they represented and to table their documents as official exhibits.

When the parade to the microphones was through, there were 72 official exhibits. Counting sub-numbers, there were 127 separate documents.

The present voluminous applications tend to be shots in the dark in some senses. Because the board combined the hearing on general philosophy with specific licence applications, the applicants could hardly trim bids to policy because the policy is unknown.

Argument Tuesday featured a half-hour tangle because the main contenders were divided on interpretation of exactly what they were supposed to be presenting on the first of the many agenda issues.

While the costs in money, time and byway argument thus are likely to climb steeply, the stakes also are big.

Farm Adjustments 'Misunderstood'

By HENRY HEALD

OTTAWA (CP) — There is widespread misunderstanding in the farm community of the basic economic realities affecting the rate of adjustment within Canadian agriculture and the rewards involved, Darrel H. Plaunt, an agricultural economist, said Tuesday.

The rate of adjustment can be stepped up to develop strong farms which share in the benefits of a growing economy, Dr. Plaunt told the annual agricultural outlook conference.

A former professor at Guelph University, Dr. Plaunt came here recently as director of the farm management division of the federal agriculture department's economics branch. But he stressed Tuesday that he was speaking as an individual economist and not as a departmental representative.

He said there had never been a time when the need for adjustment in the agricultural industry was so great. Nor had there been a time when the levels of employment and prosperity in other sectors of the economy were in better shape to absorb the changes.

Dr. Plaunt spoke against the background of a survey which showed that only 174,000 of Canada's 430,000 farmers could live adequately on the $4,300,000,000 that form the annual cash receipts for farmers.

ADD TO ECONOMY

Looking at the positive side of it, Dr. Plaunt said 100,000 farmers leaving farms which paid them $1,500 a year and taking jobs where they earned $4,500 a year would contribute $300,000,000 more each year to the national economy.

But policies to increase the withdrawal from agriculture must be balanced by those designed to increase the adjustment within agriculture.

Policies such as early-retirement annuities, retraining, relocation grants, credit facilities to assist the move off the farm and information on non-farm employment must be balanced by schemes to increase the managerial skills of those who stay on the farm, increase the availability of credit, decrease risks through insurance and assistance for farm consolidation.

Dr. Plaunt said the main thing is to avoid "panic policies" based on solving the problems of an individual commodity.

First-War Veteran Dies at 77

Funeral services were held today at McCall's Floral Chapel for Walter John (Jack) Smith, 1123 Pandora, a colorful participant in Victoria Day parades for 20 years.

During those years no parade would have been complete without the sight of Smith, dressed in immaculate morning clothes, his handlebar moustaches waxed, riding a huge old-fashioned tandem bicycle.

FINAL PARADE

Smith's last parade was in 1966 when, unable to pedal the complete route, he had one of his sons arrange a truck to carry him and his mount.

A member of the Old Contemptibles, Smith served in the Grenadier Guards before the First World War, joining the Duke of Cornwall's Light Infantry on the outbreak of hostilities.

Born in Essex, England, in 1892, he emigrated to Canada with his wife, Emily, and family in 1929.

HERE IN 1938

They lived in Edmonton until 1938 when they came to Victora and Smith became an inspector for the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals.

He started his own cartage business (Smith's Cartage) in 1943, retiring in 1962 at the age of 70.

A member of Britannia Branch No. 7, Royal Canadian Legion, he attended the recent Remembrance Day parade at the Cenotaph.

Smith is survived by his wife; four sons, William, Thomas and Gordon of Victoria, and Walter, Vancouver; two daughters, Mrs. K. (Queenie) Conrad of Hope and Mrs. A. (Joan) Glante of Monessen, Penn. There are 14 grandchildren and three great-grandchildren.

Burial was at the Veterans' Cemetary.

Elk Member 50 Years

Percy Fitzsimmons, who joined Victoria Lodge 2 of the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks in 1919, was honored recently by the lodge for 50 years of continuous membership.

Fitzsimmons, former managing director of Empire Realty, was presented a pen by Exalted Ruler Morley MacDonald.

A well-known former local athlete Fitzsimmons has held every post in the local lodge including Exalted Ruler, in 1942, 1943, and 1951.

At 78 years of age he still attends lodge meetings regularly and is president of the inter-club snooker club.

INDIANS occupying Alcatraz persevere despite adverse weather and living conditions. Here, they prepare a meal in the open, over broken fireplace grille. (AP Wirephoto.)

Indians Cold, Hungry But Holding Island

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — More than 100 American Indians occupying Alcatraz have risked drowning, shivered from the cold, suffered shortages of food and fresh water.

When boats get close, they shout: "What have you got?"

But the Indians, including women and infants, vow to remain on Alcatraz Island until federal or state officials meet their demands.

★ ★ ★

They want help in reconstructing a burned out San Francisco Indian centre and increased aid to 100,000 Indians in California.

So far, the landlord of the former federal prison, the General Services Administration, has given them no deadline in which to get off. Interior Secretary Walter Hickel has agreed to meet with them, but no arrangements for the talks have been made.

Today, the sixth day of their occupation, the Indians appealed for money and U.S. Thanksgiving Day provisions through their "Alcatraz relief fund."

Fresh water, food, blankets and medicine come by boat. A

Alcatraz: 'This Land Is My Land'

call went out Monday for tetanus vaccine after several youngsters cut their feet on rusty nails.

★ ★ ★

Temperatures on the 21-acre rock have dipped to the low 30s at night.

There is no heat except from firewood ripped off the ramshackle cellblocks, and dozens of Indians have colds and sore throats.

They have no refrigeration for food.

Occasionally they have waded and swum out to help pull in small supply boats.

They cook food on a broken fireplace grating.

Above the dining area hangs a sign: "This land is my land."

★ ★ ★

The Indians are serious about claiming the island. As a precedent they cite an 1868 treaty that returned abandoned federal property to the Sioux nation.

"Alaska is next," says 26-year-old Richard Oakes, a Mohawk who is called "president of Alcatraz."

Why take Alcatraz, which is hardly habitable?

"When you see most of the reservations in this country, Alcatraz looks pretty good," says Adam Nordwall, 40, a Chippewa who heads the Indians' United Bay Area Council.

CANADIAN PARATROOPERS ON EXERCISE

Elite Corps Cold, Then Hot

By LT.-COL. J. A. McPHEE

MONTEGO BAY (CP) — It's a long way from Tuktoyaktuk to Jamaica—some 4,500 miles—but for the Canadian Airborne Regiment it's all in a month's work.

The paratroop regiment, 900-men strong and considered the elite of Canada's infantry corps, has been conducting tropical training exercises since early November here on Jamaica's lush north coast—tourist mecca of the Caribbean.

●

Less than a month ago the regiment was shivering in below-zero weather in Inuvik and Tuktoyaktuk in the Northwest Territories. Until early December they will be sweating it out in steamy jungle swamps and guarding against sunburn in the 95-degree temperatures.

The move of the regiment's main body began Nov. 3 and was completed six days later after 33 Yukon and Hercules flights by Air Transport Command out of the unit's home stations of Valcartier, Que., and Edmonton.

●

Col. R. G. Therriault, 42, of Quebec City, commander of the regiment, reported his men had carried out the climatic change with "little effect," and that the only casualties to date have been caused by coral scrapes and sea urchin spines.

The exercise, dubbed Nimrod Leap, is designed to teach the paratroopers tropical survival skills including hygiene, day and night navigation in thick, sky-concealing jungle and the age-old military problems of adapting to foreign climes, customs and methods. The regiment will not parachute during its stay here, nor will it use live ammunition.

Aviation, as in all modern military manoeuvres, is proving to be the key to the exercise. Besides the massive airlift to Jamaica provided by Yukons of 437 Squadron, Trenton, Ont., and Hercules aircraft from 435 and 436 squadrons of Edmonton and Ottawa, two Buffalo aircraft from 429 Squadron, Edmonton, and three Iroquois helicopters from 403 Squadron, Petawawa, Ont., are providing the day-to-day air support.

●

Lt.-Col. H. C. (Bud) Taylor, 44, of North Sydney, N.S., deputy commander of the regiment, reported that air-ground co-operation reached a peak when in one day the two Toronto-built de Haviland Buffalos and the three helicopters lifted a total of 873 personnel.

Home for the Canadiais here is a 50-acre scrub tract on the edge of the ocean, donated by a local plantation owner and containing an abandoned Second World War fighter airstrip known locally as Braco.

The Canadian soldiers and airmen established the camp entirely themselves, relying on the local government only for water.

But the Canadian presence has had a marked effect on the hard-pressed Jamaican economy. The regiment's service company, under Maj. G. P. Gedge, purchases $1,800—$2 per day per man—worth of fresh rations daily from local farmers and wholesalers.

●

Cooks report the quality of food is good, but Jamaican suppliers are having trouble supplying the 1,800 eggs the Canadians consume daily.

"We are down to buying a dozen here and a dozen there from little farms all over the island," one supplier complained—but not unhappily.

Co-operation between Jamaican civilians and the Canadians has been remarkable, Col. Therriault says. Individual planters and companies have loaned water trailers and equipment freely, and access to land for mountain training as well as cross-country exercises has been given willingly.

●

Training goes on from dawn to dark here and only the 100-man service company is engaged in administration and logistics.

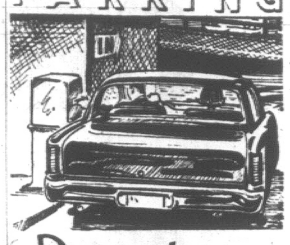

Since it is the first time the Edmonton and Valcartier elements of the regiment have operated together out of the country, competition between the French- and English-speaking elements is high, but friendly.

●

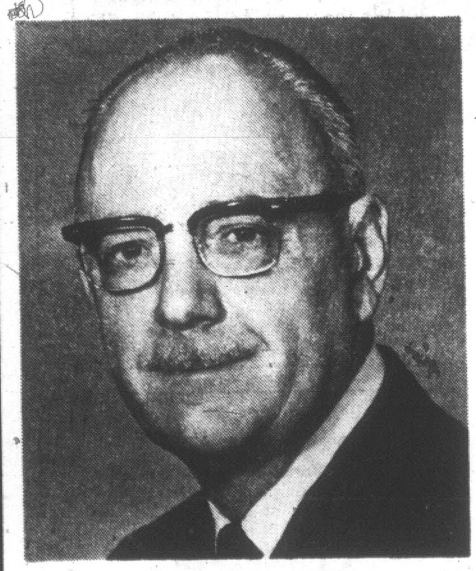

The only discordant note heard among the Canadians to date came when the news arrived that temperatures in Edmonton had skidded to 10 below.

"Who wants to go home to that," groaned one sun-tanned paratrooper.

Sunrooms Provide Much Pleasure

By HILDA BEASTALL

In Canada we've been blessed with sunrooms for years. Let us hope they don't entirely disappear in today's home stylings. England seems to be just discovering them. A sunroom brings color and fragrance right into the home at times when it is impossible to be outdoors.

Hilda

For those of us who love the outdoors for its own qualities of freshness and quietude, the sunroom gives us at least a sense of freedom.

A sunroom facing east or north may be just as attractive as any other aspect.

With frost-free conditions within it is possible to give it a woodland atmosphere with pots of quite ordinary ferns which will thrive in the occasional, or seldom, morning sun.

Ingenuity in devising metal trays to hold the pots will determine the success of the plan, for the same trays may hold large pieces of rock to form a natural background for some of the smaller ferns.

A moss-covered rock will stay that way for months if kept in a tray with water and not subjected to continuous 70-degree Fahrenheit without a moist atmosphere.

Once the scheme is started, the gardener will discover seedling trees in the garden—perhaps a willow already with grey pussy faces showing; or a rooted piece of Balsam-poplar whose sticky buds will give off a pungent outdoor aroma when the air is warm.

Tiny Oregon-grape plants are fairly easy to transplant for adding an outdoor look, or the odd stem or so of the leaves will last for weeks in an east sunroom.

As days pass, you will likely find a primula or two with yellow buds ready to open. In a pot, these will add a touch of real spring to your indoor woodland.

With watertight trays beneath the pots, watering will be no problem.

Ferns do not like to be saturated in the pots, but some of the finer ones do like a moist atmosphere. This is readily obtained by standing the pots on small stones in the trays, with the water level in the trays kept just below the surface of the stones.

Thus the pots are not touching water, but warmth in the sunroom will evaporate some of it into the air to the delight of the plants.

You will notice that this is all hardy outdoor material, but you will be able to enjoy it indoors at close range for the next six months before turning it out into the garden for the summer.

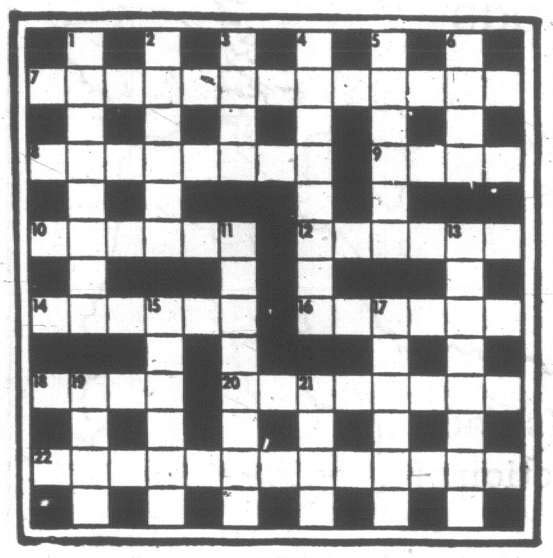

If you like the plant, bring it in again late next fall.

How to Lose Weight The Sensible Way

By DR. WALTER ALVAREZ

Nowadays in magazines I keep reading articles, telling of some magic or quick way of reducing weight, without much if any dieting. Some years ago I wrote a booklet in which I told about the one scientific way of reducing, by cutting down on the calorie intake. One woman wrote me angrily to say that my booklet did not mention any of the 14-day diets and other dietetic fads, and did not tell how to reduce weight without changing one's diet.

I felt like telling the woman that in 1910 I got an excellent training in weight reduction from my most brilliant professor—a Swiss physician who had learned the science and art in a great German medical school. I doubt if much new information has been gained since 1910. To this day, calories are all-important. As I often say, if a ranch woman puts too much coal or wood in her stove, it will surely get too hot. Food is fuel for the body, and if more is put in than is needed by the body, then it is stored as fat.

★ ★ ★

Today, in many big cities there are a number of physicians who, I understand, have been making a lot of money reducing women by giving them several types of pills containing powerful and hence dangerous appetite-destroying drugs. Every so often I read of someone who has died while taking the colored pills. I personally would not dare give them.

During my many years at the Mayo Clinic, thousands of stout women kept coming, determined to find out that one of their glands of internal secretion (such as the thyroid, or pituitary under the brain, or the adrenals just over the kidneys, or the ovaries) was misbehaving, and thereby causing all of their great overweight.

But I regret to say that in all but a very few cases, Dr. Edward Rynearson, who was then the head of the endocrine (gland secretion) department, had to keep saying to these women, "We are sorry, but we could find no sign of glandular disease; hence it would appear that all of your trouble is due to your excellent appetite, which is so hard for you to curb."

★ ★ ★

The only scientific and safe way of removing excess fat from one's body is to eat so little high-calorie food that for a while one lives, to some extent, on the fat that one has stored perhaps in one's abdomen or under one's skin. When that is all "eaten up," one is thin.

In order to keep the stomach full enough so as to avoid great hunger, one must keep eating low-calorie vegetables, very low-calorie salads, and some low-calorie fruits. One must eat enough protein, in meat, fish, poultry, eggs and skim milk, to maintain one's strength, and one can have a little starch.

One cannot have much cream or butter or sugar or fat or oil of any kind. One must remember also that alcohol is a fairly high-calorie food. Beer is about as nutritious and caloric as is milk.

Some people think they can exercise their fat off. They can do this to a slight extent, but unfortunately, in many cases, exercise makes the stout person so hungry that she eats too much.

Unfortunately, obesity is decidedly hereditary. I think of this often as on the sidewalk I see a chubby little child walking with two fat parents. That child hasn't much chance of avoiding overweight.

FLASHBACK ON CANADA

U.S. City Honors Canadian Explorer

By BOB BOWMAN

It seems strange that the outstanding memorial to a great Canadian explorer is a city in the U.S., Duluth, Minnesota. When Daniel Greysolon Duluth was a young boy in Dunkirk, France, he used to sit outside the taverns listening to the sailors telling stories about their voyages to Canada, and he resolved to become an explorer.

He made two voyages himself before 1674 when he decided to stay and become a fur-trader. Then his adventures began, and few of the early explorers had as many narrow escapes.

One of them occurred on November 26, 1683. Duluth was at Michilimackinac when Indians killed two French traders and stole their furs. A young brave called Folle Avoine was suspected and Duluth learned that he and a number of other Indians had gone to Sault Ste. Marie and were threatening the 12 Frenchmen who were trading there.

Avoine was swaggering about the post daring to be arrested when Duluth arrived. He caught Avoine right away but it took time to round up the others. Then he held a trial for murder with 400 angry Indians watching. Duluth explained that Avoine and the men who had killed the fur-traders were not prisoners of war. If that had been the case he would have spared them. Then he declared that they were murderers and must pay with their lives.

The Indians were angry and they respected fairness and bravery. The sentence was carried out, watched by all, and there was no reprisal. If the Indians had suspected any weakness they would have attacked

Duluth ranged far and wide from the Mississippi to the north of Lake Superior. He established a trading post at the mouth of the Kaministikwia River, the site of present-day Fort William, strengthened the fort at Detroit, and commanded Fort Frontenac, now Kingston.

The City of Duluth was named after him because he held a peace conference there in 1679 with Sioux Indians, and claimed the area for France.

Other events on November 26:

1663 — France minted special coins for Canada.

1691 — Pierre LeMoyne d'Iberville attacked St. John's, New Nfld.

1827 — Fort Langley, B.C., was named.

1857 — John A. Macdonald and George Etienne Cartier formed government.

1876 — David Laird of P.E.I. was appointed Lieutenant Governor of North West Territories.

1917 — Former U.S. President Theodore Roosevelt took part in Victory Loan drive at Hamilton, Ontario.

1926 — Vincent Massey was appointed Canada's first Minister to U.S.A.

1957 — Atlantic provinces were given financial aid.

1959 — Indians in North West Territories were granted equal rights in purchase of liquor.

KARPIN ON BRIDGE

In my opinion, an apt description of East-West's play in the deal presented today would be "diabolical defence." The hand came up in the early 1950s, and the West defender was internationalist Jean Besse, of Switzerland.

Opening lead: Queen of ◇.

North-South were using weak one no-trump opening bids (11-13), and South's pessimistic two spade response probably arose out of a hunch that his side could not make a game. As subsequent events proved, he was quite right.

A low diamond was played from dummy on West's queen of diamonds lead. This was a normal play, since West figured to be leading away from some Q-J combination, and South saw no reason for sacrificing the board's king.

To trick two, West led the diamond four, and again a low diamond was played from dummy, the assumption being that East possessed the diamond ace and West the diamond jack. Upon winning the trick with the jack, East returned a diamond to Besse's ace, dummy's king falling.

To trick four, West played the seven of spades. When dummy followed with the three-spot, East put up the eight, South's 10 winning the trick. The jack of hearts was then led, and Besse grabbed his ace. He now played back the nine of spades, and South, thinking that West possessed the king, put up the board's jack. East, of course, won this trick with his king. He then returned his remaining spade, which dummy was forced to win with the ace.

Suddenly it dawned on South that he had two heart winners—but only one of them was cashable. In his hand he had the singleton queen, while dummy had the doubleton K-7. Unfortunately, after cashing the heart queen, there was no entry to dummy to cash the heart king. So eventually he lost a club trick, and suffered a one-trick set of his two spade contract.

Walt watched as the boy tried various arrangements of his marbles. "Those are what I gave you, aren't they?" he asked. "You seem to have lost some."

"That's right, Dad," replied Andy. "I did have about a hundred. And now I'm trying to divide these up equally. But I'm always two short when I try them in fives or sixes. There are two left over for sevens or eights."

How many did he have there? Thanks for an idea to: J. H. Robertson, Sundridge, J. H. Robertson, Sundridge, Ontario.

Need Rat Fish, Sea Mice? Try to Find Jack and Jim

By ED GOULD

If you are in the market for goose barnacles, moon snails, shark pups, urchins, rat fish, sea squirts, purple stars or sea mice, Jim Egan and Jack Wesbit are your men.

These exotic marine creatures are just a few of the dozens collected by the two Toronto-born residents of Thetis Island—a Gulf of Georgia paradise a few miles offshore from Chemainus.

●

The two men came to Thetis last October to be close to the water after operating their business for four years from a home on Lake Cowichan Road.

Egan and Nesbit sell their gumshoe chitons, sea anemones, jelly fish, brittle stars, clams, oysters, squid, octopusses and sea cucumbers to high schools and universities from Tennessee to Kansas, from Calgary to Kalamazoo.

The specimens are taken at low tide and not—as you might expect—in frogman gear. Some of the deeper creepers are bought from local fishermen.

●

Their mode of transport to the kelp beds is leisurely, aboard a 17-foot, 35-horsepower runabout, the successor to a 12-foot rowboat that came to a dastardly end.

"A rather hefty friend put a foot through the bottom of it one day so we moved up to a classier craft," said Nesbitt, at 42, the younger by six years.

Pickled in mixtures of alcohol or formaldehyde, the sharks (dogfish) are shipped in 45-gallon drums by truck while as many as 500 minute jelly fish make their final journey to the laboratories in tiny glass vials via parcel post.

The two bachelors have made a business of searching the sea for specimens for 15 years and prior to that supplied land animals to biology departments across the continent from a home base in Ontario.

●

The only land animals they raise now are white rats for Northwest Biological Laboratory in Victoria.

Although experts in their trade, they are largely self-trained. Egan got his grounding at Connaught Laboratories and Troyer Natural Science Company in Ontario and Nesbit learned mostly from him.

It's an ideal life, they say, and who can doubt them? Most of the work is done in spring, summer and early fall.

"We get up according to whim and the tides," Egan said. "We collect for about two hours, process the catch and then flop on the couch with a cool beer for the rest of the day."

●

Business is so good it could be expanded but that would mean hiring and "we have no desire to get into that." Nevertheless, David Falkingham, 23, of Winnipeg is now helping out for his third season and learning the business.

Both men pretend to eschew "so-called civilization" but they continue studies into the occult, aerial phenomena, comparative religions and philosophy. Nesbit is a gourmet cook and when Egan isn't helping install friends' plumbing he is working as vice-president of SPEC—the Society for Pollution and Environmental Control.

●

Nothing threatens to end a marine specimen collecting business faster than pollution of the ocean, although Egan sometimes wishes the results of man's folly were more evident sooner.

"By the time it's noticeable, it's already too late," he said. Nature abhors vaccuums so when something in the sea disappears its space is soon filled with something else.

"But when the time comes and there is nothing left to fill it with, the collapse is total."

'Moccathon' Planned By Op-Rec

DUNCAN — Operation Recreation continues its efforts to reach its goal of $100,000 for a covered pool at Pioneer Park with sponsorship Saturday of a 10-mile "Moccathon."

A moccathon, according to Op-Rec, is an Indian walkathon and will constitute the Cowichan Band's interest in supporting the Op-Rec project.

Pledges are available to residents at the band office or at the Op-Rec Centre on Station Street. Prizes are being offered for the first, oldest, youngest and best costumed entrants.

A portion of the money will go to the band for sports equipment.

The Op-Rec fund now stands at about $48,000 with closing date Dec. 1. The balance of the $400,000 needed to build the pool will be raised through a money bylaw.

Op-Rec officials said the latest figure included a portion of the home and business canvass. No date was set for an industrial canvass.

"Anyone whose home was missed during the canvass who wishes to make a donation may do so at the Op-Rec office," said chairman Pat Moore.

COWICHAN VALLEY MAYORS AT ODDS

Amalgamation Chances Set Back

DUNCAN — The chances of amalgamation between Duncan City and North Cowichan municipality have been hurt again by the premature release of some confidential information, Mayor Jim Quaife said today.

Quaife said details concerning a study of joint services between the two local governments were to have been discussed at a public meeting at North Cowichan municipal hall Tuesday night. The meeting was cancelled after the city could not gather a quorum of aldermen, Quaife said.

Meantime, Mayor Don Morton of North Cowichan released details of the joint study and made unflattering remarks about the city council on a radio program at which he was guest speaker, Quaife said.

Quaife quoted Morton as saying the city was avoiding the meeting because joint services had become a hot political issue in the December elections.

'ALL THE TIME'

"This is not the first time we have had this trouble with North Cowichan," Quaife said. "It happens all the time. There was nothing we could do about the meeting except to cancel it because there were not enough of us available to represent a fair view."

No new date for a meeting on joint services was set.

Quaife said he did not think the incident would seriously impair relations with "our neighbors to the north" and — although confidential — "there was nothing significantly important in the study that Morton released.

"However, it is the principle of the thing. These were to be discussed at our public meeting, not on the radio before hand. It doesn't matter whether it was sugar or dynamite, it shouldn't have been brought up before then."

Property Damaged In Fires

NORTH COWICHAN — Two fires in the municipality Tuesday resulted in loss of property and possessions but no persons were injured.

Mrs. V. A. Page and her 12-year-old son escaped unharmed from their Pelley Road home after fire started from a space heater.

Two fire department units and 19 volunteer firemen quelled a blaze that broke out in the Allied Glass Ltd. warehouse on Sherman Road and the Trans-Canada Highway. A fire department spokesman said the fire was believed to have originated in the lunchroom.

Glass in the building was destroyed but the warehouse was not severely damaged.

Lake Cowichan Representative Named to Board

LAKE COWICHAN — Brent Friday, chairman of Lake Cowichan school board, has been selected to succeed W. J. Sutherland as representative from School District 66 on Malaspina College board of directors.

He will remain as school board chairman, the post to which he was elected after Mrs. Lee Budden and four other trustees quit the board in July.

Friday has been mill accountant at Western Forest Industries Ltd. since 1952.

CANDIDATES TALK TONIGHT IN CHEMAINUS

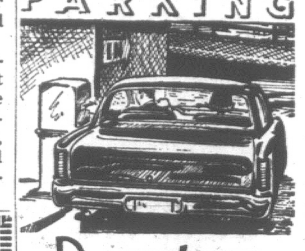

CHEMAINUS — An all-candidates' meeting will be held in the fire hall tonight at 8 sponsored by Chemainus Ratepayers' and Citizens' Association.

North Cowichan mayoralty candidates George Whittaker and Gerry Smith are expected to present their platforms.

Also expected are incumbent aldermen Mrs. Margaret Robertson, and Tom Burge and aldermanic hopefuls Patrick Rogers, James Roome, Clifford Shillito, Arnold Cherry and Archibald Stevenson.

ISLAND RUN 'TO RESUME'

NANAIMO (CP) — P. Barry Jones, president of Pacific Hovercraft, said Tuesday the company will continue its commercial Hovercraft service between Vancouver and Nanaimo "as soon as regulations governing such services have been ironed out."

"We are definitely not pulling out of the Island service," Jones said in a telephone interview from Abbotsford where one of the company's Hovercraft is undergoing refitting as a cargo vehicle before being sent for use on the northern coast of Alaska.

Jones denied reports that there has been a licensing problem with the Department of Transport or that the service had not proven economical.

Pacific Hovercraft began daily service between the two cities last spring but halted operations October 1.

OAK BAY MEET

Oak Bay's municipal election candidates will give short speeches and answer questions at a meeting tonight at 8 p.m. in the municipal hall on Oak Bay Avenue.

The meeting is sponsored by the Oak Bay Association of Women Electors and the Oak Bay Board of Trade.

There are 11 candidates for three council seats.

PILOT KILLED

PORT ALBERNI (CP) — Jack Engerman, 53, one of the founders of the Seattle-based Northwest Releasing Corp., is believed to have been killed when the Cessna 180 he was piloting crashed near Nahmint Lake Monday, about 12 miles south of here.

News of the crash was not reported until Tuesday when James Barry and Charles Nelson, two of the pilot's fishing companions, were located at the lake.

Although authorities here had not released the name of the pilot Wednesday morning, he was identified as Engerman by an official of a flying firm at Seattle.

•

Mrs. Mildred Hall, flight operations manager of Kemore Air Harbor in Seattle, said she talked to Barry and that he told her Engerman crashed while on a flying weather check Monday. The trio were on a flying fishing trip.

Barry said he and Nelson saw the pilot attempt to land.

"Then all we saw was a big splash," she quoted Barry as saying. "It took us two hours to hike to the area and we found nothing."

Engerman and Zollie Volchok started Northwest Releasing in 1953 and built it into one of the largest entertainment booking agencies on the North American continent.

The company handled theatre bookings covering all major cities in the United States Pacific Northwest, British Columbia and Alberta.

RESCUE ACTION

Local pilots will be able to visit the Canadian Forces Base, Comox, on Sunday, Dec. 7, to watch No. 442 Search and Rescue Squadron in action.

The visit has been arranged by Flight No. 6 of the Canadian Owners and Pilots Association.

A charter bus will leave Victoria at 8 a.m. and return at 8 p.m. Lunch will be available at the base.

Prickliest Business At Best in the Red

By LON WOOD

Ronald Nutter has the prickliest job in Canada — he is the country's largest independent holly grower.

If the weather stays good, Mr. Nutter's four-acre Saanich plantation will yield about 20,000 pounds of holly for Christmas distribution from Vancouver Island to Newfoundland, to the eastern United States and even Bermuda.

For centuries holly has been the symbol of Christmas. To about 50 Vancouver Island growers it now represents a business of $100,000 annually.

There are many legends connected with the beautiful shrub, its glistening green leaves and scarlet berries.

To early Britons holly offered protection from evil spirits.

In Germany it was strongly believed that church-blessed holly sprigs would prevent a lightning strike.

USED BY PAGANS

Long before the Christian era began, holly was used in pagan rites all over Europe from Norway to the Mediterranean, eastward to the Balkans and northward to the British Isles—and even as part of the Christmas festival it makes veritable newcomers of plum pudding, mince pies and even the Christmas tree.

But to Mr. Nutter, a sailmaker with the Royal Canadian Navy at Esquimalt for 25 years, holly was nothing more than a mention in a Christmas carol—until 1949 when he saw an advertisement, "Holly farm for sale."

"After due thought—and some misgivings—I purchased the property and its 135 holly trees," he said in an interview. "Now I have roughly 400 trees."

Mr. Nutter said there are only two places in Canada where holly can be grown successfully—southern Vancouver Island and certain parts of the Fraser Valley.

At his farm, Hollyoaks, there are one dozen types of green or "English" holly and three types of the variegated variety.

BIRDS ARE THREAT

"Young trees don't produce crops until they are about 15 years old," he said. "During this period their main threats are cold weather, hungry robins and starlings."

During the first week of December, Mr. Nutter's harvest will be in full swing—with neighborhood housewives and youngsters making up the bulk of the 50-member picking and crating crew.

Out-of-town orders are shipped in refrigerated transport—usually air express—at 33 degrees. Each two-degree rise in temperature can impair the keeping properties of holly.

"With care, holly can be kept up to three months if the sprigs are put in water and the ends waxed," advised Mr. Nutter. "The berries will stay as fresh as the day they were bought.

"An important thing I have discovered—last year when the temperature here dropped to five above—is that cut holly that becomes frozen will remain green if it is thawed slowly at a very cool temperature. If it thaws too quickly in a warm room it will turn black and shrivel."

New Civilian Slaughter Reported to Pentagon

ARMY HELPLESS TO TRY CIVILIANS

WASHINGTON (WP) — Legal experts in Washington have concluded on the basis of two Supreme Court decisions that a civilian cannot be tried by a military court.

It would follow, therefore, that those accused in participating in the alleged massacre at My Lai village on March 16, 1968, who are no longer in the armed forces would not be liable for military prosecution.

These experts also agree that a civilian trial would have to take place in Vietnam. Since no extradition agreement exists between the United States and South Vietnam, it appears that they would not be liable in civilian jurisdictions either.

Oil Drilling Ruled Out For Straits

Fisheries Minister Jack Davis today said he expects oil companies to drop plans of exploring Juan de Fuca Strait and the Gulf of Georgia because of his warning that oil drilling would be vetoed.

He made the statement to the Times in a telephone interview from Ottawa, emphasizing that the Gulf Islands would be preserved as a recreational area because of overwhelming economic considerations.

'Banned As Long As I'm Here'

He said his department would ban drilling in the sheltered waters between Vancouver Island and the mainland for the "forseeable future" — then added that meant so long as he was minister.

He said that some future minister "might fall back" from that position but he would not because he could not visualize any circumstances that would alter the clear indication that drilling would conflict with public interest.

He revealed that seismic exploration was completed last month in Juan de Fuca as well as continuing in Georgia Strait.

The Juan de Fuca operation was carried out by Teneco Oil and Minerals Ltd., a Canadian subsidiary of a major oil exploration company which also is conducting tests off Newfoundland and Labrador.

Seismic Tests Not Harmful

Davis said the Texaco Oil Company is carrying out Georgia Strait seismic work and Canadian Pacific Oil and Gas Company, an affiliate of the Canadian Pacific Railway, has completed its program. Union Oil Company also has carried out seismic tests in sheltered areas off the Queen Charlottes.

Davis said the seismic tests, which do not involve underwater explosions in modern techniques, were permitted because they are not harmful but drilling was another matter entirely.

"All the seismic permit work was to be completed in 1969 and whether they've got any (oil) indications or not, they've been given fair warning now.

"I would estimate the companies have spent about $500,000 so far but I doubt that there would be much more money spent in view of the warning."

He said the situation was made clear during a question period Tuesday in the House of Commons when Mines, Energy and Resources Minister J. J. Greene re-iterated that no drilling permits would be issued without the normal routine of obtaining the fisheries department's recommendation.

During the House of Commons question period, Davis said that he and Greene had agreed "no drilling permits will be granted as long as there is any danger, not only to the sports and commerical fisheries, but also to the entire ecology of that (Gulf Islands) area."

Danger to Sport Fishing

Davis told The Times that his department had studied the matter carefully and determined there was a decided danger posed by oil drilling to the commercial and sports fishery valued at about $300 million a year.

This has resulted in a decision to recommend rejection if any oil company applies for drilling permit and Davis said he had been "assured by Mr. Greene" the fisheries' department advice would be followed.

"This amounts to a veto power although we have no jurisdictional veto," he said.

"We're not rejecting offshore drilling out of hand," he said. "For instance, if oil was found on the Grand Banks of Newfoundland, that would be great boost to the economy of the Atlantic region.

"So, it's a matter of assessing the relative values.

"The Gulf Islands are essentially a recreational or park area. (Allowing inshore drilling) is like having an oil well in Banff National Park. It makes no sense."

Davis said the possibility of discovering a relatively minor oil basin under the straits would not bring lower oil prices to consumers and would offer "the possible gain of only a small number of jobs."

But, on the other side, it could disturb the lucrative recreational value of the area and even destroy a good part of it if an oil well leak developed.

"What's the recreational value of the gulf with a scum of oil on it?" he asked.

The minister said upwards of $100 million annually is involved in the area's commercial fishery but most people did not realize this was the smaller item.

"The sports fishery is worth at least double that," he said. "And then there's the problem of navigation (posed by oil rigs and possible leakages in a major seaway.)"

Davis said the possible economic benefits of developing an inshore oil industry weighted against its cost to the public is totally unbalanced and demands rejection.

"There's just no question that the public interest would say this risk (of oil pollution) is not worth taking, even if it was only a one-in-a-hundred

DRUG SENTENCES CUT TO 2 YEARS

CALGARY (CP)—The Appeal Court of Calgary today reduced stiff sentences previously given to five young marijuana and hashish traffickers and set new guidelines for future sentencing.

In an unanimous written decision, the three-man court decided that sentences not exceeding two years are "sufficient deterernt" to prevent persons from trafficking.

Air Tax Plan Called 'Stupid'

OTTAWA (CP) — The Commons moved the country closer Tuesday to an air-fare user tax over a chorus of criticism, including flat rejection of the idea by the New Democratic Party.

Members of the Conservative Opposition tended to snipe at the tax as discriminatory. Meanwhile Max Saltsman (Waterloo), the NDP financial critic, said his group could not vote for it because it was a cover-up for a stupid air policy.

In his view, that policy had permitted the growth of privately-owned Canadian Pacific Air Lines to a major competitor to publicly-owned Air Canada. Had Air Canada been left in a monopoly position, it would have made enough money to make the user tax unnecessary.

The tax, designed to help build and operate airports, was given voice-vote second reading. It will be examined later by the House, clause by clause, before third and final reading.

It would impose a five-percent charge on all tickets sold for domestic flights and trips to the U.S. and the French islands of St. Pierre-Miquelon off the Canadian East Coast. A head-tax ranging from two to five dollars is in store for other overseas flights, under the amendment to the excise tax act.

Germ-Junking Safety Problem

By Times New Services

How do you destroy safely the "bucketsful" of U.S. military germ stocks?

This is the question facing defence department officials following Wednesday's order by President Nixon to destroy all germ warheads.

Defence officials say the junking will require elaborate safety precautions that may stretch the disposal operation over several months.

The same officials express hope that elimination of germ warfare components can be completed "well within the year." The health department will assist in the operation.

The highly poisonous nature, rather than the volume, of biological stocks is the main problem, say officials.

NOT TEARGAS

In other developments concerning biological weapons:

- Diplomats in the United Nations handling disarmament negotiations enthusiastically welcomed Nixon's statement.

Mixed with the enthusiasm, however, was regret that Nixon's renunciation of "first use of incapacitating chemicals" apparently did not extend to the military employment of tear gas in warfare, or the use of herbicides.

- Britain's minister of state for disarmament, Lord Chalfont, praised the statement as "making it easier to achieve" multilateral agreement on the control of chemical and biological weapons.

The U.S. defence department has not yet stripped the secret label from documents showing how much bacteria there is to destroy, but sources speak in terms of "bucketsful" and pounds, rather than tons.

However, as little as a thimbleful of such lethal bacteria as anthrax or plague is capable of killing thousands of persons over a wide area.

The president's announcement of the planned disposal Tuesday climaxed a six-month review of the American chemical and biological warfare — CBW — program.

Nixon's reference to eliminating "existing stocks of bacteriological weapons" made information officers at the defence department squirm since the department has repeatedly told reporters that the United States does not stock germ weapons.

'Villagers Killed For Practice'

Times News Services

WASHINGTON—The Pentagon today is investigating an alleged second mass murder of unarmed South Vietnamese civilians by American soldiers, according to a member of the House of Representatives.

"In brief, it is a shocking report of a company commander of the Ninth Infantry who ordered his men to use village huts for target practice," Rep. Lionel Van Derlin (D—Cal.) said today.

"When the occupants came streaming out of the huts they were shot down, many of them in the same manner as we've been told occurred at Song My." (Song My is also known as My Lai.)

New Incident In Mekong Delta

He said the alleged slaughter of civilians by Americans, similar in many aspects to an incident in March of 1968 which has resulted in charges of murder being laid against First Lieut. William J. Calley Jr., took place last summer in the Mekong Delta area. The village, he said, is known as Dong Tam.

Van Deerlin said an army medical captain reported the incident after he had heard about it from an orderly who claimed to have witnessed the murders.

Defence department investigators, he said, have talked with the officer.

Van Deerlin said there was no report of the number of casualties and he would not reveal the names of the company or the company commander involved.

He said the medical captain first reported the alleged incident to his parents, who informed Van Deerlin. Subsequent to the My Lai incident, he said, he passed the information to the Pentagon.

The White House today issued an official statement on the alleged massacres, calling them "abhorrent to the conscience of all the American people."

Press Secretary Ronald L. Ziegler, making it clear he spoke for President Nixon and the administration, said steps "will be taken to assure that the illegal and immoral conduct, as alleged, will be dealt with in accordance with the strict rules of military justice."

Army Secretary Stanley Resor, who is testifying today before Senate and House of Representatives committees on the alleged My Lai massacre of March, 1968, is almost sure to be quizzed on the Dong Tam incident as well. Army general counsel Robert Jordan will appear with Resor before the Senate armed services committee and afterward before the House investigating subcommittee.

LAIRD WWAS SHOCKED

Defence Secretary Melvin Laird said in congressional testimony released Tuesday night that he was shocked and sickened when the allegations of the 20-month-old Pinkville massacre came to his attention seven months ago.

Pinkville was the code name given to the area where the reported massacre occurred because it was predominantly Viet Cong territory.

Laird said he ordered an immediate investigation which, a Pentagon spokesman said, led to charges of premeditated murder being brought against Lieut. William L. Calley. Calley, accused of killing at least 109 South Vietnamese, will face a general court martial at Fort Benning, Ga., in January.

'Tear a Man's Guts' With False Charges

Lands Minister Ray Williston today defended Deputy Minister David Borthwick in an emotion-charged encounter with reporters in the Legislative Buildings corridor.

"You tear a man's guts out," he said.

"You destroy a man by inference and you never pull him back," he said angrily.

"It's a lousy, stinking, stupid business."

Williston said "it just about tore me" the way he had been approached with questions Tuesday about Borthwick's ownership of shares in BrenMac Mines Ltd. which he acquired in a syndicate with Charles Eadie, a promoter of the Cypress Bowl development.

NOTHING IMPROPER

He denied that there is anything improper about Borthwick's being a business associate of Eadie providing that they are not associated in ventures relating to Borthwick's official duties as deputy minister.

He said there is no question that Borthwick had behaved properly.

Was his job as deputy in danger?

"Absolutely not," said Williston.

His voice charged with anger, Williston said that The Vancouver Sun, which initiated the current controversy over the recreational development in West Vancouver, would "destroy anybody to get at the government."

'AH HA'

The technique is to publish parallel pieces of information and letting the public say "ah ha" to a connection that is imagined between the two.

"It doesn't matter what he does now," Williston said of Borthwick. "He can't retrieve his position."

He said that if reporters really believed in what they were doing they would declare their own interests in stocks and other matters before writing stories about them.

He shouted at one reporter who asked if it wasn't unfortunate that a deputy minister of lands should be a business associate of people doing business with his department.

Williston Orders Halt to Bowl Logging

By BRUCE YEMEN

Logging in West Vancouver's "Cypress Bowl" has been halted on orders issued this morning by Lands Minister Ray Williston.

The confused and controversial bowl development was blown into new prominence with a series of developments in the last 48 hours.

Williston ordered the logging halt after receiving a letter from West Vancouver Mayor Alex Forst, a long-time supporter of the proposed recreation scheme.

Williston said Tuesday he had mistakenly misled reporters Monday when he said that no leases had been signed with Alpine Outdoor Recreation Resources Ltd. in the recreational development in West Vancouver.

Williston also released a letter which appeared to conflict with his earlier statements that he wasn't aware of proposed development details for Cypress Bowl or of the foreign company that Alpine had brought into the development.

Deputy Lands Minister David Borthwick denied there is any connection between a mining company in which he holds shares and the Cypress Bowl development.

Allan Williams, Liberal MLA for West Vancouver-Howe Sound, switched his earlier position in favor of the development and demanded that it be stopped.

NDP House Leader Dave Barrett called for a judicial inquiry into the entire matter.

Williston said he had been speaking of specific final approval of Alpine's right to develop more than 600 acres of crown land when he said Monday that no leases had been signed.

Thet Cypress Bowl is turnin' out t' be a hemlock cup.

★ ★ ★

Georgia Strait may hev troubled waters but there ain't goin' t' be any oil spread on 'em.

★ ★ ★

Th' U.S. is goin' t' end up without any reason fer bein' ANYwhere.

The leases had in fact been signed by Borthwick and Charles Eadie, managing director of Alpine, in October.

Eadie was a director of Lakeland Base Metals Ltd. in which Borthwick, questioned Tuesday, said he had held 10,000 to 12,000 shares which had been exchanged for the same number of shares of BrenMac Mining Ltd. when Lakeland folded up. He also holds a number of shares in escrow.

Eadie, who is also a director of BrenMac, is the only possible link getween the two companies and the Cypress Bowl development, Borthwick said, denying that Lakeland or BrenMac has anything to do with Cypress Bowl.

Williston, after expressing apparent surprise when informed of Borthwick's shareholdings, said he saw nothing wrong with it, adding that it would be a different matter if Borthwick were an employee of the mines department.

Borthwick said he saw nothing wrong with his mining holdings, and added:

"If there is, half of the civil service would have to. . . ."

He didn't finish the sentence.

Williston, who visited the legislative press gallery with Borthwick shortly after being asked about the matter, said

Breath of Fresh Air

TO DEAL WITH THE NEGATIVE aspects first, it is likely that President Nixon's motives will be questioned following his call for United States ratification of the Geneva convention of 1925 to prohibit initial use of poison gases and bacteriological warfare. He will probably be accused of seeking to divert attention from the Vietnam war, to match a concurrent Russian request to the United Nations to ban production of chemical and bacteriological weapons, to seek political advantage, and especially to draw the world's attention from accusations that American troops massacred civilians in Vietnam.

But regardless of whether all or any of these ideas have any validity, the laudable fact remains that Mr. Nixon has called on his country to renounce the use of chemical and bacteriological weapons, to destroy existing stocks, to limit future work in these areas to research for antidotes, and to join with Canada and Britain in promoting a treaty that would abolish this sordid madness from the arsenals of all countries. Mr. Nixon hopes that his dramatic step will eventually ensure that no country will ever use such weapons. Mankind will join him in that.

The fact that the Soviet Union and seven of its Communist allies yesterday proposed essentially the same goal to the United Nations gives promise that no cold-war considerations will hamper the preparation and early implementation of a global ban on germ and chemical warfare. No government anywhere should hesitate to support this move. Coming as it does at a time when the two military giants of the world are discussing — at least in a preliminary way — retrenchments in nuclear armaments, mankind has reason to feel that a real break-through has been made in the task of moving the world towards greater sanity.

And that immediately raises the question of Canada's position in the matter. This country was among the first to subscribe to the Geneva convention of 1925 seeking to outlaw use of the weapons, but as part of our military association with Britain and the United States, Canada has maintained testing facilities in Alberta for germ and chemical arms.

Defence Minister Cadieux said yesterday that the government has no present intention of getting out of this sordid business. He appeared to mean that even though the United States and Britain would have no further use for such weapons, Canada would continue to test them. This makes no sense at all, and one of the first benefits to be derived from Mr. Nixon's admirable move should be Canada's complete retirement from the sorry activities of the Alberta poison station.

Apathy or Satisfaction?

IT IS DISTURBING IN A PROVince approaching its confederation centennial that of 110 mayoral vacancies in British Columbia's cities, towns, villages and municipal districts, 47 were filled by acclamation this year. Two communities—Pemberton and Valemount — have vacancies but no mayoral candidates. Almost one-third of the 650 local elective jobs in the province were filled by acclamation when nominations closed.

While it is true that second-term mayors are often unopposed, this year's acclamations are unusually numerous. In many cases public satisfaction with good local leadership is the answer. Examples are seen in Saanich, with Mayor Curtis returned, and North Saanich, where Mayor Cumming has earned another term in office. But when one-third of local offices throughout the province are unchallenged, there must be at least a suspicion of public apathy.

Today municipalities could be called the fulcrum of the governmental process. Cities and towns hold an ever higher proportion of the population. Health, recreation and welfare, the whole quality of life, are urgent municipal problems.

Many outstanding men and women offer themselves in municipal elections. If they are unopposed in some communities it may be because of their recognized ability. But the flight from city or town halls should not continue. Leadership and imaginative planning are vital at the community level where one of the most important democratic jobs must be done. A more healthy community results when the public choice is made in an atmosphere of rivalry and competition.

Conflict by the Nile

WHILE ALMOST DAILY REports of guerrilla forays and reprisal attacks in the Middle East accentuate the threat of President Nasser's November 6 promise to step up the "war of attrition", a report from Egypt notes another battle being waged with all the hazards of Russian roulette.

The November 6 speech, some analysts say, reflects the pressure placed upon Nasser by Egypt's war party. This group, according to report, wants intensified guerrilla activity while holding to the belief that a new war with Israel can be delayed until big-power pressure imposes some kind of Arab-Israeli peace. They can, in other words, hit and run without causing the ultimate detonation.

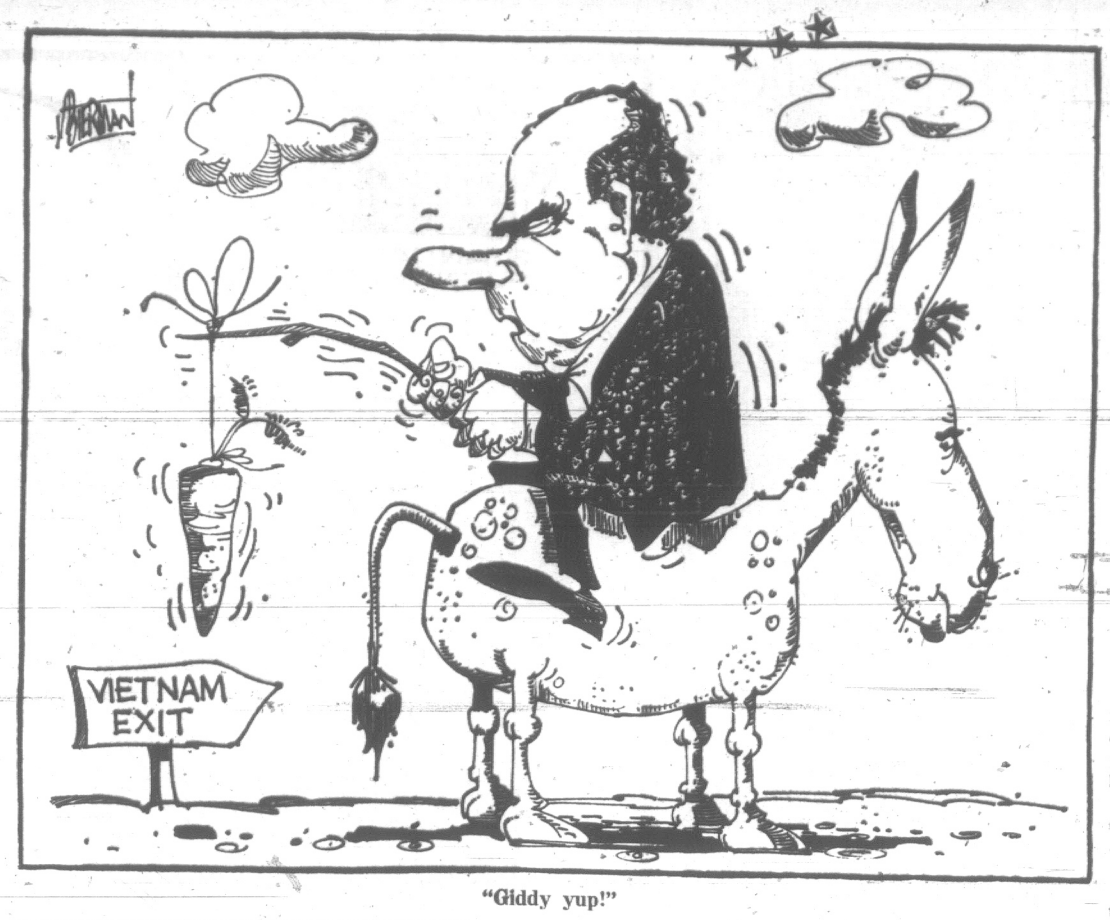

But in Egypt, on the other hand, there is also a so-called peace party which would like to opt out of the Palestine conflict, convinced that a separate peace would get the Israelis out of Sinai and loosen the grip of Soviet advisers in Egypt. The peace party, moreover, would like to curb Nasser's powers.

The internal stresses and strains arising from the conflict between the two may become more evident in Egyptian policy in weeks ahead. But, as Canada's External Affairs Minister Sharp remarked after a 90-minute meeting with Nasser, "One would have to be a considerable optimist to think that there has been much progress in the direction" of a peaceful settlement. In the meantime the so-called Egyptian "war party" keeps striking and throwing matches with no certainty that the lid is tight on the powder keg.

More Sea Park

REGIONAL PARKS COMMITtee chairman Leslie Passmore supports a proposal that local municipalities pool their 1971 centennial grants to purchase a proposed 2,447-acre marine park in East Sooke. If the municipalities agreed to the scheme it would save for public use the last wilderness coastal area on south Vancouver Island. At present, the total regional park area is 26,043 acres of which only 3,530 acres are semi-wilderness ocean and waterfront on lake or sea.

The 1969 Regional Parks report says the present acreage is "adequate but not extravagant." By 2005 the Capital Region's population will be 370,000, according to the regional parks report. Clearly, today's "adequate" acreage will not remain so for long. When British Columbia joined confederation in 1871 it was largely virgin land. It seems a fitting centennial project to preserve what we can of this heritage 100 years later.

"Giddy yup!"

No Immunity From Human Rights Code

EVER since the Ontario Legislature enacted the Human Rights Code eight years ago, lawyers and politicians have been wondering what the courts would say if the validity of the law were seriously challenged. Discrimination, after all, is a state of mind and its practical manifestations can be subtle and extremely hard, from a legal point of view, to prove; any law which sets out to make it a statutory offence is almost asking for trouble.

Greer

Recognizing this, the government went to extraordinary lengths in drafting the legislation to keep it out of the courts. The Code is educative and persuasive in principle, provision is made for informal and formal investigation in which conciliation is the prime objective, and, all else failing, no prosecution may be launched without the consent of the responsible minister.

Not surprisingly, only two of the thousands of complaints which the Human Rights Commission has received since 1962 have ended up in the courts, and neither of these involved any fundamental challenges to the law itself.

The inevitable finally happened last May, however, when counsel for Kenneth Bell, a Toronto landlord who had refused to rent the upstairs of his house to a black Jamaican, sought and obtained from Mr. Justice Charles Stewart of the Ontario Supreme Court a writ of prohibition against a Board of Inquiry established under the act to look into the matter. Mr. Bell contended the accommodation in question was not "self-contained" as required by the law and that, in any event, the Human Rights Commission had already decided he was guilty and he was therefore entitled to be tried in a court of law without the expense, inconvenience and hazards of an inquiry which did not afford him the same protections.

"Legislative Beartrap"

Mr. Justice Stewart not only agreed enthusiastically with these submissions, he went on to attack the whole construction of the law itself. It was, he said, "a legislative beartrap which no subject can escape, a charge which cannot be defended, and a fine which cannot be escaped." A citizen, he added somewhat irrelevantly, had the right to exercise "an untrammeled and biased choice of those who dined at his table or slept under his roof" and it was "equally as important that the rights of a middle-aged white Canadian home owner be protected as those of a young, black, Jamaican tenant".

Thus challenged legally and politically, the government quickly appealed and the Ontario Court of Appeal has now come through nobly with a unanimous judgment that ticks Mr. Justice Stewart off on all counts. Written by Mr. Justice Bora Laskin, it is a decision which seems likely to stand as a landmark in Canadian jurisprudence, especially for those looking for a clear assertion of the supremacy, in the Canadian system, of the legislative over the judicial power.

Mr. Justice Laskin first clears away some of the underbrush in the Stewart decision. He points out that one of the functions of the Board of Inquiry was to determine if Mr. Bell's rental accommodation was "self-contained" and it was simply an "error in principle" for Justice Stewart to stop the board from proceeding on the assumption that it would reach the wrong conclusion. He also says Justice Stewart should not have assumed in advance that, just because the Human Rights Commission had unfortunately made up its mind about Mr. Bell's guilt, the Board of Inquiry would follow suit, because the two were quite different entities, both in constitution and membership. Nor could it be said, as Justice Stewart did, that the actions of the board or commission were beyond judicial review.

Prohibition Argument

Then he gets to the heart of the matter:

"The chief ground upon which counsel for Bell sought to support the order of prohibition was . . . that it deprived Bell of his rights at law and that, although it was not ultra vires in a constitutional sense, it was so offensive to democratic principles as to justify a court to prohibit its invocation."

This "startling proposition", Mr. Justice Laskin said, could be traced to the "celebrated but indefensible statement" in the Bonham case (a 1610 British judgment) that 'the common law will control Acts of Parliament and sometimes adjudge them to be utterly void; for when an Act of Parliament is against common right and reason, or repugnant or impossible to be performed, the common law will control it, and adjudge such Act to be void'.

Not so, Justice Laskin declared: "The courts construe legislation and apply it to situations found to be within its scope. They cannot ignore it when a situation to which it is addressed comes before them. Bell's 'rights at law', as his counsel used the phrase, are not rights to refuse obedience to an applicable law."

Common Law Change

Admittedly, he said, the Human Rights Code has drastically changed the common law position of owners of certain kinds of housing accommodation, just as it has changed the position of employers and of operators of places to which the public is customarily admitted.

"But the courts of this country have no mandate to enforce their own, let alone Bell's, notions of substantive due process to nullify legislation which is competently enacted under the constitutional distribution of legislative powers; at the most, they may, where the legislation is open to such construction, enforce procedural due process in line with principles worked out by common law techniques."

But the Human Rights Code, Mr. Justice Laskin said, was not open to any such construction and therefore "neither Bell nor any other citizen has any legal immunity from it".

FROM PARIS

By C. L. SULZBERGER

France Wants to Rejoin the Mideast Club

FRANCE'S current Middle East policy can be stated simply: Get four-power negotiations on the Arab-Israel crisis restarted as soon as possible, for, otherwise, the situation can only become worse. The French believe they can help bridge the gap between disparate Soviet and American views. This gap has become increasingly evident in bipartite talks between U.S. and Russian representatives which have continued while the four-power negotiations (including Britain and France) remain suspended.

Sulzberger

When Foreign Minister Maurice Schumann saw Secretary of State Rogers last September, Rogers said Washington did not wish to resume quadripartite discussions until the Israeli elections were over.

Nevertheless, Rogers promised France and Britain would be informed of all developments in the two-power talks. To the irritation of Paris, there has been no resumption of quadripartite negotiations. On Nov. 12, however, Undersecretary of State Elliot Richardson told Schumann America was ready to recommence them.

Richardson indicated that when Washington received Moscow's reply to the latest American peace formula quadripartite talks could resume. The French are impatient because they feel the four-power framework is the only one within which settlement might be arranged.

Evacuation Essential

France thinks Israel must recognize its security is impaired rather than helped by continued occupation of territories conquered during the 1967 war and the only way to insure security is by arranging evacuation of these areas under four-power auspices and guarantees.

Furthermore, the French feel Russian policy is still relatively restrained, but that this cannot be relied on much longer. The belief here is that Moscow tried to cool off last month's Lebanese crisis and is worried about growing influence of the Arab guerrillas (fedayeen). France is alarmed lest the Soviets, fearing China might outflank them on the left by encouraging the fedayeen, will harden their present line.

Neither Washington nor London — much less Jerusalem — is equally persuaded that today's Soviet line is moderate. Furthermore, the Israelis are scarcely hopeful that their position would improve if France rejoins negotiations.

This month, Jean de Lipkowski, number two in the Quai d'Orsay, assured Saudi Arabia France "will not change the just and noble policy followed by General de Gaulle with respect to the Middle East conflict." Israel regarded de Gaulle's policy as distinctly hostile.

When the Pompidou regime took over, the new President promised to relax some aspects of the French arms embargo, although the famous Mirage fighter planes would contine to be held up.

Last summer, after studying Pompidou's words, Israel sent a new shopping list here asking permission to buy various military spare parts and defensive weapons. The French keep telling the Israelis this list is under review but no single item has yet been agreed to. Furthermore, the French hint that approval of the list depends on a "positive" Israeli attitude to the four-power negotiations — which remain suspended.

France's Middle East policy has one primary goal today — to relaunch four-power talks. Obviously Paris wishes to restore its international diplomatic position and enhance its Middle Eastern prestige by getting back into the Big-Four club.

Sewer Vote

Central Saanich is to vote on a sewerage system: on whether to borrow $2.5 million to help Brentwood out of the mess in which that district finds itself In every other district each lot has been approved as satisfactory for septic tank disposal. There is contemptuous disregard for the rest of the municipality which has no need to change. Central Saanich has no problem as such.

The Council tells us "this will allow yearly phasing out of the present building restrictions by-law.'

One wonders if Council has been remiss in cases where health hazard has been ignored.

It is hoped that 41 per cent will vote "against".—F. A. Thornley, Saanichton.

Candidates and Snow

In view of the campaign in progress for mayor and aldermen I would recommend a serious consideration by each candidtate of spending the taxpayers' money for proper equipment for handling snow in the squares, streets and sidewalks of this city. Last year this city's handling of snow was a disgrace and a great hardship to many older people. They had to shovel beyond their strength and could get no one to help them.

This equipment would cost money but it would be money well spent.

Last year's discomforts could very well be repeated and for a greater length of time.

Also, let them consider the necessity of increased policing of the squares, particularly Centennial; so that the revolting conditions prevailing up until now are finished with. Extra money spent to maintain order would be money well spent.

To what end new projects when one cannot have freedom to enjoy what the taxpayers have already paid for? First things first. — Mrs. Sybil Blyth, 460 Chester St.

Their Race Track

The protest as expressed by the Victoria Labour Council, regarding death and destruction on the Pat Bay Highway is long overdue. There is nothing wrong with the highway itself — the surface is good, there are no hidden curves and there are adequate areas where slow cars can be passed in safety.

However, no concerted effort has ever been made to enforce normal driving practices and hence a breed of jockeys has developed who treat the highway as their race track. Incidentally, they are not all young nor all of the male sex. There are no speed limits and the solid white line can be crossed with impunity. On the rare occasions when I have seen a police officer on the highway his car was sandwiched in a line of traffic either going to or from Swartz Bay and naturally those in his vicinity were proceeding at a normal rate. What an officer on a motor bicycle would have seen might have been a different story. At least he would have been free to move at will.

I have never yet travelled this highway without being passed on a number of occasions by cars travelling considerably in excess of the speed limit and at times have been thankful that I practise defensive driving. It is what I would recommend to all who travel that route. — A Defensive Driver.

Moon Colony

The Economist

The three were sent to the Ocean of Storms for more than just another lot of rock samples to compare with those collected from the Sea of Tranquillity on that triumphal first landing last July. The planners now want evidence of physical changes taking place on the moon . . . The answers are vital before NASA's planners can get down to the whole and sole point of sending men into space at all: so that the moon and other planets can be colonized for humankind. The first steps towards that have to be pioneering settlements on the moon that could create, in perhaps as little as 25 years (but perhaps, also, as long as 100 years) an artificially maintaineed atmosphere for a cost per acre that would be much the same as the Dutch spend now in reclaiming an acre of land from the sea.

$10 MILLION LOAN TO AID MINE IN B.C.

WASHINGTON (CP) — A $10,000,000 loan to Fording Coal Ltd. to help finance the purchase of U.S. equipment for a coal mine being developed in British Columbia was announced Tuesday by the Export-Import Bank of the United States.

Chairman Henry Kearns said in announcing the authorization that total cost of the project is estimated at $80,000,000, of which some $17,900,000 will be spent for equipment manufactured by U.S. companies.

Incorporated in December, 1968, Fording was established for the development and operation of an open-pit coal mine at a location about 30 miles north of Natal, B.C.

Trucking Control Talks Due

TORONTO (CP) — Transport Minister Donald Jamieson announced Tuesday that a federal-provincial conference on trucking with his provincial counterparts will begin Dec. 2 in Ottawa. Jamieson made the announcement to the Automotive Transport Association Ontario.

Jamieson said the government has decided to recommend early proclamation of Part 3 of the 1967 National Transportation Act.

Part 3 would end the arrangement under which provincial transport boards serve as federal agents in regulating interprovincial and international trucking operations.

"We feel the time has come to begin to assume some of these federal responsibilities in a direct fashion," said the transport minister.

"The purpose of the conference with the provincial ministers next week is to discuss how much and how soon direct administration can be undertaken."

He did not say how much control the government was seeking.

Court Action Delays Hearing On Takeover Bid

TORONTO (CP) — Consumers' Gas Co. has decided again to extend the period for withdrawal of deposited shares in its $250,000,000 takeover of Union Gas Co. of Canada Ltd.

Consumers' president Oakah L. Jones said in a statement the new date to reclaim Union shares is Dec. 12. The company first made an extension Nov. 3 to Dec. 2.

Jones said the extension was necessary to protect the interests of Union shareholders "in view of the actions of a small group who have stalled the scheduled hearing before the Ontario Energy Board by seeking a Supreme Court order prohibiting the board from proceeding."

The board hearing began Monday and was suspended until Friday after it was told the Supreme Court of Ontario would be asked to prohibit further consideration of the takeover until objectors have had time to prepare their case.

Donald Wright, counsel for the city of Chatham and a Chatham-based citizen group, told the hearing he would ask for a writ because the board earlier refused to adjourn the hearing.

Pay 'N' Save

The Seattle-based Pay 'N Save Corp., a regional drug, hardware and department store firm, has reported a record quarterly net income of $522,519 on sales of $19.5 million.

The figures showed increases over the $461,874 and $17 million reported for the corresponding quarter of 1968. The firm, which has outlets in the U.S. northwest and Alaska, showed earnings per common share of 26 cents, an increase of 3 cents over last year's figures.

Weston

Nine-month operations of George Weston Ltd. produced net income of 98 cents a share of $657.8 million, up $177.7 compared with $1.66 counting non-recurring profits of five cents and 91 cents, respectively.

Actual operating income this year was 93 cents, against 75 cents last year, based on sales of $657.8 million, up $177.7 million, and operating income of $10.8 million, up $1.9 million.

Net income for the nine months was $11.38 million, against $18.8 million. The company said its sales gross included Kelly, Douglas and Co. results for the full period, unlike last year.

French Petroleum

Net cash income was higher but net profit per share declined fractionally in the nine months ended Sept. 30, reports French Petroleum of Canada Ltd.

Production income was $2.48 million, against $2.36 million in the period last year, and with investment income the total was $2.6 million, compared with $2.49 million.

After expenses, net profit came to $788,663, down $11,100, or 14 cents a share vs. 14½ cents.

Ponder

Ponder Oils Ltd. and its two wholly-owned subsidiaries had a net income of $177,086 or 6.7 cents a share during the first nine months of 1969.

The Calgary-based company said in a statement that figures are not available for the same period of 1968.

Ponder said that after paying a dividend semi-annually since 1966 it has suspended dividend payments to conserve funds for anticipated drilling commitments outside North America.

Statistical Conflict At Hearing on Gas

OTTAWA (CP) — A public hearing designed to set new national policy for exports of natural gas to the fuel-hungry United States opened Tuesday with a statistical conflict on just how much gas Canada should keep in the next quarter-century.

Debate before the National Energy Board about future domestic requirements began late on opening day of the biggest public policy session on Canada's power resources since a royal commission on energy led to establishment of the national board 10 years ago.

Legal process and procedural tangles took most of the day—one measure of the scope of hearings which are scheduled to settle both long-term export policy and five specific applications that would almost double present gas export commitments to about 9.5 trillion cubic feet up to 1995.

DEBATE STARTS EARLY

The statistical debate emerged as soon as discussion started on what board chairman Robert Howland termed the philosophy of gas export policy. First topic in the general policy argument is "reasonably foreseeable requirements for natural gas for use in Canada."

Consolidated Natural Gas Co. of Calgary, subsidiary of Northern Natural Gas Co. of Omaha, Neb., and a new bidder for export rights, challenged projections of Canada's gas needs made in a study by energy board staff.

The staff study, published two weeks ago, forecast domestic gas needs to 1990. Consolidated presented research by consulting economists David Ross and William Lee of Vancouver indicating lower requirements between now and 1999.

The Ross-Lee study, which they said was projected from more up-to-date statistical signposts than the board study's 1966 base, shows lower annual requirements by a margin that ranges from 105 billion cubic feet in 1975 to 505 billion in 1990.

Total of the five export applications before the board would require 564 billion feet a year to fill, almost double the present rate of exports.

Gold Loses Glitter for Speculators

By HAROLD MORRISON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

The steep decline in the free-market price of gold reflects renewed confidence in paper money. It also raises fresh question about the real value of the yellow metal.

When currencies are under attack, hoarders tend to swing to gold, pushing up prices in panic attempts to hold on to something durable. The rush to buy gold tends to subside when confidence in national currencies returns or when governments indicate they are taking strong measures to ensure that the value of paper money is not eroded.

The puzzling element in the current situation is that while many of the major currencies appear to have been stabilized, erosion of the value of some of these currencies remains a possibility. Inflation is a trans-Atlantic problem though it would appear that, at least in the case of the United States, government policies are designed to restrain inflationary trends even if this means the threat of a mild recession.

NO INTEREST PAID

Combined with this prospect of restraint is the fact that investment in gold does not carry with it the possibility of profit unless the price itself goes up. There are no earnings in interest at a time when interest rates generally are among the highest in history.

Sensing that governments appear to have solved currency problems, at least temporarily, and knowing that national reserves now can be augmented by the "paper gold" of the International Monetary Fund, speculators have been wondering what to do with their gold hoardings.

OFTEN CHALLENGED

Decisions to get what price they can for their holdings may also have been influenced by South Africa's decision to sell a portion of its gold production on the free market, even when prices are steadily declining.

The official price of $35 U.S. an unce has repeatedly been challenged over the years by South Africa, Canada and other gold exporters. It has remained unchanged for more than three decades when prices of other commodities have doubled and trebled. The argument often heard among exporters is that the official price should be between $50 and $70 an ounce.

When the two-tiered price structure was established 18 months ago, the immediate prospect was that the free-market price would reflect the real value of the metal and climb substantially. Now it has dropped to a point where buyers have to be convinced that the free-market price won't fall below the official price.

Current gyrations probably are not a true reflection of what gold may eventually fetch on the open market. A sudden inflationary jolt or even an internal political crisis among some of the leading countries could say another gold stampede.

But at the moment gold has lost its glamour. In terms of price change, other metals, such as nickel, have achieved greater glitter.

Dust Control Chief Named By Neptune

Pollution-conscious Neptune Terminals Ltd., North Vancouver, has appointed its first dust control officer for the firm's bulk shipping depot.

John B. Climo, 44, a science graduate of Auckland University and associate of the New Zealand Institute of Chemistry, will be responsible for seeing that coal and chemical dusts from the terminal are within North Vancouver air pollution requirements.

Neptune plans to open its coal handling facility, worth $7.5 million, early in the new year. It claims to have incorporated the latest in dust-control devices in terminal design.

Climo will be responsible for determining the quantity of moisture needed to suppress dust in the coal handling operation, or which other dust control measure will be used in the terminal, which also will ship potash, salt cake, ammonium sulphate, di-ammonium phosphate and methanol.

Museum Searches High and Low For Clunker

This Is What They Look Like

Has Anybody Got a Streetcar to Hang Up?

By HUMPHRY DAVY

Who would have thought the streetcar, a familiar sight in Victoria only 21 years ago, would become a prized collector's item?

Well, the Provincial Museum is looking for one now, and so are other museums.

●

History curator Daniel P. Gallacher said a streetcar is needed to form part of a proposed collection of vehicles used throughout the history of B.C.

The vehicles would be assembled and stored for future restoration and ultimate display, he said.

"But they are hard to come by," Gallacher said. "I have inspected two on Vancouver Island but they were too far gone to be of much use."

He would like someone to inform him where one can be found.

Gallacher is looking for other vehicles, such as a "Bennett Buggy" and a rum runners' boat.

And what is so important about a "smugglers' boat" in the history of the province?

The history books are mum on the subject, but many family fortunes were made in Victoria and Vancouver by smuggling booze to the United States during the days of prohibition in the 1920s.

Many of them plowed their profits back into local businesses.

●

The "Bennett Buggy" is more familiar to residents of the Interior. It was named after Prime Minister R. B. Bennett who had the tough job of running the country during the "great depression."

Some farmers were so hard up they couldn't afford gas for their cars. So they took out the engine and dismantled the hood and hitched the body or coach to a horse.

Gallacher also hopes to acquire, in time, a 1940 warplane, an old taxi, a truck used in the 1920s, and various types of internal combustion engines.

"A decade would be symbolized by a particular vehicle when setting up an exhibition of a particular period," he explained. "They will all be needed with time."

"Many things in use today will be antiques in a few years," he added. "Changes take place quickly these days."

A B.C. Hydro official, who had a lot to do with the disposal of the street cars, didn't think there was much chance of finding one in this area.

●

"The better ones were sold for less than $100 for use as summer camps," he said. "I imagine most of these have now been replaced by summer cottages."

He said the older cars were burned and the metal sold to Capital Iron Ltd., Store St.

He said a U.S. contractor bought the rails.

Fee for NFB Films Distresses Educators

Educators and social workers today were distressed by a federal government decision to charge for National Film Board films.

"The films produced by the board play an important part in the education of young and elderly people," said Dr. C. P. Jameson, chairman of the Greater Victoria School Board. "Everything should be done to promote their distribution, not restrict their use."

The rate structure for films, now loaned out free to various organizations, is expected to be announced next month and go into effect on the first of the year. It was indicated that six short films of 10 minutes each might rent for as high as $24.

The charge, as well as a reduction of NFB staff, is part of the government's austerity plan.

DOUBLE CHARGE

On a per capita basis, Canadians pay 33 cents a year for the NFB film service.

Father Patrick Ratchford, in charge of the Sir Thomas More Centre, said the low income groups which make use of the films for education and entertainment will suffer most.

"I also object to being taxed for the service and paying as well a user's fee," he said. "A small nominal charge would not be objectionable, but that doesn't seem to be the plan."

He said welfare groups will not be able to afford films if there is a charge and will be cut off from an important communication and educational resource.

"NFB films is an important resource venture and helps continuing education," he said. "In Newfoundland, they have done much to help various communities understand one another—they brought together communities which had never spoken to one another.

He said NFB also had performed important work among the Indians.

1,000 FILMS MONTHLY

NFB, which operates a library and theatre at 811 Wharf Street, loans out about 1,000 films a month to various organizations.

An NFB official estimated about 30,000 people a month view the films. The figure did not include school children since schools usually buy NFB films and run their own libraries.

Public reaction to a charge for the educational service has been so strong that school board officials have decided to hold an open house on Dec. 29, 30 and 31 and to show—free of charge—any film requested by visitors.

It will be held at the board's theatre.

Opposition to the charge came mostly from low income groups which already have difficulty making ends.

Mrs. Catherine Horne, executive director of Silver Threads, said the fee is "unfair."

Yarrows, VMD Face Help Lack

A heavy work load, including a number of new contracts, is quickly drying up the supply of skilled labor in Victoria shipyards and heavy industry.

Both Yarrows, Ltd., and Victoria Machinery Depot, which now have enough work to cary them to the end of July, are searching for workers.

Yarrows, which laid off hundreds of men over the summer, has $5.75 million worth of contracts, creating the need over a period of time for 100 more men.

VMD has gone as far as to advertise for men on the prairies.

The $3.3 million refit of the destroyer-escort HMCS Gatineau at HMC Dockyard in Esquimalt is one reason why private operations face a shortage of qualified tradesmen.

The dockyard has taken on between 300 and 400 men for the job.

HAVING TROUBLE

Yarrows' general manager John Wallace said many of the men his firm laid off found new jobs right away, and aren't available now.

So far, he said the demand for skilled labor has been met by hiring new people. However, his company is having trouble finding machinists and engine-fitters, and will soon need electricians and pipefitters.

The bulk of the demand is for welders and iron workers.

Canada Manpower and the trade unions are working with the companies in attempts to fill vacancies, Wallace said.

Harold Husband, VMD president, said his company is bidding for more contracts. "We want to keep our order book as full as possible."

He needs 25 machinists and welders. They have advertised on the prairies for men, but would prefer people living in Victoria, "our old employees if possible."

Husband said many of them have come back after the company canvassed the area.

Husband said the company, now out of the shipbuilding business, is seeking every alternative and opportunity for industry in Victoria.

The demand for skilled men shows that the new emphasis is working, he said.

WALLACE
. . . won't be easy

Yarrows' Wallace said there will be difficulties if the increase in available men doesn't match the gradual buildup of work. It won't be easy to find men in other parts of the country and bring them in, he said, because similar shortage also exist throughout Canada.

George Bevis, manager of Manpower's Victoria branch, said his people are checking the local labor supply to see if it will be sufficient.

A campaign to bring people into Victoria to work would be a last resort, Bevis said.

Manpower will make sure that all qualified people are working and then step up training programs to improve partially qualified people, before taking that step.

Wallace and Husband said they are not doing any training other than the normal apprenticeship program. Wallace said it takes five years to train an apprentice, and work at Yarrow's is not steady enough to keep a man in training that long, creating a shortage of apprentices there.

FROM THE HEART, a healthy Florenda Joy Dick presents a $3,857.88 cheque to Dr. A. C. Pickles, Royal Jubilee Hospital administrator. The six-year-old's life was saved early this year by heart surgery at the Mayo Clinic in Rochester, Minn. It was financed through a comunity drive spearheaded by Times columnist Arthur Mayse. The cheque, representing surplus funds, will be used to buy equipment to treat heart disease at Jubilee. With Florenda is her mother, Mrs. David Dick, 355 Gorge Road.

Too Many People Trip Project Learning Start

By BOB MITCHELL

Just about everyone who attended the first Project Learning meeting at Esquimalt Senior Secondary Tuesday agreed it is time to determine the over-all aims of the education system.

They seemed to accept the proposition that change in society is inevitable and necessary, and that change in education is long overdue.

They even agreed that schools should be places where students can develop as individuals in a non-regimented learning environment.

But they ran into a stumbling block when it came to deciding which members of the public should represent the Esquimalt group on one of six zone committees to determine the aims of education.

Thirty-three of the 100 persons who attended the meeting indicated they would like to participate on the committee. But then they learned only four places were available on each committee, the rest being taken by students, teachers, trustees and administrators.

WIENS
. . . hits insularity

Only a Handful of Teachers

More than one-quarter of the attendance was made up of high school students, with not more than a handful of teachers.

Dr. John Wiens, director of instruction for the Greater Victoria school board and the person mainly responsible for launching Project Learning, said while not everyone can participate on a committee, they can contribute by communicating to their representatives on the committees.

Several people said the degree of interest shown by the Tuesday turnout justified increasing the number of zone committees to give everyone a chance to contribute directly.

The matter was finally resolved when it was decided to accept the committee structure as originally proposed.

The meeting opened with a talk by Dr. Wiens who outlined some of the reasons why Project Learning had been born. He said the aims of education have never been seriously questioned, with the result that ideals are in conflict with actual practice in the schools.

"I think we have lost sight of our educational objectives when we ask our children the question when they come home from school: 'What mark did you get on the exam?' rather than 'What did you learn?' "

Dr. Wiens displayed on a screen colored circles representing groups such as students, parents, teachers and trustees. He said the tendency is for the groups to become insular, with the result that communication between them is lost.

The only time they do come together is during a conflict, and then they clash rather than harmonize.

To illustrate he read a sentence from a letter written by an American high school student to his principal:

"Why do we have to disrupt something to get anybody to listen to us seriously?"

Dr. Wiens concluded:

"One of the reasons we want to have students on these committees is that students in this school ten years from now will have children attending school."

The second public meeting will take place tonight at 8 p.m. in Reynolds junior secondary.

WORKMAN KILLED AS LOAD TOPPLES

A 22-year-old construction worker was killed this morning at an Esquimalt apartment site when a slingload of particle board slipped and swept him off a third floor balcony.

His name has not been released as next of kin are being notified.

Esquimalt police said the man was with two other workers, employed by Capital Builders Ltd., on the balcony of an apartment site at 1337 Saunders about 9:10 a.m. He was helping unload 50 sheets of particle board from a mobile crane sling.

He was cutting a metal band on the particle board when the load tipped and swept him off the balcony. The load landed on top of him.

Nine Contractors To Bid on Pool

Nine major contractors in Victoria and Vancouver are preparing bids on the city's new swimming pool.

Ed Phillips, executive director of the Amalgamated Construction Association regional branch, said interest in the pool and the response of contractors is excellent.

"When you get nine majors bidding you invariably provide a much broader base which can only benefit the owner."

Five of the firms studying plans are local, four are from Vancouver.

The sub-trade deadline for submissions is 4 p.m. Dec. 8. The deadline for general contractors is noon, Dec. 11.

Phillips said the reason for the great interest in the project was "ideal timing."

"City officials approached ACA some time ago to ask our assistance in finding the best bidding period," Phillips said. "We suggested this particular time because normally at this time of the year there is a bit of a sag in the construction industry."

The $1.6 million project is scheduled for construction as soon as the final bid is awarded.

Construction could be delayed if the bids come in higher than the estimated $1.6 million.

With the bulk of the money coming from the McPherson Estate trust fund, city council members have indicated that they will not go above the estimated cost.

The pool is to be built in Central Park as a replacement for the Crystal Garden.

Ask The Times

Q. What is the word meaning fear of empty spaces? And also the word meaning fondness of books? — Mrs. A. M.

A. The first one's easy — agoraphobia. The second depends on how far your "fondness" goes. If the fondness reaches a preoccupation, call it bibliomania. If it goes as far as worship, call the result bibliolatry. If you hide or hoard your books, you are a bibliotaphe. But what you're looking for is probably the word that simply means love of books for their rare and good qualities — bibliophilism.

APPEAL DRIVE TURNS TO ANSWERING SERVICE

United Red Feather - Red Cross Appeal organizers are making it as simple as possible to give if you haven't already.

Their latest idea is a 24-hour telephone answering service that started today.

Anyone who hasn't been canvassed can phone 385-6708 any time, day or night, and a United Appeal worker will contact them the next day.

The service will continue until the campaign ends Dec. 13.

This year's fund drive is $94,000 short of the $694,000 target.

Last year at this time the drive for $655,000 was trailing by $40,000.

Arthur Mayse . . .

IT IS A MATTER OF historical record that the Puritans of early New England banned Christmas observance as heathenish, and busted any scofflaw who so much as whistled a carol. I wouldn't go that far, but it's high time we restored The Season to Be Jolly to its rightful place in the calendar.

As matters now stand, the Ghost of Christmas Yet to Come begins its haunting no later than October. Before that month is done, the careless shopper may find that the greeting card he snatched up in haste reads "Merry Christmas" instead of a "Happy Birthday" or "Get Well Soon."

By November, the contagion is spreading fast. It is both virulent and sneaky.

The other evening, for instance, I surprised my wife and myself by asking, "What would you like for Christmas?"

"What I'd like," she said, "is to go back to September, when nobody was asking that question."

"Sorry," I said. "It just kind of slipped out."

"It's been too short a year," Win said. "Something's happened to a month. I'm definitely not ready for Christmas, I don't even want to think about it. But you can't escape it."

She was right. Once we did have an autumn period of grace before the big push began. During those weeks, we weren't required to plan anything more important than a final cutting of the lawn between damp spells, or what to do with the next weekend. If we'd seen anything Christmasy in a store, we would merely have assumed that someone had forgotten to take it down and stow it away the previous January.

★

But that was then, and as our grey-on-grey television screen was busily reminding us, Christmas no longer comes but once a year.

Against a background of quaint old-fashioned toys no doubt carved by gnomes in the Black Forest, the commercial offered a rundown of the latest under-the-tree gifts for children.

You can bet that even now in November a lot of kids are hoping for one or other of those costly playthings, as who can blame them. They also help explain why many a parent will still be paying off the Ghost of Christmas Past when next March brings the daffodils.

★

If Yule preparations begin too soon, by the same token, the aftermath lasts too long.

I was enlarging on that theme when Win spoke from behind one of those high-colored advertising inserts that this daily's mechanized gnomes occasionally tuck into your paper.

"I remember once you told me you'd never learned to play pool," she said.

True. As a son of the manse, I'd been gloomily certain that some lynx-eyed congregation member would spot me for sure if I slunk into a pool hall, and pass the word that the minister's boy had taken the road to hell. Later, I was ashamed to admit ignorance. But the idea of taking cue in hand has always been accompanied by a delightful sense of sin to be indulged when the time was ripe.

My dear one listened patiently to this explanation. Then she said, "You know, we could give ourselves a pool table for Christmas."

"Now you're doing it," I pointed out.

"I didn't mean to," Win said. "I guess it's a conditioned reflex."

★

That it is, but I don't think we can place the entire blame for the rushing of the season on manufacturers and merchants eager to reap a rich harvest. It could be that the spirit of modern man yearns ahead to the time when, in theory if not always in fact, peace and goodwill prevail on earth.

After all, when else except on Christmas Eve or Christmas Day can you smile at a passing stranger without getting a suspicious glance, or at best a nod with the thought behind it, "now where did I meet him before?"

Even so, it's possible that we could be helping to kill off the year's best-loved festival by the double process of making it far too costly, and stretching it out too thin.

By this time, the evening was getting on, and tireless TV was occupied with another Christmas-oriented commercial.

"Of course," I said, "there are some things that have to be started early. Like your Christmas cakes." That was a hint, and I followed it with another. "How many did you make this year?"

"None," Win said cheerfully. "And when I do make them, I'm going to hide them. That way, maybe I'll save them from some people in this house who can't wait 'till Christmas."

That, come to think of it, is now a mere 25 shopping days away, and what's the use of fighting it any longer?

Natural Gas Export Hearings Very High-Priced Operation

By CARL MOLLINS

OTTAWA (CP) — By almost any measure, public examination of national policy on the export of natural gas is a big-money affair.

Most components of the hearings that opened Tuesday before the National Energy Board carried hefty price tags and established Canadian records of scale.

The hearings are designed both to establish a policy for guidance of the board in allocating gas for export and to deal with five specific applications for licences to pipe more gas to the demanding United States market.

Whatever the outcome on the main issues, cracked one participant at the close of the first day, one result could be an increase in the selling price of gas because of the cost of the hearings alone.

Documentation was only the most obvious of the features with an implicitly-high price. The army of about 50 lawyers on hand was another, not to mention such sideline expenses as same-day transcripts in scores of copies of every jot and tittle of legal argument.

Nobody would attempt to put a total price on proceedings that show every sign of stretching into next year.

One company president commented that while it makes him go pale to think what his lawyers and expert witnesses are costing—one counsel was said to be a $500-a-day man and most experts are ferried from Western gas country—he almost faints when he contemplates the cost of compiling the formal application for the export licence.

The applicants were asked by the board to submit evidence on the general philosophy of export policy—how to calculate reserves, domestic needs, surplus for export, price and other factors—in addition to supporting their particular bids for licences.

That involves hiring economists, engineers and other experts to add to the proliferation of studies, tables, charts and maps that fill carton boxes, spill from desks and strain secretarial-arm ligaments in the crowded hearing room.

It took 3½ hours Tuesday just for the laywers to announce their presence formally, to name which one of more than 30 intervening companies, associations or governments they represented and to table their documents as official exhibits.

When the parade to the microphones was through, there were 72 official exhibits. Counting sub-numbers, there were 127 separate documents.

The present voluminous applications tend to be shots in the dark in some senses. Because the board combined the hearing on general philosophy with specific licence applications, the applicants could hardly trim bids to policy because the policy is unknown.

Argument Tuesday featured a half-hour tangle because the main contenders were divided on interpretation of exactly what they were supposed to be presenting on the first of the many agenda issues.

While the costs in money, time and byway argument thus are likely to climb steeply, the stakes also are big.

Farm Adjustments 'Misunderstood'

By HENRY HEALD

OTTAWA (CP) — There is widespread misunderstanding in the farm community of the basic economic realities affecting the rate of adjustment within Canadian agriculture and the rewards involved, Darrel H. Plaunt, an agricultural economist, said Tuesday.

The rate of adjustment can be stepped up to develop strong farms which share in the benefits of a growing economy, Dr. Plaunt told the annual agricultural outlook conference.

A former professor at Guelph University, Dr. Plaunt came here recently as director of the farm management division of the federal agriculture department's economics branch. But he stressed Tuesday that he was speaking as an individual economist and not as a departmental representative.

He said there had never been a time when the need for adjustment in the agricultural industry was so great. Nor had there been a time when the levels of employment and prosperity in other sectors of the economy were in better shape to absorb the changes.

Dr. Plaunt spoke against the background of a survey which showed that only 174,000 of Canada's 430,000 farmers could live adequately on the $4,300,000,000 that form the annual cash receipts for farmers.

ADD TO ECONOMY

Looking at the positive side of it, Dr. Plaunt said 100,000 farmers leaving farms which paid them $1,500 a year and taking jobs where they earned $4,500 a year would contribute $300,000,000 more each year to the national economy.

But policies to increase the withdrawal from agriculture must be balanced by those designed to increase the adjustment within agriculture.

Policies such as early-retirement annuities, retraining, relocation grants, credit facilities to assist the move off the farm and information on non-farm employment must be balanced by schemes to increase the managerial skills of those who stay on the farm, increase the availability of credit, decrease risks through insurance and assistance for farm consolidation.

Dr. Plaunt said the main thing is to avoid "panic policies" based on solving the problems of an individual commodity.

First-War Veteran Dies at 77

Funeral services were held today at McCall's Floral Chapel for Walter John (Jack) Smith, 1123 Pandora, a colorful participant in Victoria Day parades for 20 years.

During those years no parade would have been complete without the sight of Smith, dressed in immaculate morning clothes, his handlebar moustaches waxed, riding a huge old-fashioned tandem bicycle.

FINAL PARADE

Smith's last parade was in 1965 when, unable to pedal the complete route, he had one of his sons arrange a truck to carry him and his mount.

A member of the Old Contemptibles, Smith served in the Grenadier Guards before the First World War, joining the Duke of Cornwall's Light Infantry on the outbreak of hostilities.

Born in Essex, England, in 1892, he emigrated to Canada with his wife, Emily, and family in 1929.

HERE IN 1938

They lived in Edmonton until 1938 when they came to Victoria and Smith became an inspector for the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals.

He started his own cartage business (Smith's Cartage) in 1943, retiring in 1962 at the age of 70.

A member of Britannia Branch No. 7, Royal Canadian Legion, he attended the recent Remembrance Day parade at the Cenotaph.

Smith is survived by his wife; four sons, William, Thomas and Gordon of Victoria, and Walter, Vancouver; two daughters, Mrs. K. (Queenie) Conrad of Hope and Mrs. A. (Joan) Glante of Monessen, Penn. There are 14 grandchildren and three great-grandchildren.

Burial was at the Veterans' Cemetary.

Elk Member 50 Years

Percy Fitzsimmons, who joined Victoria Lodge 2 of the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks in 1919, was honored recently by the lodge for 50 years of continuous membership.

Fitzsimmons, former managing director of Empire Realty, was presented a pen by Exalted Ruler Morley MacDonald.

A well-known former local athlete, Fitzsimmons has held every post in the local lodge including Exalted Ruler, in 1942, 1943, and 1951.

At 78 years of age he still attends lodge meetings regularly and is president of the inter-club snooker club.

To Elminate 11,371 Jobs

OTTAWA (CP) — Treasury board figures tabled in a Commons committee Tuesday show the government squeeze on public service employment announced last August will have eliminated 11,371 jobs by March 31, 1971.

Treasury Board President C. M. Drury gave the expected figure of discontinued jobs as "more than 10,000", on Oct. 31 during the throne debate.

In presenting the schedule to the miscellaneous affairs committee Tuesday, Sylvain Cloutier, assistant secretary for the board's program branch, said the reduction in "allowable continuing employees" will be largely effected through vacancies not filled, rather than by layoffs.

NEW CIVILIAN SLAUGHTER REPORTED TO PENTAGON

'Villagers Slain for Practice'

CIVILIANS SAFE

WASHINGTON (WP) — Legal experts in Washington have concluded on the basis of two Supreme Court decisions that a civilian cannot be tried by a military court.

It would follow, therefore, that those accused in participating in the alleged massacre at My Lai village on March 16, 1968, who are no longer in the armed forces would not be liable for military prosecution.

Oil Drilling Ruled Out

By JOHN MIKA

Fisheries Minister Jack Davis today said he expects oil companies to drop plans of exploring Juan de Fuca Strait and the Gulf of Georgia because of his warning that oil drilling would be vetoed.

He made the statement to the Times in a telephone interview from Ottawa, emphasizing that the Gulf Islands would be preserved as a recreational area because of overwhelming economic considerations.

'Banned As Long As I'm Here'

He said his department would ban drilling in the sheltered waters between Vancouver Island and the mainland for the "forseeable future" — then added that meant so long as he was minister.

He said that some future minister "might fall back" from that position but he would not because he could not visualize any circumstances that would alter the clear indication that drilling would conflict with public interest.

He revealed that seismic exploration was completed last month in Juan de Fuca as well as continuing in Georgia Strait.

The Juan de Fuca operation was carried out by Tenneco Oil & Minerals, Ltd., a Canadian subsidiary of a major oil exploration company which also is conducting tests off Newfoundland and Labrador.

Seismic Tests Not Harmful

Davis said the Texaco Oil Company is carrying out Georgia Strait seismic work and Canadian Pacific Oil and Gas Company, an affiliate of the Canadian Pacific Railway, has completed its program. Union Oil Company also has carried out seismic tests in sheltered areas off the Queen Charlottes.

Davis said the seismic tests, which do not involve underwater explosions in modern techniques, were permitted because they are not harmful but drilling was another matter entirely.

"All the seismic permit work was to be completed in 1969 and whether they've got any (oil) indications or not, they've been given fair warning now.

"I would estimate the companies have spent about $500,000 so far but I doubt that there would be much more money spent in view of the warning."

He said the situation was made clear during a question period Tuesday in the House of Commons when Mines, Energy and Resources Minister J. J. Greene re-iterated that no drilling permits would be issued without the normal routine of obtaining the fisheries department's recommendation.

During the House of Commons question period, Davis said that he and Greene had agreed "no drilling permits will be granted as long as there is any danger, not only to the sports and commerical fisheries, but also to the entire ecology of that (Gulf Islands) area."

Danger to Sport Fishing

Davis told the Times that his department had studied the matter carefully and determined there was a decided danger posed by oil drilling to the commercial and sports fishery valued at about $300 million a year.

This has resulted in a decision to recommend rejection if any oil company applies for drilling permit and Davis said he had been "assured by Mr. Greene" the fisheries' department advice would be followed.

"This amounts to a veto power although we have no jurisdictional veto," he said.

"We're not rejecting offshore drilling out of hand," he said. "For instance, if oil was found on the Grand Banks of Newfoundland, that would be great boost to the economy of the Atlantic region.

"So, it's a matter of assessing the relative values.

"The Gulf Islands are essentially a recreational or park area. (Allowing inshore drilling) is like having an oil well in Banff National Park. It makes no sense."

Davis said the possibility of discovering a relatively minor oil basin under the straits would not bring lower oil prices to consumers and would offer "the possible gain of only a small number of jobs."

But, on the other side, it could disturb the lucrative recreational value of the area and even destroy a good part of it if an oil well leak developed.

"What's the recreational value of the gulf with a scum of oil on it?" he asked.

The minister said upwards of $100 million annually is involved in the area's commercial fishery but most people did not realize this was the smaller item.

"The sports fishery is worth at least double that," he said. "And then there's the problem of navigation (posed by oil rigs and possible leakages in a major seaway.)"

Davis said the possible economic benefits of developing an inshore oil industry weighted against its cost to the public is totally unbalanced and demands rejection.

"There's just no question that the public interest would say this risk (of oil pollution) is not worth taking, even if it was only a one-in-a-hundred

DRUG SENTENCES CUT TO 2 YEARS

CALGARY (CP) — The Appeal Court of Alberta today reduced stiff sentences previously given to five young marijuana and hashish traffickers and set new guidelines for future sentencing.

In an unanimous written decision, the three-man court decided that sentences not exceeding two years are "sufficient deterrent" to prevent persons from trafficking.

Air Tax Plan Called 'Stupid'

OTTAWA (CP) — The Commons moved the country closer Tuesday to an air-fare user tax over a chorus of criticism, including flat rejection of the idea by the New Democratic Party.

Members of the Conservative Opposition tended to snipe at the tax as discriminatory. Meanwhile Max Saltsman (Waterloo), the NDP financial critic, said his group could not vote for it because it was a cover-up for a stupid air policy.

In his view, that policy had permitted the growth of privately-owned Canadian Pacific Air Lines to a major competitor to publicly-owned Air Canada. Had Air Canada been left in a monopoly position, it would have made enough money to make the user tax unnecessary.

The tax, designed to help build and operate airports, was given voice-vote second reading. It will be examined later by the House, clause by clause, before third and final reading.

It would impose a five-percent charge on all tickets sold for domestic flights and trips to the U.S. and the French islands of St. Pierre-Miquelon off the Canadian East Coast. A head-tax ranging from two to five dollars is in store for other overseas flights, under the amendment to the excise tax act.

Asked to Mediate

Germ-Junking Safety Problem

By Times News Services

How do you destroy—safely—the "bucketsful" of U.S. military germ stocks?

This is the question facing defence department officials following Wednesday's order by President Nixon to destroy all germ warheads.

Defence officials say the junking will require elaborate safety precautions that may stretch the disposal operation over several months.

The same officials express hope that elimination of germ warfare components can be completed "well within the year." The health department will assist in the operation.

The highly poisonous nature, rather than the volume, of biological stocks is the main problem, say officials.

NOT TEARGAS

In other developments concerning biological weapons:

● Diplomats in the United Nations handling disarmament negotiations enthusiastically welcomed Nixon's statement.

Mixed with the enthusiasm, however, was regret that Nixon's renunciation of "first use of incapacitating chemicals" apparently did not extend to the military employment of tear gas in warfare, or the use of herbicides.

● Britain's minister of state for disarmament, Lord Chalfont, praised the statement as "making it easier to achieve" multilateral agreement on the control of chemical and biological weapons.

The U.S. defence department has not yet stripped the secret label from documents showing how much bacteria there is to destroy, but sources speak in terms of "bucketsful" and pounds, rather than tons.

However, as little as a thimbleful of such lethal bacteria as anthrax or plague is capable of killing thousands of persons over a wide area.

Investigation Launched

Times News Services

WASHINGTON—The Pentagon today is investigating an alleged second mass murder of unarmed South Vietnamese civilians by American soldiers according to a member of the House of Representatives.

"In brief, it is a shocking report of a company commander of the Ninth Infantry who ordered his men to use village huts for target practice," Rep. Lionel Van Deerlin (D—Cal.) said today.

"When the occupants came streaming out of the huts they were shot down, many of them in the same manner as we've been told occurred at Song My." (Song My is also known as My Lai.)

New Incident In Mekong Delta

He said the alleged slaughter of civilians by Americans, similar in many aspects to an incident in March of 1968 which has resulted in charges of murder being laid against First Lieut. William J. Calley Jr., took place last summer in the Mekong Delta area. The village, he said, is known as Dong Tam.

Van Deerlin said an army medical captain reported the incident after he had heard about it from an orderly who claimed to have witnessed the murders.

Defence department investigators, he said, have talked with the officer.

Van Deerlin said there was no report of the number of casualties and he would not reveal the names of the company or the company commander involved.

He said the medical captain first reported the alleged incident to his parents, who informed Van Deerlin. Subsequent to the My Lai incident, he said, he passed the information to the Pentagon.

The White House today issued an official statement on the alleged massacres, calling them "abhorrent to the conscience of all the American people."

Press Secretary Ronald L. Ziegler, making it clear he spoke for President Nixon and the administration, said steps "will be taken to assure that the illegal and immoral conduct, as alleged, will be dealt with in accordance with the strict rules of military justice."

Army Secretary Stanley Resor, who is testifying today before Senate and House Representatives committees on the alleged My Lai massacre of March, 1968, is almost sure to be quizzed on the Dong Tam incident as well. Army general counsel Robert Jordan will appear with Resor before the Senate armed services committee and afterward before the House investigating subcommittee.

LAIRD WAS SHOCKED

Defence Secretary Melvin Laird said in congressional testimony released Tuesday night that he was shocked and sickened when the allegations of the 20-month-old Pinkville massacre came to his attention seven months ago.

Pinkville was the code name given to the area where the reported massacre occurred because it was predominantly Viet Cong territory.

Laird said he ordered an immediate investigation which, a Pentagon spokesman said, led to charges of premeditated murder being brought against Lieut. William L. Calley. Calley, accused of killing at least 109 South Vietnamese, will face a general court martial at Fort Benning, Ga., in January.

'Tear a Man's Guts' With False Charges

Lands Minister Ray Williston today defended Deputy Minister David Borthwick in an emotion-charged encounter with reporters in the Legislative Buildings corridor.

"You tear a man's guts out," he said.

"You destroy a man by inference and you never pull him back," he said angrily.

"It's a lousy, stinking, stupid business."

Williston said "it just about tore me" the way he had been approached with questions Tuesday about Borthwick's ownership of shares in BrenMac Mines Ltd. which he acquired in a syndicate with Charles Eadie, a promoter of the Cypress Bowl development.

NOTHING IMPROPER

He denied that there is anything improper about Borthwick's being a business associate of Eadie providing that they are not associated in ventures relating to Borthwick's official duties as deputy minister.

He said there is no question that Borthwick had behaved properly.

Was his job as deputy in danger?

"Absolutely not," said Williston.

His voice charged with anger, Williston said that The Vancouver Sun, which initiated the current controversy over the recreational development in West Vancouver would "destroy anybody to get at the government."

The technique is to publish parallel pieces of information and letting the public say "aha" to a connection that is imagined between the two.

"It doesn't matter what he does now," Williston said of Borthwick. "He can't retrieve his position."

OWN INTERESTS

He said that if reporters really believed in what they were doing they would declare their own interests in stocks and other matters before writing stories about them.

He shouted at one reporter who asked if it wasn't unfortunate that a deputy minister of lands should be a business associate of people doing business with his department

Williston Orders Halt to Bowl Logging

By BRUCE YEMEN

Logging in West Vancouver's "Cypress Bowl" has been halted on orders issued this morning by Lands Minister Ray Williston.

The confused and controversial bowl development was blown into new prominence with a series of developments in the last 48 hours.

Williston ordered the logging halt after receiving a letter from West Vancouver Mayor Alex Forst, a long-time supporter of the proposed recreation scheme.

Williston said Tuesday he had mistakenly misled reporters Monday when he said that no leases had been signed with Alpine Outdoor Recreation Resources Ltd. in the recreational development in West Vancouver.

Williston also released a letter which appeared to conflict with his earlier statements that he wasn't aware of proposed development details for Cypress Bowl or of the foreign company that Alpine had brought into the development.

Deputy Lands Minister David Borthwick denied there is any connection between a mining company in which he holds shares and the Cypress Bowl development.

Allan Williams, Liberal MLA for West Vancouver-Howe Sound, switched his earlier position in favor of the development and demanded that it be stopped.

NDP House Leader Dave Barrett called for a judicial inquiry into the entire matter.

Williston said he had been speaking of specific final approval of Alpine's right to develop more than 600 acres of crown land when he said Monday that no leases had been signed.

The leases had in fact been signed by Borthwick and Charles Eadie, managing director of Alpine, in October.

Eadie was a director of Lakeland Base Metals Ltd. in which Borthwick, questioned Tuesday, said he had held 10,000 to 12,000 shares which had been exchanged for the same number of shares of BrenMac Mining Ltd. when Lakeland folded up. He also holds a number of shares in escrow.

Eadie, who is also a director of BrenMac, is the only possible link between the two companies and the Cypress Bowl development, Borthwick said, denying that Lakeland or BrenMac has anything to do with Cypress Bowl.

Williston, after expressing apparent surprise when informed of Borthwick's shareholdings, said he saw nothing wrong with it, adding that it would be a different matter if Borthwick were an employee of the mines department.

Borthwick said he saw nothing wrong with his mining holdings, and added:

"If there is, half of the civil service would have to. . . ."

He didn't finish the sentence.

Williston, who visited the legislative press gallery with Borthwick shortly after being asked about the matter, said
